Well, which is the more satisfactory? To be a union man, loyal and true to his organization, without a job, or a non-union man, loyal and true to his convictions, with a job?

Fiction led in the production of books in America in 1921, and books on science came second. Question: How may the books on science be made to outnumber the books of avowed fiction—by adding more fiction to their contents or subtracting some?

Dry cleaning makes fresh suits and sport wear according to Dainty Dorothy

"It don't take a man long to bag his pants at the knees, and to make a finely tailored suit look thoroughly disreputable—that's the man of it," avers Dainty Dorothy.

But she goes on to explain that the man who is making use of our cleaning, steaming and pressing services is keeping his clothes in much more presentable condition than when he got acquainted with us. And it doesn't cost much, either.

The serial film known as the Arbuttle case is running off another reel, the papers report. The cost of this production, by the way, promises to set a new record in movie annals.

We may be getting old and sot in our ways, but we take no stock in this "kiss by radio" business. As the man remarked when for the first time he saw a giraffe, "It isn't human."

But then, as long as cabinet crises are all the vogue why shouldn't the Harding administration have one? We're entitled to all that goes with free, representative government we guess.

Where, inquires a contemporary, are the shirts of yesteryear? Well, we've got one of ours on. The tail of the other's doing duty as a dainty apronette and what's left of it serves as a dust cloth.

"Tactful pressure," according to The Literary Digest, may become as famous a diplomatic phrase as "watchful waiting." Any gentleman who understands dancing ought to be able to apply it.

The New York Times supposes that the decay of the art of letter writing is due, among other causes, to the telephone. Lots more communications, however, in the latter case, go to the wrong number.

Doug Fairbanks is going to play Robin Hood, and we look forward to the picture with pleasure, in spite of the fear that we shall find Robin Hood a grinning acrobat instead of a sturdy noble hearted vagabond.

The wife of a New York captain of police wants to leave him because he writes her orders as though she were a subordinate, and signs them, "your respectfully." She seems to suspect some subtle and lurking sarcasm.

Professor Keller of the Yale anthropology department, assures his students that he cannot instruct them what girl to marry nor how to court her. A brief special course with the average girl, however, will give them all the information necessary.

Senator McCumber, chairman of the finance committee, is to try to get President Harding to express a "definite" opinion on the bonus. The only way to do that is to assure the president that it is only a matter of "geographical location," and not political.

When a town school boy asked his father the meaning of equinox the old gentleman exploded as follows: "What's the matter with the schools these days, anyhow? Don't they teach you anything at all useful any more? The equinox is one of those fabled old Roman monsters, half horse, half ox. The word comes from 'equine,' meaning horse, and the word 'ox'."

HOLIDAY

Henry Ford puts his employees on the 40 hour week basis, no work on Saturdays.

Every man needs two days a week rest and recreation, says Ford.

When Henry was a young man, mechanics started their machines at 6 in the morning, not later than 7, and the man who worked only 10 hours a day was considered the holder of a soft soap. Gradually the workers are getting the benefit of automatic machinery, increased productive methods and sensible "efficiency."

How about a 40-hour a week schedule for the farmers?

BATTILING SINCE 1849

The first strike ever staged by American coal miners was in 1849. A local union, organized in the Pennsylvania anthracite field, struck for higher pay and better working conditions. This strike failed.

It was a decade before miners organized. Since then there have been hundreds of walkouts of various sizes and in various mining districts. Among the hundreds of strikers only five were big enough to be compared with the present one, which breaks all records for number of men involved.

During the panic of 1893 miners' wages were cut. To regain this loss about 160,000 bituminous miners struck the following year. After disorders and calling out of militia in four states this strike ended in a compromise.

In 1897 there was an overproduction of coal. Anticipating a wage cut in a dull market 150,000 miners struck for three months. By then coal was scarce and wage cuts were out of the question.

The 1897 strike was the first major victory of the United Mine Workers of America. It led in 1898, to firm establishment of collective bargaining between the union and the operators of the Central Competitive District, the heart of the bituminous industry.

The anthracite strike of 1900 won a wage increase of 10 to 16 per cent for the 132,000 miners involved.

Two years later the 140,000 anthracite miners walked out. After a strike of 23 weeks the Roosevelt commission raised their pay to 10 per cent. They returned to work with a three years' contract.

In 1919 about 395,000 miners struck. They finally won a wage increase averaging 27 per cent.

Seventy-three years of intermittent strikes in the coal fields! It is one of the oldest of all labor controversies.

The fact that no permanent settlement has been found in nearly three fourths of a century is due largely to a peculiar problem in the coal industry—seasonal buying.

Seasonal buying means that coal sales during certain months are dull. Miners then are laid off, for the mines do not operate long when they have no market.

This condition necessitates keeping a labor surplus in the coal fields to handle orders when they show up, like maintaining firemen in idleness, awaiting the outbreak of fire.

If you can solve this problem—find a way to induce homes and businesses to buy more coal during the dull months—you have the key to a labor battle waged since 1849.

For, above all, what the miners always want is steady employment.

PHYSIOGNOMY

The firm set expression at the mouth, which attracts your attention in pictures of George Washington, was due largely to his false teeth, says Professor F. A. Beckford of Harvard medical school.

People who jump at conclusions might say, this explodes the notion that a firm mouth implies determination.

On the contrary, Washington's artificial teeth merely restored his mouth to its original firmness. He had the determination of a bulldog, as Lord Cornwallis found out.

Men harp on the powers of reasoning. But reasoning, unless thorough and exhaustive, often sidetracks the brain on a fallacy.

Canada lost last year in government operation of the merchant marine $2,210,000, besides additional loss of $3,357,000 in interest charges, and $4,159,000 in depreciation—a nice little loss of $9,700,000. This may serve to give us a hint of our own losses in the same job.

MIDDLE WEST IS HARD HIT; PROPERTY LOSS HEAVY

Several Deaths Occur From Tornadoes and Floods; Property Loss is Also Large.

Floods caused damage amounting to millions of dollars today throughout western states.

Rivers, swollen by days of continuous rain, overflowed their banks, flooding lowlands and menacing cities.

Storms continued, rain, swept before high winds, fell in the southern sections, and sleet and snow in the north.

The situation as reported from various sections follows: Minnesota—Rivers throuth the Mississippi basin overflowing. Sleet demoralizing telegraph and telephone lines and rail transportation.

Wisconsin—Flood water sweeping down all rivers, menacing cities. Rain continues.

Illinois—The Illinois and other rivers at flood stages and still rising. Rain. Heavy loss already reported from floods.

Indiana—Wind and rain with rivers at flood stage.

Michigan—Floods throuth the northern section of the state. One dead.

Ohio—One dead and heavy property damage of $400,000 reported.

The storms are moving northward toward the St. Lawrence valley and will continue, with less force, for twenty-four hours, according to the Chicago weather bureau.

Kansas City, Mo., April 11.—Two dead, seven injured and $400,000 damage was the toll estimated today from floods, dust storms, tornadoes and snowstorms that swept parts of the southwest in the last twenty-four hours.

ALFALFA AND CORN PROVE BEST FEED

Feeding Experiments Demonstrate Greatest Value Lies in Being Fed without Mixtures.

Lincoln, April 10.—Corn and alfalfa, two of Nebraska's principal crops, proved to be the most economical ration for cattle feeding on a 100-pound basis of grain, it was determined at the close of the annual feeding experiments of the University of Nebraska agricultural college.

The object of the experiment was to test the advisability of adding the following ingredients to the corn and alfalfa ration:

Oil meal to corn and alfalfa; silage to the same ration.

Oil meal to corn, alfalfa and ensilage, and four pounds per head of alfalfa.

Molasses to corn, alfalfa and ensilage ration.

The experiments also were to determine the results of feeding plain, cheap steers on corn and alfalfa in comparison with good steers.

The cost per 100 pounds of gain by the various rations were as follows:

Corn and alfalfa, $8.03.

Corn, oil meal and alfalfa, $9.68.

Corn, silage and alfalfa, $7.84.

Corn, oil meal, silage and alfalfa, $9.43.

Corn, molasses, meal, silage and alfalfa, $9.21.

Corn and alfalfa for dog steers, $9.73.

Dog steers in Lot 6 showed the highest estimated profit per head, plus pork, of $14.88. Hogs followed all lots. The cost of 100 pounds per gain, $1.70, however, was not in favor of the good steers fed upon the same rations.
