MERCY TO THE FATHERLESS

O Israel, return unto the Lord thy God; for in thee the fatherless findeth mercy.—Hosea 14:1, 3.

This will be a great year for fiction.

"Bring the government back to the people."—John W. Davis.

John W. Davis rallies the solid Democratic party behind him.

Our observation is that women dress cooler than men in summer and colder in winter.

Years ago they got the buggy and went sparking; now they got the auto and go parking.

W. J. Bryan is well pleased with Davis' letter of acceptance. Every democrat should be.

Something tells us that a real official will disclose an average of one incumbent per office.

If words were as physically injurious as blows, most of us would spend most of our time in the hospital.

La Follette wants his campaign fund on the "cash and carry" principle. But he won't carry Nebraska.

Music formerly was rendered by long-haired artists. Now the most we get is the chin music of the bobbed hair.

Poor Cain! There were no sensational newspapers. His case has come down through the ages as plain murder.

A soft answer may turn away wrath, but there are occasions when it takes a hard punch to put it away for the count.

The conscientious character of the murder mitigates it in Mr. Darrow's eyes, but he wouldn't hang even a conscientious murderer.

As we understand it, a murderer hasn't a chance to escape a long and costly trial in Chicago even when he pleads guilty the first day.

The soviet president escaped lightning the other day because he had no metal on him. The Russian treasury is similarly safeguarded.

The more the people read of La Follette's propositions the more votes will be sent to the side of the house represented by John W. Davis.

The Prince of Wales has planned his itinerary to miss all the big cities in this country, but Plattsmouth won't feel slighted if the others don't.

The acceptance address of John W. Davis is a wonderful paper and many leading republicans commend it as one of the greatest speeches ever uttered by mortal man.

Before counting the labor vote or that of any other group for any candidate because of the instructions of some committee it would be well to remember that American voters cast their ballots in secret and for whom they please.

Every democrat is proud of his standard bearer, John W. Davis. He is second to no man in ability and everything else that goes to make up the qualities of a chief executive of the American republic. He arouses the admiration of all party elements.

The democratic party is the only organization today that is united in a good cause, with no dissension in its ranks. The only hope the republicans have of carrying Nebraska is for La Follette to get enough democrats to help in their plan.

The democrats have something to fight for in this campaign in Nebraska. In the first place we have one of the greatest men in the union for president and one of the best men in the state for governor—John N. Norton. All we need is a strong pull altogether and victory will result.

The grand old democrats have lived a long time. It came soon after the revolutionary war. Its principles have always been right, and will live as long as life lasts. With such a leader as John W. Davis at its head nationally and John W. Norton for governor, we cannot help but win by "all pulling together."

All that most of us know is that we are on the way.

A model husband is one who is as nice to his wife in private as he is in company.

Only a few more months in which to do something to be thankful for this Thanksgiving.

When a man gets disappointed in love he goes around blaming the world in general for it.

Sleep is a great thing. It keeps some people from thinking about themselves 24 hours a day.

Sometimes a woman can have as much fun biting her beads as a man can have gnawing his whiskers.

Now is the time to start letting your whiskers grow as a preparation against Christmas neckties.

We might even try to "Keep cool with Coolidge" if he didn't wear such an unpleasant look on his face.

Between trying to keep up appearances and keeping down expenses, the average man is in a rotten bad fix.

A New Yorker's glass eye exploded the other day. Probably it had been seeing things and wanted to make a report.

Judging by the New York newspapers, a society woman can get her picture printed just for walking with a dog.

The new-fashioned woman who travels with a thermos bottle used to have a grandfathers who carried a demijohn.

A Kansan rejected a mail order bride because she was sixty pounds overweight. Heavy romance was too much for him.

The modern man may be willing to vote as his father did, but that's about the only old-fashioned custom that he'll cling to.

No married man should feel flattered when a flapper tries to flirt with him. She is merely giving a manifestation of husband hunger.

Church members will pay an evangelist to preach for them, and the same sort of a sermon from their pastor would make them fighting mad.

It's bad enough to have a road hog refuse to dim his lights when you meet him on the road at night, but when he turns his spotlight in your eyes, as many of them do, it's the limit.

Black and white are the colors of a new line of buses operating in New York. Somehow that combination reminds us of something in the dim past, but hanged if we can remember what.

If the pacifists who are fighting defense day would think twice they would realize how preposterous is the effort to make a militarist out of Mr. Coolidge or make anything else out of him, for that matter.

The Franks case has cost the state and the families of the defendants $600,000. It is estimated. Looks a little steep for a case in which not even a jury was employed. But, then, there were the alienists.

More than 8,000 persons were killed by automobiles in this country in the first half of 1924. This is a total loss of staggering proportions and no corresponding gain can be checked up against the grief the figures suggest.

The inter-allied conference is thinking about nominating an American banker to be agent general to put the Dawes reparations plan into effect. As many suspicious persons had supposed from the start, the conference evidently was called for no other purpose than to put in a knock on the La Follette candidacy.

Taking Mexican revolutions out of our lives is just like taking juleps from Kentucky colonels, or killing off Lenin, finally and definitely. It's too terrible to think about. But somehow we feel civilization will survive. It didn't crack when long hair for women went. Civilization is pretty tough, when all's said and done.

BY THEIR NAMES

With Davis and Bryan the democratic nominees for president and vice president attention is brought to the popularity and prevalence of certain names in the United States.

Davis is the most prevalent name among the three presidential candidates, but so far no man bearing his name has ever been chief executive of the United States. But no Coolidge was ever president until death took Harding. The president of the Confederacy, however, was Jefferson Davis.

But what's in a name? Theatrical people recognize certain publicity value in names. For instance, some have stage names which appeal more over the footlights than their home names would. In the coming presidential campaign the team candidates, "Davis and Bryan," should get democratic votes where no other names could poll them. Coolidge and Dawes smack of cold and machine-like republicanism. It couldn't be anything else. Coolidge is primarily a New England name as far as the south is concerned. Dawes is strictly republican. Perusal of the famous "Who's Who," shows twenty Coolidges have attained fame sufficiently to be listed and most of them are from New England. The Dawes family broke into the pages six times. But Coolidge and Dawes are distinctly names of no southern appeal and, too, conjure up visions of "Boston police strike" and "Hell and Maria," whatever conception the human mind can have of the latter combination.

La Follette is way in the minority on the name business. His tribe is scarce in the book of fame, three in number having been recorded therein. But his name always brings up the thought of a radical republican who can be progressive, socialist or something else with apparent ease under the plea of "for the people."

But Davis—that name has been familiar in every nook and corner. It has a democratic ring almost as valuable as that of Jackson and Jefferson. The "Who's Who" has thirteen pages of members of Davis families who have attained success worthy of chronicling in the biennial report of notables.

And Bryan—not a democrat since the days of 1896 has failed to get the significance of that name. It was in that year that William Jennings Bryan was dubbed the "Boy Orator of the Platte" and was nominated for president after his "Cross of Thorns and Cross of Gold" speech which stampeded the convention. He has been a factor in the democratic party ever since. His fight nominated Woodrow Wilson over Champ Clark. It was Bryan's voice which changed the temperament of the delegates and defeated the anti-klan plank in the last convention. Thus, his brother, Charlie, governor of Nebraska, has a good democratic name of effectiveness for the coming campaign. In the book of notables, the Bryan family appears approximately 30 times.

In looking over the history of our presidents, it will be found that there is no Smith upon the list. Yet, in the war department filing cabinets are service records of more than 60,000 Smiths who served during the war and who will have to be given a soldier bonus after they have been identified. Smith is the most prevalent name in the country. Johnsons rank next, according to the war records with 40,000, and we have had one president by that name—Andrew Johnson. The Browns in war numbered 30,000 but none has ever been chief executive of the nation. The Williamses mustered 29,000 during the war but have never had a son in the White House.

But call the roll of general names and you will find several missing as we have only had 29 presidents during almost an eury and a half. We have had two Adamsons, two Harrisons, a Madison, a Monroe, a Jackson, a Taylor, a Buchanan, a Cleveland and a Wilson.

We next will have a Davis. The name is truly democratic.

DEBTS OF NATIONS

A certain bankers' trust company of New York through its department of foreign information makes public some interesting facts. It says that the internal debt of France on the 31st of December was $52,247,000.000, the external debt $28,578,000.000. The internal debt of Great Britain was $32,709,000,000, the external debt $6,290,000,000, making a total of $38,999,000,000. The internal debt of Italy was $13,393,000.000, the external debt $19,354,000.000 a total of $32,747,000,000. Reducing these figures to meet the varying degree of inflation, the debt of France is estimated at $17,555,000.000, Great Britain $24,999,000,000, Italy $6,542,000,000 and the United States $14,514,000,000. Comparing these figures with the estimated national wealth of these countries it is seen that the debt of Great Britain is 35.71 per cent of her wealth, that of Italy 30.78 per cent, that of France 30.32 per cent. The percentage of interest charged to national income of Great Britain is 10.52 per cent, France 9.30 per cent, Italy 6.18 per cent and the United States 2.18 per cent.

The conclusion reached by the statistician is that the national debt of Great Britain is the heaviest, that of France next, that of the United States next and that of Italy, last. But, in proportion to public wealth, that of Great Britain comes first, Italy and France follow, and the United States comes last, with only about one-fifth or one-sixth of the percentage of the other countries.

PART OF THE RECORD

The time demands plain speaking. It is not a welcome task to recount the multiplied scandals of these melancholy years; a senator of the United States convicted of corrupt practice in the purchase of his senatorial seat; a secretary of the interior in return for bribes granting away the naval oil reserves so necessary to the security of the country; a secretary of the navy ignorant of the spoliation in progress if not indifferent to it; an attorney general admitting bribetakers to the department of justice, making them his boon companions and utilizing the agencies of the law for purposes of private and political vengeance; a chief of the veterans' bureau stealing and helping others steal the millions in money and supplies provided for the relief of those defenders of the nation most entitled to the nation's gratitude and care. Such crimes are too gross to be forgotten or forgiven.—John W. Davis, in Letter of Acceptance.

INDUBITABLY VISIONED

Here is the Davis creed, admittedly idealistic, yet its attainment is the consummation which the first practical progressives of history—the founders of our government—indubitably visioned:

"From my point of view he only deserves to be called a progressive who cannot see a wrong persist without an effort to redress it, or a right denied without an effort to protect it; who feels a deep concern for the economic welfare of the United States, but realizes that the making of better men and better women is a matter greater still; who thinks of every governmental policy first of all in its bearing upon human rights rather than upon material things; who believes profoundly in human equality and detests privilege in whatever form or in whatever disguise, and who finds the true test of success in the welfare of the many and not the prosperity and comfort of the few. The civic unity of America is not the dollar but the individual man. All that goes to make better and happier and freer men and women is progress; all else is reaction. Progressives of this sort, though they may not care to use the name, nevertheless in their hearts are democrats."

To that brave statement we can all say amen.

City children are healthier than country children, according to New York experts, but a farmer never moves to town for his health.

England is putting out millions in an endeavor to raise the German fleet sunk during the war. England will no doubt find it much easier to raise the money than to raise the fleet.

Reports telling of the millions that the Russian soviet government has spent to stir up rebellion in various countries indicate that the soviet government is not getting its money's worth.
