

FORMER PASTOR HERE IS CALLED BY DEATH IN WEST

Rev. R. F. Dungan, in Charge of the Christian Church Here Several Years Ago, Passes Away

From Thursday's Daily. The old friends in this city of Rev. R. M. Dungan, at one time pastor of the Christian church here, will regret to learn of his death, which occurred two weeks ago at Glendale, California.

From the Glendale Tribune is taken the following account of the passing of Rev. Dungan: "In the First Christian church, where he had been pastor for nearly four years, and before the pulpit, where he had so often spoken, the Rev. R. M. Dungan lay at rest yesterday afternoon on a trip through the former church members and old friends came to bid him a last goodbye. Beside the presence of friends there was the silent tribute of the flowers which were banked about the platform in wondrous beauty, telling eloquently of the love and esteem in which the late pastor was held.

"The last rites were held at 2:30 in the auditorium of the church being filled long before that time. The service was opened by the choir singing the well known hymn, 'Sometime We'll Understand.' Mrs. A. W. Bates, choir director, acting as accompanist.

"The Rev. F. M. Dowling, of Anaheim, supply pastor during the absence of the Rev. Morton L. Rose, read the scripture for the occasion, and, by request, the tenth chapter of Romans beginning with the thirteenth verse. 'For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord, shall be saved,' this being the last passage of scripture read by the late pastor before leaving the pastorate of this church.

"The Rev. Mr. Bassett, of the First Christian church of Riverside offered prayer in which he referred to the Rev. Mr. Dungan as a man of great love and broad sympathies.

"Miss Ida Knadler with heartfelt tenderness sang the beautiful solo, 'Does Jesus Care?'

"Then the Rev. Alden Lee Hill, pastor of the Highland Park church, of which the deceased was a member, spoke eloquently as pastor and friend, intimating that Mr. Dungan's wish would be that of John's mother in the matchless 'Bonnie Briar Bush' story to 'Speak a gude word for Jesus Christ.'

"Followed Mr. Hill's address, Mrs. Bates sang in her tenderest and most impressive manner the solo, 'The City Four-Square.'

"The service closed with the talk of the Rev. S. M. Bernard of Van Nuys, Mr. Dungan's most intimate friend. After the reading of the obituary, Mr. Bernard gave tribute to the character of Mr. Dungan, speaking of him as a man of pure living, who in all his pastorates lived free from any cloud of suspicion; a man of warm personal friendships who drew men to him as he was able to do, through his sense of humor and his sympathy for and understanding of men. 'He was whole-souled and had remarkable power as a preacher, preaching the gospel in purity and simplicity. He was a splendid executive, also,' said the speaker, 'as witness this church freed of debt and the fine parsonage bought and paid for. He was true to the old book and was possessed of a faith as pure and simple as the age of 52 as he had when but a schoolboy of 15.'

"A long cortege of automobiles wound its way to Mountain View, where Mr. Dungan was laid to rest. The six active pallbearers were all men who had joined the church during the pastorate of Mr. Dungan and the honorary pallbearers included the board of trustees of the church and the board of trustees.

"The Rev. Mr. Hill read the scripture at the graveside and the Rev. Mr. Bernard offered the closing prayer.

The Glendale paper also describes in detail the floral offerings which included scores of floral pieces from churches and church organizations. At the request of Mrs. Dungan the bouquets were later sent to the hospital.

MEETING ON THE GREEN

This morning while the orb of day was slowly climbing skyward, a party of several of the members of the Plattsmouth golf club motored to Weeping Water where they met the golf enthusiasts of that city in a series of games. While the Weeping Water players have the advantage of a little more experience at the game, the Plattsmouth enthusiasts left with lots of pep and well laid plans to show up some high scores that will make our neighbors sit up and take notice.

WRITES OF OLD TIMES

Reading the account of the birthday anniversary of Burwell Spurlock at York, has prompted C. W. Green, now living at Lincoln, to send to the Journal a few words of tribute to Mr. Spurlock and some remarks relative to the old days when they were both residents of Plattsmouth. While Mr. Spurlock is celebrating his eighty-eighth anniversary, Mr. Green can go him a few years better however, as he is ninety-one years of age. Mr. Green and the Spurlock family became acquainted in Plattsmouth forty-five years ago and were for many, many years co-workers in the old Methodist church in this city, of which they were all devout members for their lifetime.

which a prize was given for the one giving the greatest number of quotations from the Bible, and the honor was won by a Sunday school student, Sigel Green, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Green, and the young man followed the direction of his early training and later became a minister of the church, and is now located at Whittier, California. Mr. Green is anticipating a visit at York at the Mothers' Jewels home with Mr. Spurlock.

BROADCASTING DIRECTOR VISITOR HERE YESTERDAY

Mr. Orson Stiles, secretary to Sovereign Commander Fraser of the Woodmen of the World at the head office in Omaha, and director of radio broadcasting from Station WOAW, which is owned and operated by the Woodmen of the World Life Insurance Association, in company with the Woodmen of the World baseball team manager, drove down yesterday afternoon on a trip through this section of the state booking dates for the baseball team after the close of the Omaha amateur season, September 2nd. The Woodmen of the World team is now leading the Class A loop by a margin of one full game and expects to finish the season at the top of the list.

While here Mr. Stiles visited the Journal office and also called on Mr. E. H. Wescott, secretary of the local Chamber of Commerce, reiterating his former proposal to assign Plattsmouth another broadcasting date from Station WOAW at any time, and it is highly probable negotiations will be concluded for the giving of such a concert around September 24th, when the static will be well cleared up and the number of regular listeners to WOAW increased by several hundred thousand compared with the present time.

STAGE A REAL GAME

This morning Carl Strong, the well known baseball catcher, who was with the Burlington team here the fore part of the season, came in from Rock Port, Missouri, where he played yesterday with the Rock Port team in a red hot battle with the Tarkio, Missouri, team.

"Lefty" Powers, who with Strong formerly played with the Hamburg, Iowa, team, did the hurrying for the Rock Port aggregation and Strong the catching, while Puryear was on the mound for Tarkio.

The Rock Port team won the game by a score of 4 to 2, and a very large crowd was in attendance as all of the places of business in the town were closed and the whole population turned out to take part in the rooting at the ball grounds.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. Weyrich & Hadraba.

MOST NEBRASKA WORKERS THEIR OWN BOSSES

Statistics Show 75 Per Cent of Our Laboring Class are Working for Themselves.

Washington, July 27.—Seventy-five of every 100 persons working in Nebraska are their "own bosses"—are working for themselves instead of for others.

From the standpoint of economic independence, the overwhelming majority of Cornhusker farmers are more independent than bankers, more than half of whom are classed as "employees."

These outstanding facts have been developed by a re-classification of the census of occupations just completed and announced by the bureau of statistics of the department of labor.

The conclusion drawn from extensive studies of statistical experts is that, despite his many vicissitudes, disappointments and sacrifices, the Nebraska farmer, as well as his brethren of other states, is holding on with bull-dog determination to the strictly individualistic position that from earliest days has set him apart in American industry.

While some ground has been lost during the so-called "age of the machine," the farmer of Nebraska remains and will for some time continue to be a self-contained industrial unit, regulating his affairs in accordance with his own conception of what is best for him.

Few Bakers in Boss Class

For Nebraska, and the nation as a whole, the number of persons engaged in farming is almost precisely the number of persons engaged in manufacturing.

Of the 10,628,944 individuals engaged in general farming, $240,400 are classified as employers and independent workers, while 2,442,544 are set down as employees.

The situation is just the other way round as regards manufacturing. Here are found 10,158,253 persons gainfully employed of whom 9,372,595 are "hands," 254,615 are officials and managers, and 531,043 are "bosses" or independent workers.

Nearly eight out of ten farmers are so-called free workers, while about eight out of ten persons engaged in manufacturing enterprises are expected to do what they are told.

This happy situation in which the farmer finds himself contrasts sharply with that of bakers, for instance, only 3 per cent of whom are in the "boss" class.

Blacksmiths, who a few generations ago, were intense individualists, today have practically been submerged in mechanical production, only 19 per cent being free workers.

Newsboys continue to work largely for themselves, only 25 per cent being placed in the "employee" class. But ten out of every hundred boot blacks own their own boxes and brushes.

Milliners are clinging to the old order, 75 per cent working for themselves. Undertakers also have managed to maintain their position of economic independence, 75 per cent being in the employer or proprietor class. Seventy per cent of all artists and 90 per cent of all actors, on the other hand, look forward to the weekly pay envelope which comes from their "bosses."

The status of the barber also has materially changed, only twenty of each 100 now being employers. The jewelry has slowly given way to factory production until eight of ten are carried on some employer's payroll.

HIRAM JOHNSON'S HAT BELIEVED TO BE IN THE RING

At Least That's Washington View After Californian Flays Harding's Foreign Policy.

Washington, D. C., July 26.—Hiram Johnson's hat is in the ring. This was the view taken in Washington today of the California senator's New York speech, in which he bitterly assailed the administration's foreign policy and flung out a bold challenge to President Harding to make it an issue at the polls.

The defiant tone of Senator Johnson's speech exceeded expectations and although he carefully refrained from any discussion of his candidacy his utterances, in the opinion of observers here, were plainly subject to the interpretation that he means to fight President Harding's re-nomination on the world court issue.

Much significance was attached to that part of his New York speech in which he declared he would not forgive the man who decides this nation's future solemnly by the present apparent necessity of partisan politics, and when he added, "what we condemned under a democratic administration we will not accept under a republican administration."

These statements, coupled with this demand for a showdown, definite and final, on the question of entering foreign entanglements, sounded like war talk to the eager ears of Washington politicians.

The strategy of Senator Johnson's campaign was clearly marked out when he warned the conservatives in his audience that they must accept a progressive or run the risk of being forced to accept a radical.

He probably had the Minnesota election results in mind when he said: "I suggest to my conservative brethren that recent events indicate they must choose whether progressive things will be done in a conservative way or in a radical way. You may have to take progressivism or radicalism will take you."

In other words, Senator Johnson sees the country drifting towards radicalism, and he offers himself as the candidate best able to check it, a compromise between Harding and La Follette or Ford. His friends here make no secret of their hope that it will eventually become a compromise to President Harding that he cannot be re-elected, and that he will step aside to permit the nomination of such a man as Johnson, who, they contend, could win progressive votes and carry the republican party to victory in 1924.

Despite the vigor of Senator Johnson's criticism of the administration's foreign policy, his friends here declare that he has no thought of bolting and joining any third party movement. He is confident, they say, that the differences can be fought out within the party.

PERSHING RECALLS VILLA

General Once a Friend of Mexican, But Does Not Care to Comment on His Killing.

New Orleans, July 27.—General John J. Pershing, on a tour of inspection army posts, passed through New Orleans on his way to San Antonio. It was said he expected to join President Harding and his party in Los Angeles. The first person to greet General Pershing on his arrival was Col. George B. Shanton, in charge of the federal department of justice here. Colonel Shanton, who is the original "Virginian" of Owen Wister's novel of that name, was a close friend years ago with General Pershing at Cheyenne, Wyo., when the general was a young officer and Shanton was a cowpuncher. General Pershing later married the daughter of Senator Warren, who was Shanton's guardian.

General Pershing refused an expression on the recent slaying of Francisco Villa, whose operations prompted the punitive expedition into Mexico, but there was a trace of regret in his voice when Villa's name was mentioned.

From Saturday's Daily. About fifty or sixty bank receivers, including Fred Bodie, who has been in charge of closing up the business of the failed Bank of Cass County, of Plattsmouth, will be required to turn over their receiverships to the state banking department by August 7th to be handled thereafter by the new banking commission, provided for in a law passed by the last legislature.
