CASTING REPROACH

If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you; on their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified.

—I Peter, 4:14.

Fools are apt to imitate only the defects of their betters.

Opportunity passes by quicker than a high-powered auto.

If there is no hell, to what place shall we consign the rich people we envy?

Horrid thought. It may be a diseased gland that makes reformers so good.

You can't always tell a self-made man, but it isn't necessary. He'll tell it.

The women should be applauded for their noble efforts in getting out the vote.

The village is a place where central answers you when she gets thru talking to Bill.

Brevity may be the soul of wit, but there is nothing funny about being short of sleep.

Three weeks from today and the tale will be told. Every voter has a duty to perform—go to the polls and vote.

The nearer the election, John W. Davis comes closer to the people and they are rallying to his support. Money, and millions of it, won't defeat him.

Teapot Dome and the gang that defended the government in the oil lease, are living issues and Dawes and other noted speakers dare not touch upon that question.

There was nothing in Dawes' speech in Omaha to commend him, and even the republicans were disappointed. Abuse of Senator La Follette and Brookhart is his only issue.

Borah and Kenyon believe in purging the republican party from within. Their adherence to Taft in 1912 was followed by the election of Harding as the next republican president.

Clinton Gilbert, famous Washington correspondent, is unable to define a progressive. Easy. A progressive is a chap who thinks the republicans ought to conduct a national campaign without a slush fund.

Naturalists continue to warn us from time to time that, unless the slaughter of fur-bearing animals is stopped, their species will become extinct. But the husbands and fathers who buy the furs know there is no such luck.

Time makes peculiar changes in economies. A faded old newspaper reminds us that Virginia, in 1755, fixed the salary of a clergyman at 16,000 pounds of tobacco a year. It's a rare clergyman who gets the equivalent today. An odd state of affairs, that the most important "calling" in life pays the least.

We note with some amusement the American Bar Association returned a short time ago from England after presenting a statue of Blackstone to their British colleagues. Why they should honor a man who sentenced two little boys to be hanged, and a 13-year-old girl to be burned, besides half a dozen women to be burned for witchcraft, is really hard to fathom. If we are going to erect monuments to bigots and fanatics, let's begin at home.

We put an administration into power in Washington, D. C., for four years. Canada puts a party into power until, deadlocked and unable to win a vote of confidence, it automatically has to call a new election. Thus, a party might be in power in Canada for years or for only a few months. But since Canada confederated its provinces in 1867, it has had only 16 changes of national administrations—roughly, one for every four years, like us. But it has what might help us—longer good administrations and shorter punk ones.

WHITE HOUSE MEMOIRS

Unless gossip is irresponsible we have the promise of a flood of memoirs dealing with the White House and its life from women who have presided there, or who have been conspicuous in its social activities.

Mrs. Wilson is said to plan the editing of the personal letters of her husband for publication. Mrs. Harding is quoted as intending to prepare an elaborate biography of her husband in collaboration with an experienced biographer. And—most exciting of all—all the gossips do say that Alice Roosevelt Longworth is writing her memoirs. This is unusual, thus making it all the more interesting.

Mrs. Taft is the first of the women of the White House, we believe, to have written memoirs. Her book is very human and will be of real value to future historians of the mansion of the presidents. But no other "first lady" has established a precedent. Comparatively few of them would have been capable of a literary venture. Dolly Madison could have given us a fascinating volume of incalculable value if she could have written—but her personal letters.

The only lady of the White House in the earlier days who has left us all letters point to her literary limpidities of the life there was the daughter-in-law of John Tyler, who was the hostess until Tyler's second marriage, and her published letters, to her sister are sprightly, humorous, very human and altogether delightful. But she was young, and the life was interesting—all a drama, not vastly different from that which she had followed on the stage. No one can read these letters without a regret that more have not followed her example.

Nehawka

with witches, owls, Jack o'Lanterns, etc., made by the pupils of that room.

A scoreless game was played Saturday afternoon on the Weeping Water gridiron between the grade team of that school and the local line-smashers. Nehawka won the toss and chose to defend the east goal. "Puss" kicked off thirty yards to "Dick," the heady little Weeping Water quarter, who was downed in his tracks by "Jim." Our squad held their opponents for downs and took the ball to Weeping Water's thirty yard line. Line smashes, end runs and aerial attacks failed to give either side the necessary yardage for a counter. When the last quarter started, "Dick's" eleven had the ball within six yards of Nehawka's goal and had three tries to put it over, but they met an invincible defense and were thrown for losses and downs. When our gridsters took the ball they had nearly the entire length of the field to cover in four minutes of play. The ball was juggled for continual gains but the time-keeper's whistle was blown before the Weeping Water goal line could be crossed. The game was scheduled on last minute notice so a few of the regulars for each side were not in moleskins. The boys wish to take this opportunity to thank those who were instrumental in conveying the team to our neighboring town.

Friday evening eleven Home Economics girls and their teacher, Miss Greenhaigh entertained themselves at a six o'clock dinner at the school house. Hazel Carper acted the part of host and Isadore Stone hostess and we must say they acted the part admirably well except at times they weren't quite as dignified as you might expect a father and mother to be. The menu was made up of crisp fried chicken, creamy mashed potatoes, gravy, cheese balls, tempting salad, fluffy buns, jelly and butter and following this gousse sandwiches, chocolate cake and angel food. The table was attractively decorated in fall flowers. Clever place cards described the guest or told some secret of hers at her place. Miss Greenhaigh would surely make a good secret detective some of the girls think. Extemporaneous speeches were called for by the hostess and some of the subjects responded to were "Nuts," "Dorothy's Present," "Chickens," "Jelly," "Spoon" and several others. After the dinner Hazel and Velma entertained us with some very good music. A mad scramble followed to see who would get to wash the dishes and clean the kitchen. We advise you to place your own construction on the above sentence however. Every one had such a good time that we hope many more such pleasant occasions may be enjoyed this year.

It is just as disastrous to live beyond your reputation as beyond your means.

COOLIDGE ON CORRUPTION

Speaking of official corruption and the betrayal of the people during the republican administration, President Coolidge, in his speech to the Associated Press in New York on April 22, said: "BUT THE WONDER IS NOT THAT THIS (CORRUPTION) IS SO MUCH AND SO MANY (CORRUPTIONISTS); RATHER THAT IT IS SO LITTLE AND SO FEW."

Considering the privilege-seeking environment of the administration, the organized greed allied with the republican party and pressing for enriching favors through robber tariffs, concessions and deals in natural resources, and the easy attitude of all the members of the administration toward schemes of profit and plunder at the expense of the people, Mr. Coolidge is right in saying that it is wonder, not that there is so much corruption, but that corruption was not greater and the corruptionists more numerous.

Mr. Coolidge himself was a member of the administration, and sat in the senate and the cabinet meetings while the corruption, disgraceful abuses in office and betrayal of the public interests were taking place. His remark, his complacent conduct toward officials involved in the oil scandal and towards the disgraceful mess in the department of justice, his reluctance to dismiss officials tainted by the scandals or to aid in any way in exposing their scandalous conduct in official life reveal a blunted sense of political honesty. There is no reflection on his own personal honesty. But his attitude and utterances show that he does not feel, as all honest men ought to feel, the outrage of republican corruption. He seems satisfied with an administration that is only 70 per cent pure.

Are the American people morally dead? Are they willing to condone official corruption? Are they willing to entrust their government to men whose indignation is aroused at the exposure of official misconduct, but not at the misconduct itself?

LIGHTS ON THE SLUSH FUNDS

Mr. La Follette prepared his way well when he secured the adoption by the senate of the resolution providing for a special committee to investigate campaign funds and expenditures for the purpose of publicity before election. The evidence which he read before his Scranton, Pa., audience beyond doubt justifies him now in the demand that the committee on campaign publicity be called together and that it subpoena some of the known money bags of the republican party now collecting a huge fund to elect Coolidge and evading public scrutiny by handling the money outside the national committee.

Honest men of all parties must stand with La Follette in the position that "It is vital that the American people know before election day exactly what the money interests are doing to influence their decision at the polls." Slomp, the patronage broker secretary to the president, W. T. Mellon and Chairman Butler are quick to give the lie to La Follette's expressed suspicions based on a public letter and a New York Times news dispatch. But if La Follette is wrong these men should welcome a thorough investigation. It is highly interesting to note that the Grundy letter, speaking for the group of capitalists handling funds to elect Coolidge, opposes not only the election of La Follette and Wheeler, "a Lenin and Trotsky, with a formidable band of followers made up of the vicious, ignorant and discontented element," whose election is generally conceded to be unlikely, but it would be dissatisfied with such a liberal, progressive champion of honest government as John W. Davis. Any government that re-buffs privilege is chaos to privilege.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

E. P. Stewart For Sheriff

At the present time serving as Sheriff of Cass County, I announce myself as the nominee of the Republican party for election at the coming election on November 4th. You can watch my record and should it meet with your approval we would be pleased with your co-operation.

E. P. STEWART,
Nominee for Sheriff.

Clarence L. Beal

I am candidate for the office of clerk of the district court on the republican ticket at the coming election and will appreciate the support and votes of my friends over Cass county. If elected I will serve the interests of the taxpayers regardless of political affiliation.

CLARENCE L. BEAL.

Charles D. Spangler

My name will appear on the ballot as a candidate for the office of county commissioner, as the nominee of the democratic party and I will be appreciative of the support of my friends over the county regardless of political affiliation. If elected I will strive to give the taxpayers a business administration of the office and devote my best interests to the welfare of Cass county.

CHARLES D. SPANGLER.

D. C. Morgan.

Being a candidate for office of the clerk of the district court I respectfully solicit your support at the election on November 4th. I offer my record for efficiency in the past as one of the reasons for asking your support and will strive to give the same consideration to the office I am seeking that I have in the past to other duties I have performed for the taxpayers.

D. C. MORGAN.
