The state grows out of the death of Loren McCrary, who was run over by a truck and killed two years ago on Fifth street. At the time, Mr. McCrary, a minor, was attempting to get onto a moving truck and was bound on an errand for his employer Mr. John F. Wolff at the garage on Fifth street.

In the action, Mr. Wolff was a party merely through being the employer of the young man and the case was fought by the insurance company that carried the compensation insurance of Mr. Wolff for his employees. The contention was that the case did not come under the compensation act because of the fact that the accident did not occur in the place of business of the garage and that the unfortunate young man in boarding the truck was not in the discharge of his duties.

In the finding of the supreme court the case is affirmed with the exception of one item of $180 which is stricken out of the award to the plaintiff. The sum that will be recovered by the plaintiff, the parent of the deceased young man, it is stated by the attorney for the plaintiff, A. L. Tidd, will be in the neighborhood of $3,815.42 after the item of $180 has been taken out.

The case was watched with interest by all insurance companies as it establishes a ruling that will be far reaching in covering the power of the compensation act and in broadening the scope of the act to cover cases where insured parties may be accidentally killed.

State Court Affirms Decision of District Court in Case of P. A. McCrary vs. John F. Wolff.

The case grows out of the death of Loren McCrary, who was run over by a truck and killed two years ago on Fifth street. At the time, Mr. McCrary, a minor, was attempting to get onto a moving truck and was bound on an errand for his employer Mr. John F. Wolff at the garage on Fifth street.
