WITH ALL YOUR HEART

Turn not aside from following the Lord, but serve the Lord with all your heart.—1 Samuel xii. 20.

The sensible man hopes little and despairs of nothing.

Come on, boys! Home watermelons will soon be ripe.

The man of sense does not hang up his knowledge.

Make yourself a sheep and the wolves will eat you.

He is foolish to blame the sea who is shipwrecked twice.

One can stop when he ascends, but not when he descends.

Bring General Wood home, or we may have another war on our hands.

Our mosquitoes are not quite as large as they are in Mississippi, but they bite just as hard.

What makes the wild flowers is to have the city people come out and tear them up by the roots.

France approves the treaty forbidding her to build ships she can't. Academic approval as it were.

You may argue with a traffic cop and pay a fine but should you argue with a truck you'll be lucky if it's a hospital bill.

Man is fearfully and wonderfully made. Otherwise how could he survive a diet of hot dogs and cold watermelon in midsummer.

If it were not for the fact that the white heat of July brings red hearted watermelons, the month probably could be abolished from the calendar by acclamation.

General Parshing wants American girls to pick their husbands from the national guard. In case of gun play after the wedding, hubby would know how to hunt cover.

Too many people insist on becoming minister of the gospel who are not orators, and they are not wanted in the pulpit. A preacher should be a good talker to be successful.

The people of the United States are demanding low tariff. Protection may be all right for the manufacturer, but it is not good for the consumers. Low tariff for America!

Revolution in United States will have to be postponed, owing to the opposition of the workers and property holders, says Trotsky, the Russian war lord. That's good news; now we can take a day off and have a little fun.

Fatty Arbuckle's old pie throwing comedies are said to be drawing packed houses in Germany this season. The exhibitors over there seem to have found something to show in fair exchange for the German marks that come into the box office.

A Philadelphia advertising agency has been deluging our office with propaganda exploiting the modernist idea in religion. We do not care to waste space on slush of this character, but we would like to know the identity of the imp of satan who is paying for the distribution of propaganda of this sort. It is quite certain that the advertising agency is not sending it out without charge.

If Woodrow Wilson and Secretary Hughes should fight a duel in Washington it would create a good deal of excitement and the picture rights would be worth a lot of money. But in some parts of Europe nothing much would be thought of a meeting of this kind. The war minister and former president of Poland fought a duel the other day. One had made statements which the other resented and a meeting on the field of honor seemed necessary. The two warriors clashed, but it appears that the engagement was not a tragic one. So far as learned not a drop of blood was shed. The two rivals took a few shots at one another without a puncture being recorded and were then parted. Honor was satisfied and what more could be asked? It is an excellent omen when duels can be fought without spraying the scenery with gore.

President Harding wants everybody to be able to sing "The Star Spangled Banner." It wouldn't be so difficult if we could always have a soprano to lead us "over the top."

A FUTILE WORK

Dr. Henrik Willem Van Loon has gone to Cambridge university, England, to rewrite the Bible. It is his ambition to cut the volumn down from 1,250,000 words to 120,000 words.

Of all the futile and utterly senseless works ever undertaken by a man of supposed intelligence, that of Dr. Van Loon can surpass the literary men who originally wrote the Bible. Many generations of literary men have come and gone during the past 1923 years, but we have had no better writers than Matthew, Mark, Luke and John.

Dr. Van Loon says there are a lot of people who just won't read the Bible as it appears now, and it is for their benefit that he has undertaken the job of rewriting the volumn.

It is true that a lot of folks do not read the Bible, and it is a hard job to induce them to do so, but just how they can be benefited by the atrocity which Dr. Van Loon proposes to penetrate is beyond conjecture.

If Dr. Van Loon honestly and sincerely believes the Bible, he can best employ the very brief space of time allotted to him by God and whatever talent he may possess, in the great work of teaching its original version.

MOUNTING PENSIONS

Pensions still are being paid to widows of veterans of the war of 1812.

Plainly a man is never too old to marry if he has a pension. And there are women ready to marry him even though he has one or both feet in the grave or is in except his chin whiskers.

It seems reasonable to assume that the widow of a man old enough to fight for his country 110 years ago must have been a couple of generations younger than her bridegroom on her wedding day, and it isn't often that such marriages are arranged entirely because of love.

This ought to make us look ahead as well as behind. In the late war we called more men to the colors than there were men, women and children in the entire country in 1812. Fifty years hence there will be twenty times as many veterans of our latest army as there were veterans of the war of 1812 and human nature will not have changed a bit. Men will be just as foolish and some women just as business-like in matrimonial matters then as they are now and have been for ages.

It may be necessary to pass a law making any woman who marries a world war veteran more than fifty years her senior ineligible for his pension after his death. That would prevent a fearful drain on the treasury one hundred years hence.

And otherwise, wars may come and wars may go, but pensions will go on forever.

A WIDOW'S PENSION

How long should a widow wait until she marries again? The answer, of course, depends upon circumstances and conditions. Some widows do not remarry, such being a matter of choice with them. Some, of course, are not marriageable, for reasons. These are not under discussion. There is a time honored custom that a widow should wear weeds for a year. Weeds are often cumbersome and unhealthful and the custom becomes a trial as well as a menace. Ostratous mourning is often as indecorous as the lack of mourning. Good taste would seem to dictate that some sane expression of grief should be worn. Good taste, or form, too should determine that a widow who respected her late husband and public opinion should wait a year at least before assuming widowhood with another.

A few days ago the widow of the late Lord Northcliffe was remarried. Her deceased spouse was one of the world's most eminent men. He was a great newspaper publisher and statesman. During his career he achieved so tremendously that the gaze of the world attached itself to him. He was highly respected everywhere. His success was marked. He left not only a good name but a lordly fortune.

He died last August and the world was shocked. A great funeral was his and many mourners.

His widow couldn't have been over-much grieved. But she did owe the proprieties enough to have waited a bit longer. Evidently she began some time earlier to heed the wailings of the man whom she married. She should have waited. Using funeral baked meats to furnish a wedding feast is certainly not good form. There was time. Such unseemly rush to again blossom forth in the gew-gaws of bridehood deserves the rebuke it will doubtless receive. English society is conservative. Its traditions are not easily violated. The lady will doubtless be made to feel the indignation precipitancy has aroused. And it will be well enough if she does.

AUTO PRODUCTION

Four auto companies now have produced more than a million cars apiece since they started business. Willy-Overland is the latest. Buick and Chevrolet passed the million mark early this year. Dodge soon will be the fifth to reach the mark.

Ford hit the million goal several years ago. He's getting along to 8,000,000 cars produced.

These figures don't mean much unless you recall the old days when the "horseless carriage" struck most people as a fad or, at best, an innovation limited in its power of growth. It's dangerous to condemn anything new—or predict its future.

GOLD AND SILVER

Gold and silver mine owners are going to the next congress to get "theirs." They contend there is justification in the attitude of congressmen who would alleviate the difficulties of those who produce our food without doing something as well well for those who produce our gold and silver.

As for the silver men they received enough of a bonus when the Pittman act was passed, which commit-

Jam & Jelly Making now an exact science

Fresh Fruits are Plentiful! Use the short CERTO-Process for making jam and jelly with Berries, Cherries, Peaches and other fruits in season. You will find they are the best jams and jellies you ever tasted.

CERTO is sold by grocers everywhere or sent postpaid for 35 cents.

1 MINUTE'S BOILING OF 2 POUNDS OF FRUIT WITH 3 POUNDS OF SUGAR plus 5 OUNCES OF CERTO makes 5 POUNDS OF JAM

Wrapped with every bottle is a recipe booklet which tells the story.

No reason now her tongue to tell That sad old story "It did not jelly!" Her jam's now perfect—jelly, too She uses CERTO—so should you!

ted the treasury to pay them a premium of approximately 50 per cent on all the silver they have produced since the war, to last for a long time. Certainly they would not think seriously of such measures of amelioration as were seriously considered during the low price regime that followed the Civil war.

No more justification can be found for measures that would increase the output of American mines. Already one of the gravest financial problems is that an abnormal supply of gold in the vaults of the treasury and the banks. To increase that supply with any kind of government assistance and at the expense of the taxpayers would be the height of folly.

Senator Oddie of Nevada can carry his investigation of the gold and silver situation as far as the lilies. He will not enlist enough sympathy for the poor gold and silver miners to wring a cent's worth of assistance for them from the hands of congress.

WH YTHEY FLUNK

A Northwestern university professor has been at considerable pains to learn why sixteen out of every one hundred college students fail. Is it for lack of ability, financial or other worry, illness or what?

Having interviewed a large number of delinquents, he attributes the failure of college undergraduates to "too little sleep, too much play, not enough study, too much leisure." The delinquents, it appears, are made up largely of students of average intelligence which is applied not in study and in useful recreation but in the scores and hundreds of outside activities which in the minds of an increasing number of undergraduates constitute the real campus life.

The increased emphasis received by these activities in most colleges in recent years may prove ultimately to be a wholesome thing. But the question must present itself to every college graduate of twenty years ago or more when he read a daily college calendar: When do the students of today do their studying?

The answer as based upon the Northwestern investigation seems to be: They don't; they can't find the time.

Every undergraduate body contains no small number of students who would willingly flunk a course or two as a condition to becoming the headliner in the college play or leader of the glee club. That is the reason for sixteen failures in every hundred and few of them are the source of any genuine regret.

MOVIES MOVING

There are now eighteen thousand movie theatres in the United States, with an attendance of 50 million ticket buyers a week, according to a trade estimate. Which means the average person goes to the movies once every two weeks.

Edison was right when he said: "Whoever controls the motion picture industry controls the most powerful medium of influence over the people."

The chronic movie goer is an emotional drunkard. John Barleycorn, after all, had in his favor that he was more of a physical and mental stimulant than an excitant of the emotions.

BLUE LAWS TO RULE A MICHIGAN COUNTY

Even Taxis and Newspaper Offices are Forbidden to Operate—All Amusements Shut Down.

Ludington, Mich., July 27.—All forms of Sunday amusements and labor will be banned in Mason county, starting this Sunday, when every blue law on the state statute books will be rigidly enforced, City Prosecutor Virgil Fitch announced.

Notices have been issued to drug stores, confectioners, billiard halls, restaurants, taxi lines, newspapers and all other business places in the county that any violator of the Sunday business suspension law will be prosecuted.

Automobile pleasure rides and boating in Lake Michigan along the county shore will be included in the ban, it was announced.

Any lake boats anchoring off the county shore will be seized and forced to lie idle until Monday.

The decision of Prosecutor Fitch to enforce all the antiquated blue laws on the statutes resulted from requests of a group of local club women to close a Sunday night dance hall recently opened on the lake shore.
