ents, and they are to have a program, refreshments and a general good time. Miss Olive Gass, of Plattsmouth will have charge of the refreshments and Mrs. Myra McDonald will have the matter of providing the program in hand.

You may look for a very good time and a good program and an opportunity to meet the friends whom you know there in the years gone by. The history of Rock Bluffs in the years that have gone by was a good portion of the early history of Nebraska, for it was a most lively frontier town during the early days. All interested will please communicate with C. L. Graves of Union as to the refreshments and the program as well as any aid they can render for the making of this feature of the reunion a success.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Robertson and family of this city have been enjoying a visit from two of their old friends, Mrs. C. H. Kirkpatrick, of Alvo, and Mrs. M. L. Thomas of Pond Creek, Oklahoma. Mrs. Thomas is the widow of one of the old time newspaper men of Nebraska, and who for several years was engaged in operating a newspaper in this city. Mr. Thomas came here in 1878 and with H. M. Bushnell, established the Cass County Chronicle, which they published for a number of years and later was out in the western part of the state and published for a time the Chieftain at Red Cloud, later returning to Plattsmouth in 1891 and publishing the Cass County Independent, but which he operated only a short time. He later moved to Oklahoma, where the family has since resided, Mr. Thomas passing away a number of years ago.

WILL PROD THE VOTERS TO POLLS NEXT NOVEMBER

Manufacturers and Business Will Urge Careless Citizens to Exercise Privilege.

Half of the qualified voters of Nebraska and other states who went hunting or otherwise deserted themselves on election day in 1922 are to be prodded next November into belated recognitions of their civic rights and obligations by the manufacturers of those states.

An elaborate campaign to get out the vote, with manufacturers and business men beating the bushes for stragglers, was outlined here by the National Manufacturers' association.

More than 100 thousand members, several thousand of whom are in the Cornhusker state, have been requested to start immediately to interest the voters in the issues of the campaign.

According to representatives of the association, the effort will be nonpartisan and in the "broad spirit of urging every Nebraskan enjoying the franchise to go to the polls and vote.

John E. Edgerton, president of the association, declares that "if the people all would vote there need be no fear of radicalism or bolshevism, as the overwhelming number of conservative Americans would overwhelm a radical move, no matter how intelligently directed."

National organizations of all kinds will be urged to throw themselves into the campaign with the view of bringing about an election that will "be truly representative of the will of the people."

Chamber of Commerce, Rotary and Kiwanis clubs, merchants' and manufacturers' groups, as well as religious and fraternal organizations, are expected to take the lead in this plan to induce the stay-at-homes, to vote for president.

It is learned that this campaign was mapped out at a conference held here several months ago, which had before it an analysis of election returns for 1920 and 1922, indicating that each year the American voters are giving less and less attention to the selection of office holders.

Mr. Edgerton is advising the members of the Manufacturers' association that if they do their part they need have no fear of the result when the nation goes to the voting booths.
