Advice to Freshmen
Freshmen, for four weeks you have been allowed to tread the primrose path unmolested and unadvised. The time has come when we of the senior class take it upon our shoulders to assume the responsibility of letting you know in a slang phrase, what is what. We do not expect you to follow the various enumerations listed below but a vicissitude is compulsory.

You must not employ machinations upon your superior fellow men. You must condescend to please the powers that be.

Your men must be that which cannot be criticized. Do not roost in seniors' cars. You access to the dictionary is limited.

If any member of the senior class does not wish you to speak, bow your head in utter submission and pass on.

It has been said that the freshmen have infringed upon the rights of the seniors. The time has come (to pass) when you must step down from your perch and spend the rest of your year in subjection. In other words, humble freshmen, "Watch your step."

The Hikers' Wienie Roast
Thursday of last week the hiking club, composed of the teachers and the high school girls, set out after school, each girl carrying all the wienies, fruit, etc., that she thought she could eat. In spite of the wind that did its best to blow them out of their course, they hiked out to the Ahrens land on the south side of the O street road. There they built a fire which nature fanned so vigorously that it had to be whipped many times to make it stay in its place as a good fire should. The wienies and marshmallows were roasted and eaten with the usual jolly picnic spirit. On the return trip kind motorists took pity on the plodding pedestrians and brought them on into town.

Elsie Stool is back in school this week. The total enrollment of the high school now is fifty-four.

Mr. Turby motored to Lincoln Monday afternoon.

Miss Schreiner, teacher of the third and fourth grades, has resigned her position on account of ill health. As yet no one has been selected to fill the vacancy.

Miss Owen donated two books to the school, Smith's "Short Plays" and "Plant Production," by Moore and Hallagan. We appreciate these books very much.

Greenhalch spent Sunday at Arbor Lodge until her parents, who motored down from Lincoln.

We haven't had any mysteries in these items so far, but that does not mean that there have been none. For instance, "Why does Clyde Fleischman sleep so much in school hours?" and "Why can't the freshmen learn their places?"

Miss Lucille and Thelma Martin entertained at dinner Tuesday evening for the Misses Freda and Alberta Peterson and Mr. Henning Johnson.
