MAKE A GOOD SHIPMENT

From Wednesday's Daily—
Several days ago the firm of Chas. Troop & Co., extensive breeders and shippers of live stock and hogs, noticed that the hog market was much better in St. Louis than at either Omaha or Kansas City and accordingly they had two cars of fine Cass county porkers shipped to the market at St. Louis and with the result that they realized a very neat sum for their close study of the market, as the hogs at St. Louis brought a profit of 30c a hundred net over the price of the Omaha market. This shows that it pays the stock shipper to keep a close watch on the market.

EAGLE MARSHAL
SCARES YEGGS
WITH HIS GUN

WILLIAM NORRIS IS REAL HERO IN HOME TOWN BECAUSE OF FIGHT HE MADE.

ROBBERS CUT COMMUNICATION

Telephone and Telegraph Lines Severed by Parties Before Making Attempt at the Bank.

From Monday's Daily—
The village of Eagle is still throbbing with the intense excitement that followed the attempted robbery early Saturday morning of the Farmers State Bank of that place, and for his real bravery in the gun fight with the yeggs, William Norris, the town marshal, is receiving the just tribute of his fellow townsmen for his good work.

After the gun fight and the escape of the robbers, Mr. Norris and Merle V. Lanning, cashier of the bank, drove five miles to a farmhouse to telephone word of the attempted robbery to Lincoln as all lines of communication between Eagle and the outside world was severed by the yeggs before starting in on their work.

The story of the affair as related by Mr. Norris is a thrilling one and that he was not a victim of the gun fire of the robbers is a fact on which he is sure. Mr. Norris had just started out from the building of the State bank of Eagle, where he makes his headquarters at night, to make a round of inspection, when he heard a tapping sound. It was dark. There was dim

"It sounded like somebody tapping the rim of an automobile wheel," he said, "just like you do when you're changing a tire and the rim is stuck. But it aroused my suspicions because I didn't think anybody would be changing tires at 2:30 in the morning."

"I was trying to locate where the sound was coming from, when I heard the explosion at the bank, just a block away. I started up the street from the bank. Then I heard a much louder explosion. When I was half-way up the block on the other side of the street from the building at the corner, thinks I, that fellow is there for no good, so I let go at him. He fired back a couple of times and I ran to the corner just opposite him. I got in the doorway of the building and saw the other of the bandits standing just across from the bank to the north. I shot twice at him. Then one of the bandits fired a shotgun charge of buckshot at me, and it struck the top of my head, shattering the glass. I'm glad I wasn't hit.

"Just across the street from me to the north was a lumber yard, and while I was blazin' away at the two bandits a gun blazed away from among the piles of lumber and a bullet whistled past, striking the wall just beside me. Then I saw that there were three of them and that they had me surrounded. I dropped on my stomach and emptied my gun on them. I tried to crawl backwards on my stomach like a crawfish to the alley, so that I could run down to the bank and get my shotgun which I kept loaded with buckshot. But I finally just stood up and made a run for it.

"When I got the shotgun and returned the robbers had gone."

Believes Wounded One

Norris fired fifteen shots at the robbers. He believes that he may have wounded one of them. Two bullet holes in the building on the corner just north of the bank, and beside which the robber was stationed by the tree, show, from the line of Norris' fire and the place where the robber was standing, that the two bullets passed within a very few inches of the robber.

The wall beside which Norris was standing when he did most of his shooting is generously dotted with bullet holes around the place where the first robber was standing just beside the bank, show that Norris was making it rather warm for him, too. The fourth robber is believed to have been working inside the bank building during the time the firing was going on.

The situation inside the vault was a serious puzzle to officers who were working on the case Saturday. The vault door, which had been dynamited is not a heavy door. It is made of two plates of steel, each about a half inch thick. It was badly bent, but still locked this morning.

At the same time, within the vault, was the great, heavy bank safe. The doors, weighing perhaps five hundred pounds each, stood open, at right angles to the safe, one of them torn completely off the upper hinges and hanging at an angle from the lower bent hinge.

Robbers Miss a Chance

The time-lock on the cash compartment within the safe was torn completely off its hinges, and lay on the floor in front of the safe. It is an extraordinarily heavy door, a little more than a foot square, but weighing nearly two hundred pounds. Officers believe that the bank safe in the vault had not been closed; that the robbers did not get into the vault at all, but that the confusion from the explosions in the outer door was sufficient, with the extreme weight of the safe doors themselves hanging outward, to wrench the doors off their hinges. The robbers probably never knew that within this door, which resisted their two first explosions, the way was entirely clear to the cash.

Had it not been for the brave battle of the marshal, it is believed, there is no doubt but that a third charge would have been placed in the vault door, and that it would have fallen. But the battle was getting too hot for comfort and reinforcements were beginning to come, as the townspeople hearing the firing, hastily pulled on a few clothes and rushed into the streets.

Norris has been chiefly bemoaning the fact that he did not have his shotgun with him.

"I would have gotten one or two of them, if I had had it," he said. "And that was the first time I ever made my rounds without it as long as I can remember. I kept it loaded with buckshot and from the distance I had to shoot from, I would certainly have got one of them, perhaps two."

Four hundred telephone wires were cut by the robbers, just outside the telephone office, before they started work, putting every telephone in Eagle out of commission, except one. And nobody knew that one was in commission. It was the "phone of the Peter's bakery just next to the telephone office, and the wire runs directly into the switchboard without passing through the cable containing the rest of the wires.

The telegraph wires at the railroad station were also cut, and the yeggs carried a ladder from the station to the telephone cables. Six wires lead out of the power plant, and one of them, the one which carries the current to the street light on the corner beside the bank, was cut. The manager of the power plant told newspaper representatives Saturday that the fact that the yeggs knew the proper one of these six wires to cut, convinced him that they knew the ground thoroughly. No one except somebody who had examined these wires and ascertained beforehand, would have known enough to cut that wire, he said.

The plate glass windows were completely blown from their sashes by the explosion which wrecked the vault. The robbers entered the building by jimmying a side window. A number of empty cartridges were found beside a telephone pole in the rear of the bank building, showing that one of the robbers emptied his gun and reloaded it there.

BOY SCOUT NOTES

The executive committee of the Boy Scouts at its session this week took up the matter of securing assistance for Mr. C. H. Peden, scoutmaster of the local troops, who has been laboring so faithfully in the upbuilding of the scouts. The board has recommended to the national council that Henry Lescock and Joseph A. Capwell be commissioned as scoutmasters and the new scoutmasters will be placed in charge of Troops Two and Three.

The local Boy Scouts will occupy the period from July 10th to July 19 at Camp Quivera near Louisville which is maintained by the Lincoln Boy Scouts and where the Plattsmouth boys had such a delightful time last summer.

Another of the activities planned for immediately after the close of school is a two day hike of the boys under the supervision of C. H. Peden, to Camp Gifford, the camp of the Omaha scouts, where they will enjoy a short recreation period.

MAY MUSICAL FESTIVAL IS HELD AT WESLEYAN COLLEGE

Number of Very Interesting Numbers Given at Methodist University By the Musicians.

From Tuesday's Daily—
The first May music festival was held May 5 and 6 at Nebraska Wesleyan university in University Place, under the direction of Dean Parvin Witte of the college of fine arts. Three concerts are being held. Mesdames Allen Taylor and Raymond Havens of Kansas City and Messrs. Carleton Cummings and Howard E. Preston of Chicago presented a varied program this afternoon in the university auditorium with a large and appreciative audience. Mrs. Taylor sang a group of very modern songs by Winter Watts, the purpose of which is to present thru melody the atmosphere and sounds of Italian life at Paestum, Amalfi and Florence. Mrs. Havens' best effort was in a number from Brahms, Vergeblisches Standchen. Mr. Cummings was a former student in the Wesleyan conservatory. His tenor voice is wonderful in strength and sweetness. He was accompanied at the piano by Miss Freda Raham who was formerly an instructor at Wesleyan. Mr. Preston delighted his hearers with Damosch's presentation of Kipling's famous poem, "Danny Deever," which he sang with much dramatic effect.

The purpose of Dean Witte in instituting the May festival which he hopes will become an annual feature at Wesleyan is to maintain and extend musical culture in Nebraska. Many are here from out state to enjoy these concerts. Miss Florence Maebeth of the Chicago civic opera company, appeared in the evening concert of May 5.
