One of the committee said they expected Mr. Graves to break it up for old scrap iron while Mr. Graves felt some like scrapping about the cluttering up of his stairway. It is hinted he will allow plenty of time to remove the stove, but no more.

A Public Disgrace

To the Editor: Central City boasts of her churches, religious atmosphere, her Red Cross, Salvation Army, public welfare association, business men and women's club and societies and orders of all kinds who spend thousands of dollars each year in banqueting—yet they will not turn a finger or spend a dollar in helping a poor, unfortunate woman, practically deserted by her husband; incurably sick; with a growing daughter who is compelled to sell pop corn on the streets to get bread and milk to live upon. This woman and her child have hardly enough clothing to cover their bodies and no shoes to cover their feet. Their condition is deplorable and they are to be pitied. Shame on a community that will allow such a condition to exist right under their noses and not try to remedy it.—A Reader.

DEATH CALLS FORMER RESIDENT OF UNION

Last Thursday at a hospital at Milford, John D. Sawyer, formerly a citizen of Union, passed away after an illness extending over several weeks, while at the same time Mrs. Sawyer is now at the hospital where she is very ill. Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer were united in marriage less than two years since and after the wedding visited in Iowa and other places in the east for a time and then came to Union to make their home, but selling their property here and going to Milford where is located the Soldiers' Home, and they purchased property but their health being so poor they were not able to live on it and as a result of the illness Mr. Sawyer has just died, the funeral being held on last Friday at the beautiful burying grounds of the soldiers and sailors. Mr. Sawyer was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and served during the civil war as a union soldier. Mrs. Sawyer was formerly Mrs. Genevieve Kendall is still in the hospital where she still is very poorly. The people of Union and the Journal extend sympathy in this hour of her deep trouble and illness hoping she may soon be well again.

SAMMY SAUSAGE'S TRICK

"Grunt, grunt," said Sammy Sausage to himself, "I've thought of a new trick."

"Let's hear it," said Brother Bacon. "Squeal, squeal, let's hear it."

"Grunt, grunt, I would like to hear about the new trick," said Grandfather Porky Pig. "Tell your grandfather what the new trick is. Is it some way of getting under the fence and wandering where there is more food? Is it a trick of that sort?"

"No, Grandfather," said Sammy Sausage. "But I cannot tell you my trick."

"Grunt, grunt," said Grandfather Porky. "Why can't you tell me? I suppose it has something to do with food and so you are keeping the secret all to yourself."

"Was there ever a pig who was not greedy?" asked Sammy Sausage as he twisted his tail.

"Never," said Grandfather Porky. "And let me never live to see the day when a pig is found to be generous."

"I'd rather be thought sweet and clean than be thought generous."

"You needn't worry," said Sammy Sausage, "you will never be thought any of those things. You will have those wishes granted you. In fact they have been granted to you long before you made them."

"But you're not telling us your trick," said Brother Bacon. "I said it to myself," said Sammy Sausage.

"Said what to yourself?" asked Grandfather Porky.

"You Won't Be Told."

"I said to myself that I'd thought of a new trick," said Sammy.

"But I heard you say it," said Brother Bacon.

"I know you did," said Sammy Sausage, "and for that I am sorry."

"I heard you say it, too," said Grandfather Porky Pig.

"Grunt, grunt, I heard you."

"I know you did, too," said Sammy Sausage, "and I am sorry about that, too."

"I didn't mean either of you to hear me. I didn't mean any one to hear me. I didn't intend to share so much as my secret with anyone."

"Squeal, squeal," said Brother Bacon, "how the pig nature will come out. It's splendid to see it!"

"Splendid," said Grandfather Porky Pig, "but I'd like to know the trick. If he didn't mean us to hear him when he was grunting happily to himself it must be a very nice greedy secret that he has."

"It certainly must be," he repeated. "Yes, that's so," said Brother Bacon. Sammy Sausage grinned and squealed delightedly. "But you won't be told," he grunted.

"Oh, just tell me," said Grandfather Porky. "I promise I won't tell a single creature."

"Oh, just tell me," said Brother Bacon. "I promise I'll not tell any one."

"Of course neither of you would tell any one else for you wouldn't share so much as a secret," said Sammy Sausage.

"What did I tell you!" exclaimed Grandfather Porky. "I knew it was a greedy secret."

"Oh, just tell me," said Brother Bacon. "Just tell me," urged Grandfather Porky.

But Sammy would tell neither of them. In a little while the farmer came along with the food for the pigs. It was then that Sammy rushed as hard as ever he could and as he reached the feeding trough just a second ahead of the others he put both feet in it as well as his snout so that others would not get so much to eat and so he could have more room. This was the trick he had thought of, but the other pigs soon put a stop to this idea by all trying to do the same thing, and finally having to go back to the old way of simply putting their snouts in and getting as much as they could in the good old way.

He Saved Trouble. Teacher—Robert, in your composition on George Washington you say he cut down a cherry tree with a saw. Don't you know he chopped it down with a hatchet?

Robert—Yes'm; but I didn't know how to spell hatchet.

Vehicle With One Wheel. "A vehicle with three wheels is called a tricycle and one with two wheels is a bicycle," said the teacher. "Now, Edgar, what would you call a vehicle with one wheel?"

"A wheelbarrow," promptly answered the little fellow.
