From Saturday's Daily—The members of the class in piano instruction of Mrs. Lillian Freeman were heard last evening in a most enjoyable recital at the home of their instructor, and which was very largely attended, although the on-coming of the storm late in the evening caused many from out of the city to leave before the entertainment was entirely completed.

The attractiveness of the Freeman home was added to by the decorations of the spring flowers, peonies being used extensively in the decorative plan of the gathering and the rooms of the home were filled to their capacity by the audience of delighted friends and relatives of the young people.

Not only was the musical portion of the program all that could possibly be asked, but the members of the party were also delighted with a number of readings by Misses Helene Perry, Dorothy Gradoville and Helen Beson that served to make the program doubly enjoyable.

Of the musical program there cannot in justice to the young people taking part be any distinction made in the various numbers as they were all excellent and showed the greatest ability on the part of the young people and the thoughtful and earnest efforts that have been given by

The McClusky family were also at Kansas City during the great Shrine convocation and found the city very colorful and hospitable with the host of Nobles as the official guests of the city.

TOURIST DIES HERE FROM AN ATTACK OF HEART TROUBLE

James Curson, En Route to Danville, Illinois, Dies Here Yesterday at Camp Near Ferry.

From Saturday's Daily—Yesterday afternoon death ruthlessly ended the journey of James Curson of Thermopolis, Wyoming, back to his old home at Danville, Illinois, when the unfortunate man died at a camp where he and two companions were stopping near the Missouri river ferry landing. One of the companions of the unfortunate man, F. H. Ruyle, had gone to the ferry to talk with John Richardson, the ferryman, as to getting over the river and left Curson sitting beside the campfire where they had prepared dinner, some distance from the ferry and a few moments later when he returned he found Curson crouched down near the fire and apparently in a lifeless condition and before medical aid arrived from the city the man was dead.

From the stories told by F. H. Ruyle and James Gover, the companions of Curson, it seems that he has been having a hard time with attacks of heart trouble ever since they left Denver for the east. Mr. Ruyle, who knew the deceased for the past two years at Thermopolis, states that when Curson was driving from Cheyenne to Denver in his car, he had an accident that caused a very serious blow on his head and from the effects of which he has been suffering for several weeks. He was sick in Denver for some time and was urged there to stay at a hospital but insisted on having Ruyle and over accompany him in his car as far as they were going on their way east. Mr. Ruyle being en route to Villisca, Iowa. They started out and the companions found that Curson was addicted to the excessive use of pain-killing tablets which he took for the pain that came from his injured head and which was having a very bad effect on his heart. He was warned at several places they stopped at by physicians that this practice would have a fatal result as it did. The companions state that some times after he would take several of the tablets he would enter the most intense terror from his heart for hours and they had urged him to desist from the habit but without success. At the town of Holdbrook, Curson had medical treatment and the physician had then told him that the use of the pain-killing tablets was shortening his life.

After the discovery of the condition of Curson here Dr. P. J. Flynn was called by the companions of the unfortunate man but his heart was stilled when the physician arrived. The county coroner was notified of the death and an inquest was called this morning at the Sattler chapel at 9:30 to inquire into the death and a jury composed of W. F. Evers, F. P. Busch, D. A. Young, J. K. Pollock, A. W. Clouid and W. T. Hutcheson was impaneled by Sheriff Stewart and heard the evidence presented by the physician and the two companions of the man. A verdict of death from heart failure caused by the use of the tablets was given by the jury.

Mrs. Pickwell Here from South.

Mrs. G. V. Pickwell, who has been in the south with her son, John Paul Pickwell, where they are on the farm which he recently purchased, returned home last week and was well pleased to see old Cass county again, with its large trees and green fields and its smiling friendly people. Not that she did not like the south with its pleasant climate and its friendly people, but the home land is so different with its wide expanse of farm lands and its roominess, and the immense size of the trees compared with the small mesquite bush of the south. Regarding their interests there she spoke well, liking the place and knowing it was very profitable. They have some 35 acres of cotton, and have planted a number of trees and will expect to plant more in the coming fall. They now have out a hundred grape fruit and oranges. John Paul likes the south well.

DEATH CALLS PIONEER NEBRASKA LADY ON THE COAST

Mrs. Lucy J. Martin Passes Away at San Jose, After Illness of Some Duration.

From Saturday's Daily—Another of the old time residents of Cass county who represents the fast disappearing ranks of the pioneers of the great west, was called to her last reward when Mrs. Lucy J. Martin passed away Thursday night at 11:30 at her home in San Jose, California, at the age of eighty-four years.

For some years past, Mrs. Martin has been living on the west coast where the milder climate was more suitable for her health and there she has up to a short time ago been enjoying excellent health, but of late she has felt very much the burdens of her years and been gradually failing until she gently fell asleep in the rest that knows no awakening.

The deceased lady was a native of Montier, Canton Bern, Switzerland, where she was born January 12, 1839. Her maiden name was Lucy J. Pangard and when a young child her parents with their little family prepared to leave their native land for the new world and sailing from LaHarve, France, they found in the course of a few weeks that they were in the new land of America. The little family located in the state of Indiana where in 1851 the father died and left the care of the family on the mother.

Here it was that Lucy Pangard was reared to womanhood and on May 3, 1857, at Fort Wayne, Indiana, she was united in marriage to C. J. Martin, a young man who had also a few years previously come to America from his native land of France to dwell in the land of the free.

In the fall of 1857, Mr. and Mrs. Martin came west to Nebraska and located in the vicinity of Plattsmouth where Mr. Martin engaged in farming and continued in active work on the farm until 1885 when the family removed to Plattsmouth to make their home. Mr. and Mrs. Martin continued to make their home here until 1906, when the moved to California, where the husband and father was called to his reward.

Mrs. Martin is survived by three children, Charles L. Martin of this city, Mrs. May N. Creamer and Mrs. Lillie Foster of San Jose, California. At the time of her death, Mrs. A. H. Duxbury, a granddaughter, was visiting at San Jose and was able to spend the last days with the aged grandmother.

Mrs. Martin was the last of the original charter members of the First Presbyterian church of this city.

POPULAR LOUISVILLE GIRL WEDS YOUNG FARMER

Ceremony Performed at Home of the Bride's Mother—Only Near Relatives Present.

From Saturday's Daily—A quiet wedding occurred on Wednesday morning of last week at 10 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Rachel Noyes when her fourth daughter, Miss Grace Noyes became the bride of Lawrence Meisinger, the third son of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Meisinger, a highly respected young farmer of this vicinity. Only the immediate relatives of the young people were present.

They were attended by Miss Clara Noyes, sister of the bride, and Carl Meisinger, brother of the groom. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. E. Goings, pastor of the Christian church at Louisville. The impressive double ring ceremony was used. The bride wore a handsome white silk crepe and carried a bouquet of pink rose buds. The bridesmaid wore a gown of white crepe de chine. The house was beautifully decorated with garden flowers and streamers of crepe paper.

After the wedding ceremony, a luncheon was served, the young couple leaving the same day for a short honeymoon trip by automobile to Hastings. They will go to housekeeping at once on the farm of Allie Meisinger, east of Louisville. Mr. Meisinger and his bride are among the most popular of our young people. The bride has been the recipient of many social affairs in her honor. The last was a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. George Dolan, who was assisted in this by Mrs. Arthur Meisinger, a sister-in-law of the groom, and the bride-to-be received many handsome and useful gifts as a token of the high regard and affection felt for her by her many friends.—Louisville Courier.

Gerald Fleming was a passenger this morning for Omaha, where he will spend the day attending to some matters of business.
