Rapid Rise as an Actor Milton Sills was born in Chicago and attended the University of Chicago. In college he was prominent in theatricals and achieved so much success that upon graduation he was offered a chance to join a stock company. His progress was rapid and it was not long before he was playing important parts in legitimate road show companies. Later he landed on Broadway and for six years was leading man in Belasco, Shubert, Brady and Frohman companies. The screen calling him, he joined the Universal, later playing leading roles as a free lance in other companies' pictures. Among his recent successes were "Skin Deep," "Burning Sands," "The Woman that Walked Alone," "Isle of Dead Ships" and "The Spotters." In his latest vehicle, "Legally Dead," to be shown at the Peterson hall Saturday, Dec. 15th, he is said to have done some of the strongest work of his career.

Heard from Coast to Coast Hundreds of phone calls, telegrams and letters have been received congratulating Murray artists on their program broadcast from Radio Station WQAW in Omaha last week.

Letters have come from coast to coast and from Canada to Mexico. Uncle Sam Latta seems to be the favorite among listeners, while some of the distant points report Ralph Kennedy's piano selections and Will Lindner's cornet solo as being the strongest. Here are extracts from a few of the letters received:

Winthrop, N. Y.—You sure have the right spirit. May God bless you for broadcasting it. Your orchestra is splendid and some one give the Murray "promoter" a good handshake for me. I'm sure Murray is all he says it is. It makes one want to hitch Lizzie right up, throw in the auto bed and find a place to camp—in Murray.

Yonkers, N. Y.—Have just enjoyed your wonderful entertainment—especially the description of Murray. I assure you if I ever get out that way I will bring my bathing suit and enjoy a swim. Enjoyed the poem and the mixed quartet, was fine. Entire program distinctly heard on a loud speaker all over the house. Hope to hear you again soon.

Boston, Mass.—This is to notify you that we enjoyed your concert very much. I was particularly entertained by Uncle Sam Latta in his song "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia." Orchestra splendid and cornet and piano solos clear as a bell.

Goes to Hospital for Operation Mrs. E. L. Peterson, who has been troubled for some time with appendicitis, accompanied by Mr. Peterson and Dr. J. F. Brendel, her family physician, went to the Lord Lister hospital in Omaha, where on Tuesday she underwent an operation for relief. Following the operation and recovery from same she was doing nicely and it is hoped she may have a rapid and permanent recovery.

Ladies Were Well Pleas'd The ladies of the Christian church were very well pleas'd over the excellent patronage which was given them at their Thanksgiving dinner and supper, which event has been an annual feature with these ladies for a good number of years, but never have they met with more whole-hearted support than this year. They have received many nice compliments over their cooking and serving, but not beyond what their efforts were deserving of, as they surely served two excellent meals. The ladies very kindly took a dinner to Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Pittman, who desired to patronize the supper, but on account of the poor health of Mrs. Pittman could not go to the church. Both Mr. and Mrs. Pittman were well pleased with the meal and the service as well.

Show and Program a Success Murray is indeed to be congratulated on the unbounded success of the Community radio program last week which was heard all over the United States. Each number was excellent and all were entitled to a share of the credit. At the ball in Murray the program was listened to by large crowd and due to the courtesy of A. D. Baake and Curley Reeves, the arrangements were so perfect that everyone could hear distinctly. It takes careful manipulation to bring the radio program thru a loud-speaker with such volume as they obtained and everyone was very grateful to them for their efforts.

Growing out of the advertising which was given the Wilson Rotary Collander at the state fair last fall, a letter was received from Mrs. Anna Blanning, of San Diego, Calif., by the secretary of the company, W. H. Ple, who immediately shipped the instrument. They have just received some dozen of the machines which have all been sold before received. It looks like there would be a very lively trade on these machines.

The Story

In the tiny courtyard of the prison a group of men moved nervously, each trying to look casual. It was a few minutes before six a. m., the hour of executions.

In a gray cell a man sat with his head on his hands. He raised his head and looked into eternity. In a few minutes he would be dead. And he was innocent.

In a side room of the warden's office a doctor and a hysterical girl came to an agreement with the warden. If the governor phoned a stay of execution, but did it too late, the doctor could have the body of the victim. What a strange agreement.

And in an impressive library room in the governor's home a visitor sat with him at this early hour. The governor was cool, calm. He consistently shook his head negatively. The visitor was a small-town banker who knew the man who was to be hanged—and he swore the man was innocent. In the midst of their conversation the visitor called another girl, in from the waiting room. She was crying. What she told the governor was that her "sweetie" did the murder for which another man was to hang.

The prison warden's phone rang, and as he listened his face paled at the words of the governor. "Too late!" cried the warden, but
