WHY NEBRASKA HAS NEED OF NEW SEAL

President Williams Finds Sheaves of Wheat the Only Feature Representative of Nebraska.
George A. Williams, president of the state seal commission, tells of the hopes of the commission and of its desire to obtain suggestions from the people and the press for a new state seal and state motto and the probability of a prize for the three best designs. In regard to the outgrowth of the original state seal and the reasons why a new design should be adopted Mr. Williams said:
"The state seal commission, appointed by the governor under the provisions of house roll 571, passed by the last legislature, feels it has a responsibility of considerable importance to discharge. While a great deal of sentiment attaches to the state seal, yet it is not a matter of sentiment only, for the great seal of the state of Nebraska should be recognized, as is stated in section 4 of the law (house roll 571), as 'emblematic of the history, existence, sovereignty and power of the state.' To meet these provisions, the seal must, in its symbolic expression, combine the spiritual with the material, that it may in miniature set forth the 'history, existence, sovereignty and power of the state.'
"The old seal, while it was a splendid creation in the early history of the state, is now antiquated and, in fact, obsolete. The man with the anvil does not fittingly represent the industry and labor of the state.
"The river and steamboat do not in the least symbolize transportation. The log cabin spells nothing, while the mountains in the background, which fifty years ago represented the boundary of civilization, have no significance today. There is not a feature of the present seal, however much it stood for in the past, that fitly speaks of the modern Nebraska, save the sheaves of wheat.
"There is so much in the great commonwealth of Nebraska in the way of history, production, industry and power that might and of right should be incorporated within the small compass of the proposed new seal that the commission feels it has undertaken a great responsibility in its endeavors to secure a design for the state seal that will really be emblematic of all that Nebraska is today, and at the same time meet with the approval of the people of the state.
"The commission invites the help of the press and the people of the state in the way of suggestions. What does Nebraska stand for today and what should be incorporated in the seal that will symbolize the biggest and best of Nebraska? Should the present motto be retained, or could an improvement be made on the present one, 'Equality before the Law'?
"We trust there will be an animated response both on the part of the people and the press to supply the commission with ideas and suggestions, all of which will receive its most careful consideration. Communications may be addressed to any member of the commission. It is hoped also that there will be an animated discussion of the subject through the medium of the press."

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

Our old friend, Charles L. Graves, the Union attorney, informs us that the Otoe county lawyers are feeling that they have a pretty fast baseball team and have intimated strongly that they can defeat any team that the Cass county followers of Blackstone can get up. This may be so but we have our serious doubts after looking over the splendid array of material that comprises the Cass county barristers. Judge Beeson, once famous as the catcher of the leas in a terrible contest with the fats, Judge Begley, County Attorney Cole, A. H. Duxbury, Joe Capwell, W. A. Robertson, Matthew Gering, W. G. Kisek, C. E. Martin, D. O. Dwyer, Charles Graves and William Deles. Dernier ought to furnish an aggregation that would make the Otoe county battlers look sick. Judge Jessen has charge of the Nebraska City team and is feeling mighty confident that his team is the best ever and it is hoped that the two teams can get together in the near future.

fore the accident the machine was seen hovering low over Heraldsburg, apparently in distress and making for the landing field. A few yards from the field the plane was seen to crash and burst into flames.
Fairbanks and Hudson were married.

MAKING SOME COMPLAINT

The residents near the vicinity of the Burlington tracks at the foot of Wintersteen Hill have been uttering a loud and vigorous protest over the fact that the railroad company had switched several cars that had been used to contain slop and refuse matter down in that locality. The cars gave off a very noticeable odor and the passersby as well as the residents of that locality were greeted by a smell that was far worse than the South Omaha stock yards.

SMALL ARRIVES AT HIS STATE CAPITAL

Sheriff Declares He will Serve His Warrant—Attorney Thought to Have a New Plan

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 8.—The indicted governor of Illinois arrived at the state capital today.
Governor Len Small, charged with juggling millions in state funds while serving as state treasurer, came by automobile from his home in Kankakee to Sangamon county where Sheriff Mester has warrants for his arrest.
Small has been away from the executive offices for nearly two weeks. He left when Judge Elbert Smith ruled the governor was not above arrest. Since that time Small has been touring the state roads with his "capital" on wheels.
The governor, when he arrived, announced he would be at the executive offices at 10 a. m. ready to transact state business. Sheriff Mester was expected to phone the governor, notifying the executive that warrants for arrest are in his possession. Inquires at the executive mansion drew a denial that the state executive is in Springfield but those connected with the family admitted he would be at the executive offices between 10 and 10:30 a. m.
Secrecy apparently was thrown about the governor's movements to forestall any attempt of Sheriff Mester to arrest him on his way from the executive mansion to his office in the capitol building.

"I expect Governor Small to walk in and give bond today," the sheriff said. "I won't make any attempt to rush him and will give him plenty of time to prepare. However, if the state executive remains here until Friday you may take it for granted the warrants will be served. How, I have not decided."
The sheriff said he would seek an appointment if the state executive does not appear personally today.
The belief prevails about the sheriff's and state's attorney's office that Small's lawyers have something up their sleeve to pull on the sheriff when the warrants are served.
Attorney James M. Graham and George B. Gillespie who have been retained by Governor Small, visited the county clerk's office and checked up on the sheriff's bond. They refused to state why they wanted this information.
