PHONE NO. 14

NEHAWKA, NEB.

Harold (H. R.) Stoll was looking after some business in Union on last Tuesday afternoon.

Sure it is the same John G. Wunderlich; it is only the new cap he is wearing that makes him look different.

Edward Murray is putting in his time well just now, chopping and getting a supply of wood for the coming year.

The Nehawka Bank and most of the business houses were closed on New Year's day, they taking the customary holiday.

Lester Wunderlich and two friends of Plattsouth were spending a short time last Tuesday with friends and relatives in Nehawka.

Frank P. Sheldon and Vincent Straub were looking after some business in Plattsouth on last Saturday, driving over in the car of the latter.

Miss Mary Chappell was spending New Year's day with her friend, Miss Barbara Rich, of Weeping Water, who had prepared a supper for Miss Mary.

Two of the small daughters of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Hill have been sick with something like the grip, but are getting along better at this time.

Both the teachers and children of the Nehawka schools are still enjoying the holidays, but will again be back at their work with the beginning of next year.

R. M. Christwiser and son, John, both of whom are employed in the Burlington shops at Plattsouth, were spending last Tuesday with friends at Nehawka.

Robert Troop who has been having some trouble with a few of his hogs is able to report that they are getting better at this time and that he thinks they will get along now.

member amputated and which is at this time showing some improvement. Mrs. Paul Tighe and children of Herman, where Mr. Tighe is engaged in farming, were visiting last Sunday and Monday at the home of her sister, Mrs. George C. Sheldon, and on Monday afternoon returned to Omaha after having had an excellent visit while here.

Mrs. L. M. McVey, who has been visiting for some time at the home of relatives at Coleridge, returned home last Sunday, and the family are rejoicing as they did not like to do the cooking very well, and as Mrs. McVey is such an accomplished cook, when they had to do it themselves, they noticed the difference.

George, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Polls was suddenly taken with appendicitis and was taken to Omaha, where he underwent an operation in one of the hospitals and has since been very low, although hopes are entertained for his recovery. Everything is being done for his comfort and his friends are looking forward to his being better soon.

Marion Tucker told the representative of the Journal to say to the guys who run the electric light plant in Plattsouth to turn on the juice or they (the people of Nehawka) would come to Plattsouth with "the cannon" and bombard the town. From the way they treated a crowd of people who went to "bring the gun home" some years ago, somebody had better be good.

J. W. Magney and wife are rejoicing over the fact that the new home which has been under construction under the direction of Henry M. Pollard is about completed, and they will expect to occupy the same the coming week. This makes a very good record of winter construction, and all that remained to be done on the first day of the New Year was a little interior work by the painters.

Wm. Balfour went to Omaha Tuesday, where he appeared on the New Year's night program given by the Henry Field Seed company of Shenandoah, and which was broadcast by the Woodmen of the World radio station. The entire program proved to be most excellent and the numbers of Mr. Balfour on the violin all in clear and fine, as they could not help but do when Uncle Balfour has hold of the fiddle. Mr. Stewart Rough, who listened in on the entire program says that the playing of Mr. Balfour was excellent.

Cleo Waldo Dies Suddenly Little Cleo Waldo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Waldo, who with her little sister, had the diphtheria, died last Tuesday morning, the funeral being held the same afternoon. Every precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of the disease, there being only one other case in the community at present, that of the little sister, Mr. and Mrs. Waldo have the sympathy of their many friends in Nehawka in this, their hour of sorrow.

Went Rabbit Hunting George Pollard and Jack Browne, salesman of the Sheldon store, were by invitation of the association of rabbits, meeting with them in the jungles about Nehawka, but at the same time while it was a very friendly meeting, George and Jack were armed with two old time firefuns, for self protection. Strange to say, not a rabbit showed any indication of attacking either of the gentlemen. Probably they knew both the boys.

Had Them All Home On Sunday before New Year's the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Sturm was the scene of merriment for all the family were present, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Yeiser, Jr. and their son, John the third, of Omaha; Justin Sturm and family of Chicago; Victor and Ralph Sturm, of Texas. On Monday afternoon Ralph Sturm took the Yeiser family to the train at Union and also took Justin Sturm and family to Omaha to catch the train for Chicago.

These maps are of large size and bear in them the location of each of the farms in Cass county with the name of the owner, the highways, schools and the different towns of the county. They are valuable to the traveler over the county and as well as a matter of reference to any person and should be in every home so that a clear knowledge of the geography of the county can be secured.

Clinton Kinner of Omaha was an over New Year's visitor here, a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Kroehler and family, returning this morning to Omaha.

Henry Kettleon, who was here over the Christmas vacation visiting with his parents and many friends, departed yesterday for Chicago where he is employed.

Mrs. E. C. Ripple was in Omaha today where she is taking medical treatment in that city.

Attorney H. H. Kuppinger of Omaha was here yesterday for a few hours looking after some matters of business.

Mr. and Mrs. Evia Hawkins of Sioux City, Iowa, were here over Sunday as guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Robertson.

SANTA'S WAYS

"Now," said Santa Claus, "I am planning to have my magic cars and planes meet me at the places where there is no snow—then I can dash off to the houses around those parts and then get back to you, my lovely Reindeer."

"We understand," said the Reindeer, "we know your ways. Ah, yes, you have everything arranged and planned for and nothing can prevent Santa Claus from paying all his visits."

"I should hope not!" exclaimed Santa Claus. "I wouldn't miss my Christmas visits for anything!"

"When they put up apartment houses without fireplaces and chimneys I saw that I could manage with the dumb-waiters and the fire escapes. Yes, Santa Claus can find a way to visit the children on Christmas Eve."

"He wouldn't miss his fun for anything in the world! And I have the loveliest photograph gallery in my memory."

"What!" exclaimed the Reindeer. "Yes," said Santa Claus, "I have and I certainly do love it. There are people who have many photographs of the people they care for about them."

"They have photographs which have been taken of people at all ages and in all sizes, too."

"Well, if Santa Claus had photographs of all the people he cared for he would have so many, oh, so many, that I don't believe there would be a house or a palace or a hotel big enough for all of them."

"A photograph gallery means, you know, a place filled with photographs or pictures."

"Now, as I said, I have all of mine in my memory. In other words I remember just what every sleeping child looks like."

"I see them all, too, when I'm back home and looking at them through my magic telescope as they smile and jump up and down with delight at their gifts."

"But when I want to see these children later on I can close my eyes and think of them and I can remember them so clearly—they are so much in my memory—that I can see each one with my eyes tight shut!"

"That is the way I keep my photograph gallery. And it is a nice way, too."

So Santa Claus chatted as he went from place to place.

He came out from an old white house a little later smiling and laughing, his red cheeks aglow and his merry eyes twinkling with delight.

"Oh, Reindeer," he shouted, "I had the biggest and juiciest orange left for me by the fireplace, and lumps of sugar for all of you!"

"Little Dolly did all that for us. Isn't she the dearest ever?"

"And Reindeer, I left a note for Dicky—five houses down."

"You know Dicky asked me how it was that he had heard the bells jingling from my Reindeer when it hadn't snowed last year and when the ground was hard and dry."

"So I wrote to Dicky and told him how it was. Of course he said that he knew I had ways of getting about, but he hadn't understood about hearing your jingling bells and he hadn't heard them. He was quite sure of that."

"Well, I told him that your bells carried their sound all over the world on Christmas Eve. Those are the bells that Santa's Reindeer have."

"Ah, yes, though you may not be right over each single house—though I may have to leave you here and there for a bit—the sounds from the sleigh-bells carry and where they do not carry there are the echoes from them."

"I wrote him all about that."

So Santa went to house after house, and what stories he had to tell the Reindeer of Christmas trees and beautiful decorations.

"In some places they have the Christmas tree all trimmed for me and then I put the presents on," Santa Claus told the Reindeer.

"Oh, they have different ways," said Santa Claus, "and I like them all."

"Heigh-ho, it's Christmas time! Heigh-ho, it's the merry Christmas season!" shouted Santa Claus gaily.

Practical Suggestion. "Of course," said the man who is in love, "my mind is on my oil wells and other business interests. But this girl is devoted to art. I suppose I'll have to take her to hear the opera."

"Don't do that," replied Miss Cayenne. "If you want to make a serious impression take her to see the oil wells."—Washington Star.

"Dolly Did All That."

"Ah, yes, though you may not be right over each single house—though I may have to leave you here and there for a bit—the sounds from the sleigh-bells carry and where they do not carry there are the echoes from them."

"I wrote him all about that."

LEGION'S NATIONAL CHAPLAIN

Rev. Ezra C. Clemans, Known as "Padre," Has Seen Long Military Service.

It was on the Mexican border that Ezra C. Clemans, national chaplain of the American Legion, won the title of "Padre," which has clung to him throughout the years of the World war and up to the time of his selection as new chaplain of the veterans' organization.

For 37 years, Chaplain Clemans has given service to the military organizations of his state and nation. He graduated from Shattuck school, a semi-military academy in his home state of Minnesota, in his nineteenth year, and in the same year enlisted as a private in the Faribault Guards, an organization of that city. His early training was expected to fit him for life work as a physician, but a visit to a revival meeting and conversion there, led to a change of destiny and consecration of his life to the clergy.

At the opening of the Spanish-American war, he became chaplain with the rank of captain, and served with the Twelfth Minnesota regiment throughout that war.

For six months in 1916, Chaplain Clemans spent his time with Minnesota guardsmen on the Mexican border. It was there that the men learned to call him "Padre." At the outbreak of the World war he entered federal service as chaplain with the rank of major and was attached to the One Hundred and Thirty-sixth infantry. On arrival overseas he became chaplain of the Seventh Aviation center at Anault, an important air service station, later to be named as senior chaplain of the Intermediate section, S. O. S. On his return to the United States, he remained with the Fifty-eighth infantry until that organization was demobilized in October, 1919. As a member of the Minnesota National Guard, Chaplain Clemans has been assigned to the One Hundred and Thirty-fifth infantry.

During the World war, Chaplain Clemans is said to have preached to more men than any other chaplain in the A. E. F. He was well known for his visits to the sick. One of his traits is a faith in service men, to whom he loaned thousands of dollars which was invariably repaid.

His career in civil life is equally as prominent as that in the military. He is at present pastor of a Methodist church in Owatonna, Minn., which pastorate follows a long and useful service to his church. Shortly after entering the ministry he became district superintendent, and was one of a group of pioneers who brought about construction of 30 new churches in the state. Chaplain Clemans was field representative for the board of conference claimants of the M. E. church, which helped to make available a fund of $10,000,000 for the care of retired ministers, their widows and orphans.

According to his recollection of his life work he also had a prominent part in Anti-Saloon league work in Minnesota.

In the Legion he became affiliated with Calhoun post in Minnesota in 1919. He was elected chaplain of Owatonna post on acceptance of the pastorate in that city, and held the office of department chaplain during 1921-1922. Chaplain Clemans was one of the supporters of the newly-organized Chaplains' association within the ranks of the Legion, and has many achievements to his credit in sponsoring the work of the organization both in his own post and throughout the state.

Finds Jobs for Many Veterans. A total of 4,184 jobs were found for veterans in Kansas City, Mo., by the employment committee of the American Legion, according to a recent report submitted to the organization. At least 400 of the men thus employed are in permanent positions as a result of the Legion's efforts in placement.

According to the figures nearly 1,000 of the positions found for the former service men were permanent positions, the remainder representing the short-time jobs which are usually afforded veterans of more or less transient character. These jobs, committee members declare, have permitted many men to retain their self-respect, because the work forestalled requests for charity or relief.

Mrs. Pershing's Birthplace. A marker denoting the place of the birth of the mother of Gen. John J. Pershing has been erected near Maryville, Tenn., by American Legion members of that state. The tablet is on the site of the old log cabin which served as the home of the leader's mother. A special ceremony, participated in by many prominent Legionnaires and Tennesseans, marked the dedication.
