WHEN DAVID FLED FROM SAUL

David therefore departed thence, and escaped to the cave of Adullam; and when his brethren and all his father's house heard it, they went down thither to him. And everyone that was in distress, and everyone that was in debt, and everyone that was discontented, gathered themselves unto him; and he became a captain over them.

Taxes in Belgium are now sixteen times as high as they were before the war. Tell a Belgian taxpayer that war is hell and he will sneer at the feebleness of your metaphor.

Notwithstanding the rains, the Isler carnival company is meeting with very fair success. And the crowds that attend at night are well pleased. It is a splendid company and deserves a big business.

Howard William, layman-evangelist, is a regular glutton for trouble. He is not only conducting a revival at Herrin, the hell hole of Illinois, but the other day he appeared as umpire in a ball game.

A jury of elderly married men has been chosen to sit in judgment in New York on Dorothy Perkins, 17, charged with killing a suitor. What difference does that age make to a juror? The old exonerate girl killers as quickly as the young do.

The Charles Henry Lotts of Chicago were happy when they were poor, but upon growing wealthy, Charles became arrogant and self-assertive, and one day he slapped his wife three times. It cost him $1,100,000—more, probably than it is worth.

Is science injuring the Christian religion? From the present indications throughout the country, it would seem that way. Also some people imagine that radio is controlling the elements above, to the extent of ruining the weather—booh!

The Gorgas memorial fund announces a nationwide campaign against mosquitoes. Sooner or later, that campaign will become a world crusade—perhaps one of the major activities of the future League of Nations.

For mosquitoes are the most dangerous, as well as the most blood-thirsty, of the wild beasts left on earth.

Bears and wolves are little more than children's bugaboos; lions and tigers are interesting sport, and even snakes, outside of India, kill scarcely more people than lightning.

But mosquitoes slay their ten thousands and disable their millions. They probably extinguished the great Maya civilization of Mexico. They were a large factor in the fall of Rome. They prevented the Panama canal, until Gorgas took charge.

They have devastated the tropics and much of the temperate zone with malaria and yellow fever. They make the arctic summer almost unendurable, and rob the South Seas of their charm.

Great and fertile regions are unproductive by reason of them. They still do more havoc than the great beasts ever did.

They are one of the few creatures of earth that do no good and serve no purpose. Exterminate them!

WHEN OUR OX IS GORED

A story from London: "Many American tourists, deeply resenting the inquisition to which they are subjected in British ports before being permitted to land, declare they would have cut England out of their itinerary if they had known beforehand what reception they would have on their arrival in British waters."

These Americans subject to such treatment knew precisely what to say under the circumstances, not so much because of their felicity of speech as on account of their familiarity with the natural language of protest so often heard from foreigners entering at American ports. It may be that the British are merely paying us a kind of compliment—that of imitation.

The British explanation that the rigid examination and the suspicious attitude are due to a determination to keep the Reds out, tends to solve the mystery. The foreigner, reading American papers, American speeches and the warnings of the American department of justice, understands that we are a land teeming with dangerous communists, and it is only the part of wisdom to view all Americans with suspicion.

A book containing "What Every Wise Man Knows," is memorized by everybody wouldn't do as much good as the theorist may suppose. The unpleasant truth is that we must learn a great many things for ourselves no matter how much literature we memorize. But reading is a powerful help to those who can get anything out of it.

For the past week the Parmele theatre have screened some of the best class pictures we have ever seen in Plattsmouth and poor crowds have attended. Messrs. Cloidt & Moore are doing their best to please the amusement loving people, but they can't afford to put on the best pictures unless they receive a better patronage. And there you are!

A Texas man, paying his $5 bachelor tax, remarks that it is worth $500 to be a bachelor. Well, new sources of revenue are scarce, and perhaps an increased bachelor tax would be popular, even with the bachelor.

When a man is mad he curses, when a woman is made she cries. Cussing don't get a man much.

RECKLESS WASTE OF LIFE

The automobile continues to be this nation's most efficient instrument of death. In 1924, according to figures just made public, it was directly responsible for the taking of 19,000 lives, while it left 450,000 persons injured in its ghastly wake. Only a few years ago the train and the street car were considered the last word in accidental death dealers to the populace, but they have been far surpassed and last year the automobile killed and maimed more people than trains and street cars combined, with all other type of vehicles thrown in for good measure. Astounding as these figures are they tell the story but partially. Inasmuch as statistics are available from only 165 cities representing one-third of the country's total population. There is a ray of hope in the fact that while the total number of accidents is mounting higher and higher, the ratio of accidents to the number of automobiles in use is on the descending curve. This may be safety campaigns by means of which automobile drivers are being educated to the price of recklessness.

It would be interesting to know how many of last year's disasters were unavoidable as in perhaps a majority of the fatal accidents those directly responsible paid with their lives for their folly. Of the total dead, however, 1,688 were killed in grade crossing accidents, while 5,650 of injured trace their misfortunes to the same cause. Of these accidents it is reasonable to believe practically all were avoidable. The grade crossing is dangerous, of course; it should be eliminated as speedily as possible, but its known dangers, paradoxically should decrease its casualties. There are few unguarded crossings and it is seldom the driver of an automobile comes upon them unawares. If he would heed the sign to "Stop, Look and Listen," he would be safe ninety-nine times out of a hundred, but too often the speed mania is on him and rather than lose ten second he dashes ahead in a usually losing effort to beat the engine. And the death list steadily rises.

The same is true of a large majority of other classes of automobile accidents; it is particularly true of the accidents which result from Sunday joy riding, and every Monday newspaper is crowded with casualty lists. It may be the exuberance of youth, the jazz age in which we live, the willingness to take a chance, or merely speed dementia, but the fact is indisputable that not once in a thousand times is an automobile accident caused by defects in the car or by other unavoidable reasons. Whatever the causes, the slaughter continues despite the effort to protect reckless humanity against itself. And it promises to continue uncurbed until a way can be devised to keep automobiles out of the hands of persons without the sense to be careful.

CODE OF JUDICIAL PROCEDURE

The announcement that the American Law Institute will draft a model code of criminal procedure for recommendation to the state legislatures and courts of the country is welcome news. The institute has been urged to undertake this work by such bodies as the American Bar Association, the Association of American Law Schools and the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology. The high standing of the institute's membership insures in advance that its task will be thoroughly performed. The work is expected to take three years. At the end of time the problem will arise whether the institute shall undertake to urge the adoption of its model code upon courts and legislatures or allow that duty to devolve upon the American Bar association. But the need for radical improvement is undoubted. Our crime record has long amounted to a national scandal, and a large part of the responsibility for this must rest upon our dilatory and cumbersome methods of judicial procedure.

MOTORS

All do better with BALANCED gasoline

WHATEVER kind of automobile you drive, take gasoline seriously. On its quality depend the responsiveness of your motor, car-mileage per gallon, freedom from carbon and from harmful dilution of motor oil with unburned gasoline.

Red Crown—the balanced gasoline—is built to meet exactly the requirements of modern motors. It has the right proportion of low boiling point fractions for instant ignition and quick starting. It also has the heavier fractions that burn more slowly and keep up pressure to the end of the piston stroke.

Red Crown is uniform and dependable wherever you buy it and can be relied on to get the most power out of your engine and take you the longest distance per gallon. You can't buy a cleaner-burning, more economical and satisfactory gasoline for year-around use.

Next time you need gasoline, do as motor-wise Nebraskans have done for many years. Pull into the nearest Red Crown Service Station. You will receive prompt attention and obliging service, together with full measure of uniform, high efficiency gasoline and motor oil that provides protective lubrication.
