THE CHEERFUL GIVER

He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully.

The only old flame we long for today is summer.

The original ill wind which blew no good was a draft.

Christmas neckties are very seldom the ties that bind.

The legislature will get down to real business next Monday.

You never can tell when pneumonia or alimony will get you.

Where you start doesn't matter half so much as where you stop.

The fewer laws passed this winter the better the people will like it.

One check that can always be cashed is a check on your living expenses.

A bad thing about steam heat is you can't throw everything into the radiator.

Every drinker thinks he can drive a car while drunk.

It doesn't take a bit more time to amount to something in the world than it does to amount to nothing.

It's funny how some people won't discuss religion until they get old and then won't discuss anything else.

Be consistent. Six months from now you'll be kicking about the heat when it is hot.

All we wish is that these radio guys would find their Sally.

Attorney General Stone has been given a soft position.

Asked whether she had remarried, a Hollywood film star refuses to answer.

Which is the luckiest day on which to get married, is a question asked in a newspaper article.

Santa Claus brought the ex-kaiser a lot of new clothes for Christmas this year.

WINTER IS ON THE ROAD TO SETTLE MARCH

It will soon be Governor McMullen in fact.

These are ticklish times for those wearing heavy, scratchy underwear.

Another Russian leader says he doesn't believe in heaven.

Missouri will soon skin its Hyde a relief that the people will be glad of.

The golf sports are looking forward to a fine time next spring and summer.

Charley Bryan will soon get a vacation. He has been a hard worker, and needs it.

France owes us 4 billions. Won't that be a snap for government grafters—when we get it?

A Seattle burglar stole $18 and got caught, showing 13 was an unlucky number for him.

The happiest ones are those who are busiest, so this may be why the bootleggers are grinning.

Canada is making as much macaroni as Italy. You know macaroni, it's spaghetti's big brother.

People without buttons on their clothes may be amused to learn a laundry burned in Pittsburg.

Cocoa was first introduced to England only 400 years ago, and we'll bet the two were glad to meet.

Diamonds are a disagreeable odor when reduced to powder, so never reduce your diamond to powder.

Be careful when removing your tight shoes in a movie. You may forget to put them on before leaving.

"To the victor belongs the spoils!" Wonder if Governor McMullen will adopt it? We will see what we shall see.

Washing the head with soap and water removes dandruff a lot quicker than letting the finger nails grow long.

Parent Eskimos never punish their children, perhaps just because being an Eskimo is punishment enough.

New resolutions are about like new laws. They have to be made right along because the old ones are broken.

There are but three bits of architecture distinctly American—the colonial house, the skyscraper and the filling station.

Governor Bryan's name will go down in history as one of the greatest and most efficient governors Nebraska ever had.

Some say the flu this year is not severe, while others say it is worse than ever. Probably depends on how you have it.

A woman member of the legislature will fight rule against smoking in the lower house. Maybe she smokes herself—cigarettes. Some women do, you know.

A shipment of specially packed ice cream has been sent from Montreal to an Eskimo. We're going to look up the market for hot dogs among the equatorial tribes, now.

Despite the fact that North Carolina has a representative in the League of Nations, South Carolina will be more notorious in the next congress. Cole Blease will be a senator.

An awful rumpus is being raised over the fact that Trinity college is to get $5,000,000 cash for changing its name. When at least half a dozen New York and London chosers have received twice that amount for making a like concession.

Sir Richard Lodge can recite the history of this world from a time antedating by several millions of years the birth of Adam. It occurs to us that he might call in brother Oliver and collaborate on the history of the next world over the same period.

SPEEDING UP JUSTICE

Rules and recommendations promulgated by Chief Justice Taft of the United States supreme court will unquestionably be of real benefit to the country and aid in the administration of justice with promptness.

"The law's delay" has been held as among the many excuses or apologies for the wave of crime and discontent and the lack of law enforcement and disrespect for law in the past few years.

The chief justice proposes to do away with at least one of the arguments and instructs those presiding over the United States courts in the various state courts to speed up their work and listen no longer to specious protests or unreasonable demands for delay.

While those not particularly interested may not have more than passing thought in a detail brought forward by the high authority mentioned, all who are in any way connected or concerned with court matters know that it has been the custom for years to allow postponements of important cases when the attorneys on each side "agree" that it is not convenient or necessary to bring a case before the court at the time set by the judge.

Chief Justice Taft says that this must be discontinued. He also suggests to the federal judges that they not accept any and every excuse offered by attorneys desiring postponements, and that the plea of "other arrangements" should have no weight.

To the laity these particular references will suggest the idea that "the law's delay" is a matter with the lawyers, and not of equity or justice. It is certain that this is exactly the case in very many instances. Too much it has become the idea prevalent that the settlement of a suit rested more with the attorneys than the equity in the contention. It is a bad impression—very bad, indeed.

To remove this fast growing sentiment from the public mind the legal fraternity can well endorse Mr. Taft's decisions and rules in such matters as indicated.

Justice is assured all the people in the settlement of their disputes and justice is none the less demanded in the trial and sentences of those accused of violation of criminal laws. It was never intended or desired that "speed" should usurp the place of caution or tend to the miscarriage of justice, but delays without sufficient reason are bad for the body politic. It should never be in the public mind that a case may be brought into court and indefinitely continued at the pleasure or convenience of counsel.

Chief Justice Taft proposes to disabuse the public mind where such an idea may have become fixed. Justice must move forward steadily and with all speed consistent with thoroughness.

FIFTEEN TO THIRTY-FIVE

From fifteen to thirty-five miles an hour constitutes the range of reasonable, safe and convenient driving, according to the national safety conference recently called by Secretary Hoover at Washington.

The conference urges local communities not to set speed limits at less than fifteen miles. It would have a speed above thirty-five deemed prima facie evidence of reckless driving.

An even more striking recommendation of the conference is in relation to intoxicated drivers. It suggests that a drunken or careless driver not only be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both, as at present, but that he be deprived of the right to operate a car for periods long enough to impress upon the offender the seriousness of his delinquency.

These are not new suggestions, but the general adoption might mean much to the safety and comfort of drivers and pedestrians alike. They are in line with intelligent thinking on the subject of motor traffic and its increasing complications.

It is coming to be recognized more and more that within reasonable limits the speed at which one drives is of slight significance in itself. How fast one may drive with safety depends on so many other circumstances, density of traffic, character of the road, weather conditions and the condition of one's own machine that to attempt to eliminate dangers by limiting speed is at best a roundabout method. Emphasis is placed on the fact that a driver should drive at a speed which is safe and convenient under the conditions existing at the time.

SOFT SOAP FOR DOUGHBOYS

"Join the army and see the world." From a board of war of months from eloquent recruiting officers this magic slogan has led stalwart youths to halt for knowledge.

The life of a soldier is full of interesting things. One day you are here—and then, presto, along comes an order and you have been transferred to some distant place, where in a twinkling you can eat your pineapples right off the tree as you stretch beneath a palm watching maidens in grass dresses dance so beautifully. Again comes an order, and away to Alaska, Panama, or some other interesting distant place, where in a twinkling you can eat your pineapples right off the tree as you stretch beneath a palm watching maidens in grass dresses dance so beautifully.

A natural leaning toward politics was exhibited early in his life. He cast his first presidential vote in 1896 for McKinley. Several years later he was elected as a law student in Washington, D. C., where he worked at various times as a clerk in the war department, he acted as private secretary to Senator Dietrich for a time returning to Wymore in 1904.

He practiced law in Wymore for several years, his office being in a room at the front of the second story of the First National bank building, in the business center of the city. The building has been remodeled in recent years.

Mr. McMullen owns and controls considerable realty in Wymore and vicinity. When he was a boy he lived with his parents in a small cottage which still stands on North Ninth street in Wymore, and which is still owned by the McMullens. The father, now ninety-three years old, lives with the governor. There are four brothers and two sisters. Two brothers now reside in Chicago. The others including the mother, are dead.

Mrs. McMullen's girlhood was spent in a spacious home on North Ninth street, removed but a block from the McMullen property. Mrs. H. A. Greenwood, mother of Mrs. McMullen, still owns it and lives in it, and Mrs. Lake Bridenthal, sister of Mrs. McMullen, owns and occupies a large residence to the west of the Greenwood home in the same block. Mrs. McMullen was a student of the Wymore schools and was graduated from an eastern girl's finishing school, and studied in Washington, D. C., a year. The McMullens are members of the Episcopal church at Beatrice, and Mrs. McMullen teaches a Sunday school class in the church.

HELP FOR OLD FOLKS

Old Age Should be Happy—Not a Time of Sickness and Suffering.

Too many people begin to suffer at middle age with constant backache, urinary ills and rheumatic pains and aches. Weak kidneys are usually the cause and, if neglected, there is danger of hardened arteries, dropsy, gravel or Bright's disease. Help your weakened kidneys with a stimulant diuretic before kidney disease gets a firm hold. Use Doan's Pills. Thousands of old folks recommend Doan's.

Here is Plattsmouth proof: "W. H. Mann, Marble street, says: 'A cold settled on my kidneys and the secretions passed too freely and were scalding. My back gave out mornings when I attempted to get up and I had to get out of bed on my hands and knees. My back was so lame and stiff. I could hardly straighten and every move I made sent sharp pains through my back. Doan's Pills from Weyrich & Had-rah's drug store rid me of the trouble.'"

Mr. Mann is only one of many Plattsmouth people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for DOAN'S PILLS, the same that Mr. Mann had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 60 cents at all dealers. FROM GROCER BOY TO GOVERNORSHIP

Adam McMullen Began in Banks—Natural Leaning Toward Politics Shown Early in Life.

Wymore, Neb., Jan. 7.—Adam McMullen, who started a real poor boy and succeeded in climbing the ladder of fame and finance, has successfully demonstrated beyond any reasonable doubt that democracy and equality are the birthrights of the American people nowadays as they were in the days of Abraham Lincoln.

Born in New York state in 1873, he moved with his parents to Nebraska in 1884 when they took up their residence at Wymore. The town was only three years old at that time. It was a railroad division point and this fact may have influenced the elder McMullen in making the selection since he had been a locomotive engineer and retained a soft spot in his heart for anything connected with the railroads.

Governor McMullen's parents were born in Scotland. From 1884 to 1890 the father and the oldest brothers operated a grocery known as "The Palace Grocery" situated on the main street of the village in the block where the Markle theater now stands. The governor was the official "counter jumper." Besides assisting in his father's store he was also employed for two years as a printer's "devil" on the staff of the Wymore Weekly Arbor State, a local publication, edited by the late Colonel J. R. Dadds.

He graduated from high school at the age of sixteen. The other ten members of the graduating class were: Levi Scott, now of Irving, Kas.; Myrtle Southwick-Kier, now deceased; Laura Southwick, Nestor, Cal.; Florence Mitchell-Fenton, Rawlins, Wyo.; Elizabeth Haynes-Davis, Fairmont; Elsie Brownell-Horn, Omaha; Dollie Kness-Brown, Cozad; Zilda Wilner, San Francisco; Merrimien Reed, Holmesville, and Park Lyons, Seattle.

This was the second class graduated from the Wymore high schools, which were then under the superintendency of R. G. Woodworth, now of Oberlin, Ohio. It was as students in the Wymore schools that Mr. McMullen and Miss Cora Greenwood, who later became Mrs. McMullen, became acquainted.

A short time later the youthful McMullen came to Lincoln where he entered the University of Nebraska. He worked his way through the university by part time work on the Lincoln Call.

A natural leaning toward politics was exhibited early in his life. He cast his first presidential vote in 1896 for McKinley. Several years later he was elected as a law student in Washington, D. C., where he worked at various times as a clerk in the war department, he acted as private secretary to Senator Dietrich for a time returning to Wymore in 1904.

TRIBUTES ALONG THE WAY

Recalling the funeral cortege which sped from west to east with the body of President Harding, the nation reads of bared heads in towns and cities along the route traversed by the car which carried all that is mortal of Samuel Gompers away from the setting sun to its final haven of rest in the Empire State.

More than a veteran labor leader, Samuel Gompers was a veteran American. His last words, concluding nearly three-quarters of a century spent in the march of American progress, blended simply as an epitaph for one who, though vigorous in his high duties for a class, never once forgot the foundation principles of his country and the necessity that they should survive unimpaired by minor disagreements.

Decisive action and unflinching, ever alert allegiance to the cause of labor served to bring Gompers to the place where he stood at the time of his death. That he made his mark in the world is amply shown even outside the circles of those for whom he labored to make that mark.
