LEADERS BETRAY THE PEOPLE

The leaders of this people cause them to err and they that are led of them are destroyed.—Isiah ix. 16.

When two live cheaper than one they feel that way.

The first frog of 1923 will be heard some evening before long.

Yale has a mentality test for students. Wonder if Edison could pass it.

About a year and a half until the next class enters the electoral college.

Should children be spanked? Well, some of them are mighty tempting.

Mr. Bryan's favorite candidate for president is much balder than he was 20 years ago.

Scientific journal asks, "How do fish smell?" All right, if you don't keep them too long.

One trouble with man is that he has one warm nightshirt he doesn't want to change all winter.

There are no English in Ireland, and the indications are that there will soon be no Irish there.

Don't be discouraged about getting on the front page. It took King Tut 3,200 years to get there, but he landed at last.

What's the matter with Henry Ford? Isn't he content to have one of his cars named after a president—the Lincoln.

Spring is on the way. The first blizzard has appeared in the eastern states evidently on its way north for the summer.

It is high time that somebody proposed an investigation to find out where the late King Tutankhamen got all his riches.

The government is a good deal like a family. It was going to get itself a new isthmian canal until it learned what they cost.

Well, anyway, in its appointment of a new postmaster general the administration appears to have effected the special delivery of Harry New.

Senator Norris urges election of president direct by the people—and, incidentally, he would like to tell the people who they must choose for the office.

Paris is trying to bring the bustle back into style. The French capital is evidently tired of being known as the place where beautiful fashions originate.

Woolen prices are going to advance 25 per cent this season, says an authority. Give a manufacturer an inch on a tariff and he gets his on a mile of cloth.

Personally, we make no claim to being an economist, but our experience is that there isn't much profit in cigar coupons after you deduct the cost of the cigars.

With the price of radium cut in two nobody can have the hardihood to deny that the earnest efforts of congress to get the country back to normalcy have succeeded.

The I. W. W. is said to be planning a reign of terror in California. Well, that state must have something to attract attention, now that interest in Hollywood is dying out.

And now the serious question confronting the nation is where our members of congress are going to find parking space for all their ideas until the Chautauqua season opens.

Uncle Joe Cannon having quit congress might make a bit of money by opening a school of cussing. He is sufficiently proficient to give the complete course, without having any assistant instructor.

"Vanderbilt left 50 million," says a headline. They nearly always leave it, nowadays, but it was not always so. When King Tut died and the estate went to probate the local newspapers said, "Young Scion of the Pharaoh Took 20 Million."

When men boil over they make an awful stew.

Mrs. Wally Reid wages war on dope. Who can blame her?

Sometimes a man becomes so prosperous that he has a hard time meeting his expenses.

As far as peace goes, the Alabama man with 32 children might as well be living in Europe.

A Seattle man escaped from jail three times and if you think that is easy just try it once.

First sign of spring in London was when Mrs. Langtry, age 71, decided to return to the stage.

One nice thing about radio is the artists never worry over rain keeping the audience at home.

Be careful while spring cleaning. It takes a finger nail nearly five months to grow out again.

Headquarters of 17 lodges burned in Boston, so now the men haven't any place to claim they were.

King George's new grandson will be called a prince except when crying in the middle of the night.

Grossman is a scientist who says he can bottle the sun's rays. They already bottle the moon's shine.

Who says higher education doesn't pay? Yale students voted they had rather marry women with jobs.

The number of employes has been reduced by almost one hundred thousand in the last two years, it is announced. And happily the government has gone on apparently uncrippled in spite of this dangerous experiment.

Judge Kenyon of Iowa says he will not be a presidential candidate, as he "is absolutely and irrevocably out of politics." Put us down the same. We positively and unconditionally refuse to run. We would rather be writing than be president.

Homer sold his verses for a crust of bread—and composed others. The world has yet to offer an example of a genius, who amassed wealth without losing his talent. Charlemagne very wisely said to his minister, "We must feed our poets, but not fatten them."

Easter comes unusually early this year—April 1. The date is fixed according to a theoretical moon known as the paschal moon. Easter is supposed to fall on the first Sunday after the full moon that occurs on or next after March 21, the nominal spring equinox.

Dr. Percy Grant is quoted as registering doubt as to the absolute authenticity of the Garden of Eden incidents as recorded in the Scriptures. Even the existence of an Eden is doubted by the dominie. For why? Any Plattsmouth citizen can find paradise without using a compass.

The French soldiers not only seized 12,000,000 German marks, but captured the plates from which they were printed. It would only be justice for the German government to tell the French to take the plates home and print their own reparations. It doesn't seem possible for a nation to sink so low as to steal a carload of German marks.

America became great when steel rails were cheap. The nation became a network of iron highways when railroad rails were selling at $18 a ton. Through its transportation facilities its ability to get its wares to market—it has continued great. The railroads made America and now a lot of fanned-mouthed socialists will never sleep until they break the railroads.

COL. HARVEY'S PROPHECY

Recently the British prime minister had this to say with respect to the question of the effect of our policy of isolation on the affairs of Europe:

"I am not going to estimate what was the effect. It is incalculable. In my belief, if circumstances had so arranged it that America could have played her part in the peace settlement as she played it in the war, the world would be in a much better position today."

Two evenings later our ambassador to London, Colonel Harvey, is reported to have made this statement in a speech:

"America will probably have to come in. We were glad to get out. We were, in fact, just as glad to get out as England would be if she could do so. But America will probably have to come in. Nations cannot follow their desires, but must serve humanity."

One could imagine that Colonel Harvey's prophecy was somewhat intended to be an answer to the observation of the British prime minister which it so closely followed that Colonel Harvey accepted the judgment of responsibility which the prime minister so delicately pronounced on the policy of the United States, and meant his prophecy to be also a promise of atonement. But whether such a spirit of confession may properly be attributed to the statement of Colonel Harvey or not, it is hardly to be denied that the situation which Colonel Harvey thinks is drawing us back into Europe is a testimony to the failure and futility of the policy which was dictated by desire. Colonel Harvey has discovered that nations are subject to other considerations which may make the gratification of desire a blunder. That much of confession at least there is in his prophecy that we shall probably be constrained to go back to Europe and take up again the duty which desire betrayed us into shirking.

A mass meeting was held in New York the other night to voice a protest against France's invasion of the Ruhr. Dr. Charles W. Elliott was among those who were invited to address it. Dr. Elliott did not appear. But he did send it a written message which, however, for a reason that its text makes obvious, was not read. "Our government," Dr. Elliott wrote, "should not now condemn France's invasion. Losses and suffering in Europe and Near East since 1919, and French fear about future security, are direct consequences of our refusal to join the League of Nations."

The majority judgment may not quite accord with that opinion. But that the policy which triumphed when our senate rejected the peace treaty was a blunder that is largely accountable for the miseries of Europe is now coming to be seen by many who then lauded it as the dictate of wisdom. The British prime minister is a witness. So is Senator Borah. So is Colonel Harvey. And one might see the president's sudden eagerness to have the United States give its fealty to the permanent court of international justice that he is in the way of becoming one.

"Conditions have grown better steadily" and consistently from month to month since March, 1921, when the sixty-seventh congress practically was in continuous session, says a statement of the republican national committee.

Yes, we recall the situation and thought it peculiar at the time. Early in the morning of March 4, 1921, our bank account stood at $30.15. As we have worked every day since and managed to spend a little less than we earned, the balance in the bank is several dollars larger than it was on the morning of March 4, 1921, when the sixty-seventh congress began to function. We had foolishly supposed our labors had something to do with the change. But we are glad to be set right by the national committee. Now we know it was congress that did it.

Governor Bryan made certain promises to the taxpayers of Nebraska in case he was elected. He was elected and by a big majority, too, over Charles Randall the pet candidate of Sam McKelvie and some of the republican barnstormers in the legislature, who are now leaving no stones unturned to keep the governor from living up to his promises. These fellows care nothing for the taxpayers or the state so long as they can serve their lord and master, Sam McKelvie, who is responsible for the present high taxes, which many farmers aer hardly able to meet.

They seem to have found nearly everything in the tomb of Tut except the well known pills named for him.

CITY COUNCIL HAS REGULAR BUSINESS MEET

A NUMBER OF MINOR MATTERS HANDLED BUT NONE OF PARTICULAR NOTE.

From Tuesday's Daily. Despite the weather, "Murky" er head, the full array of the city legislators were on hand and ready for the opening of business when the gavel of the mayor fell last evening and at once launched into a discussion of the city business.

W. V. Berger, who had the contract for putting in the Main street electrolier system, had a communication requesting the city to hand over the sum of $100 which was due on the contract and had been withheld until certain work was carried out and after due discussion it was decided to notify Mr. Berger to finish up the work before the sum requested was turned over.

The council granted permission to R. A. Bates to erect a temporary frame work in front of his building at Fifth and Main street during the putting in of a new modern front.

Edward Brubacher and other residents of Timber street presented a request to have more adequate fire protection in that part of the city and to have two additional hydrants installed there when the water mains were extended in that part of the city.

The application of E. R. Rist for permission to start a billiard and pool hall died an early death as the city ordinance limits the number in the city to two and the council were not in the mood to change the law to admit another hall to the city.

Chief of Police Alvin Jones reported the sum of $8.50 in fines and costs for the month of February in his office.

City Treasurer C. E. Hartford reported that there were overdrafts in the different funds of $9,000, a net balance of $49,015.99 in the treasury and registered warrants in the sum of $120,000 outstanding against the city.

The chief of the fire department also filed his report showing that there were two fires in the month of February, that at the J. V. Hatt home and the home of Mrs. Sarah Brees, neither of which entailed any serious loss.

The police judge of the city in his report showed that in the month closed he had received fines amounting to $5 and costs for $3.50, making a total of $8.50 and which were referred to the police committee.

Some discussion was indulged as to the assessment for the electrolier district as parties residing along the side streets had been assessed in the same proportion as those on the Main street where there were more lights and to equalize this the mayor suggested the appropriation of the sum necessary from the city funds but no definite action was taken.

Mr. McMaken moved that as spring was here the gutters along the avenues and curb and gutter districts be cleaned out and that persons be notified not to throw rubbish in the gutters.

Councilman Ptacek moved that estimates be prepared for the cost of lining the sewer on Washington avenue in order that the city could let the contract for the work as soon as possible.

Representatives of several Omaha bond houses were present and desired an opportunity of purchasing the $13,000 district and $16,000 interest paving bonds. The city and some discussion was had as to the form and term of years over which the bonds would run and the matter not settled as the council desired to advertise the matter to allow local people if they desired to make a bid and on motion of Councilman Bestor the next meeting night on March 26th was set for settling the bond proposition.

The following claims were recommended by the finance committee and allowed: Neb. Gas & Elec. Co., street lights $237.75; Neb. Gas & Elec. Co., electrolier lights 150.38; Neb. Gas & Elec. Co., meter reading city hall 3.40; Lincoln Tax Co., rents and tolls 5.25; F. Sebaska, cleaning streets 11.25; A. F. Braun, same 10.35; J. C. Bridgewater, same 10.35; John C. Sayles, insurance premium 34.72; John Maurer, cleaning waterway 13.05; Cloidt Lumber Co., lumber Sebaska 1.75; Claus Beetel, hauling horse 1.75; E. A. Breithaupt, check writer 25.00.
