THE ODDS AGAINST BORAH

Opposition to America's entrance into the World Court, and issue which will come before the Senate soon after it convenes, is largely embodied in the figure of Senator Borah. While Mr. Borah's power is not to be belittled in such matters as blocking legislative action which is distasteful to him, the chances now would seem to be in favor of affirmative action. When Mr. Harding, whose attitude toward the League of Nations was thoroughly orthodox from the Republican standpoint, announced in St. Louis that he favored entering the World Court, that subject ceased to be a party issue. Mr. Coolidge has followed this Harding policy, and has with him nearly all of the regular administration Senators, and many Democrats. The fight on the League of Nations was conducted along party lines. The fight on the World Court will be conducted by guerilla warriors, whose opinions are not shared by majorities of their parties. Besides, there is a very hefty public sentiment arrayed against World Court opponents, and the influence of such powerful old granddads of the Republican party as Elihu Root.

It would be an admirable postscript to Locarno if the United States would take its place on a body which stands for peaceful, orderly and just settlement of international disputes. It would atone in part for our desertion of our allies in the war. It would presage an era in which quarrelsome nations would think often before exercising their trigger fingers.

We shall soon be better able to judge of the strength which Borah can muster. Just now, with Republicans and Democrats against him, backed by the prestige of the presidential desire, he is fighting against terrific odds.

THE GIRL AND THE CIGARETTE.

Does it ever occur to the girls that the men are watching with the keenest interest, not unmingled with dismay, this deteriorating influence which has become too apparent among them to be longer ignored? They are, and always were, the only bright spot on the landscape; the only thing that never lost its charms, when all else palled; can it be wondered that the men are becoming disturbed? It is, always has been, the dearest thought to a girl to know that she is looked upon with admiration. Under those circumstances, it is incomprehensible to the man why they should persist in making themselves unattractive; why the unsightly in fashion should be adopted, just because it is the fashion; why the coarser nature and boisterous ways of the man should be in favor and supplanting the modesty, sweetness and gentleness which has always characterized their sex.

If Colonel Mitchell, one of our half dozen or so aviators, is found guilty of the charges for which a court-martial is trying him, it is probable he will be slapped on the wrist and told not to fly so high again.

Just as this country gets about a thousand billion trillion dollars invested in good roads everybody will take to the air for travel and the roads and railroads and trolley lines will become as obsolete as the canals now are.

WHAT PRICE LIBERTY?

Everyone used to own Liberty bonds. Not every one does today. Changing hands rapidly, they are fitting themselves into their permanent niche in the structure of American investments. Whoever is not acquainted with the market situation in Liberty bonds is not familiar with the basic position of the greatest of American investments.

Their market turnover is prodigious. Not only the Treasury Department and the Federal Reserve Banks, but great corporations and institutions have together sometimes dealt in a billion dollars a day. The entire outstanding issue of Liberty bonds (approximately 16 billions) is turned over, perhaps more than twice in the course of a year. New York Stock Exchange sales are but a minute fraction of the total. This market no longer is a factor in the situation and it is only a question of time when the Liberty bond department of the New York Stock Exchange will cease to be important with the market, subsequently made completely in over-the-counter trading.

In this welter of buying and selling, Liberty bonds are largely passing from investors' hands into the hands of those who need them for specific purposes. Patriotic reasons induced millions to buy, but business advantage has induced many of them to sell. Billions of the new issues of corporate bonds have been paid for by Liberty bonds. Higher yields in corporate bonds have sought, and will increasingly be sought as tax-exemption becomes less and less attractive owing to consistent cuts in tax rates.

Banks are heavy buyers, for Libertys are an excellent cash equivalent yielding nearly 4 per cent. Great institutions such as life insurance companies, restricted by law to low-yield eligible investments, keep their liquid reserve in Liberty bonds.

Investors reason that high interest rates may prevail for a few years but that eventually the cycle of money rates may bring money again below 3 per cent. Consequently, those who buy prime Libertys now are making the investment for long-range purposes.

For the investor there is one immediate question: Are Liberty bonds still valuable as a commitment? The answer may be put in two ways. Practically, every investor should still own Liberty bonds. They are the nearest interest-bearing equivalent of cash known. They are necessary to a balanced investment list, wherever need for cash is likely to be a factor. Considering their amazing convenience, their yield is very attractive.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

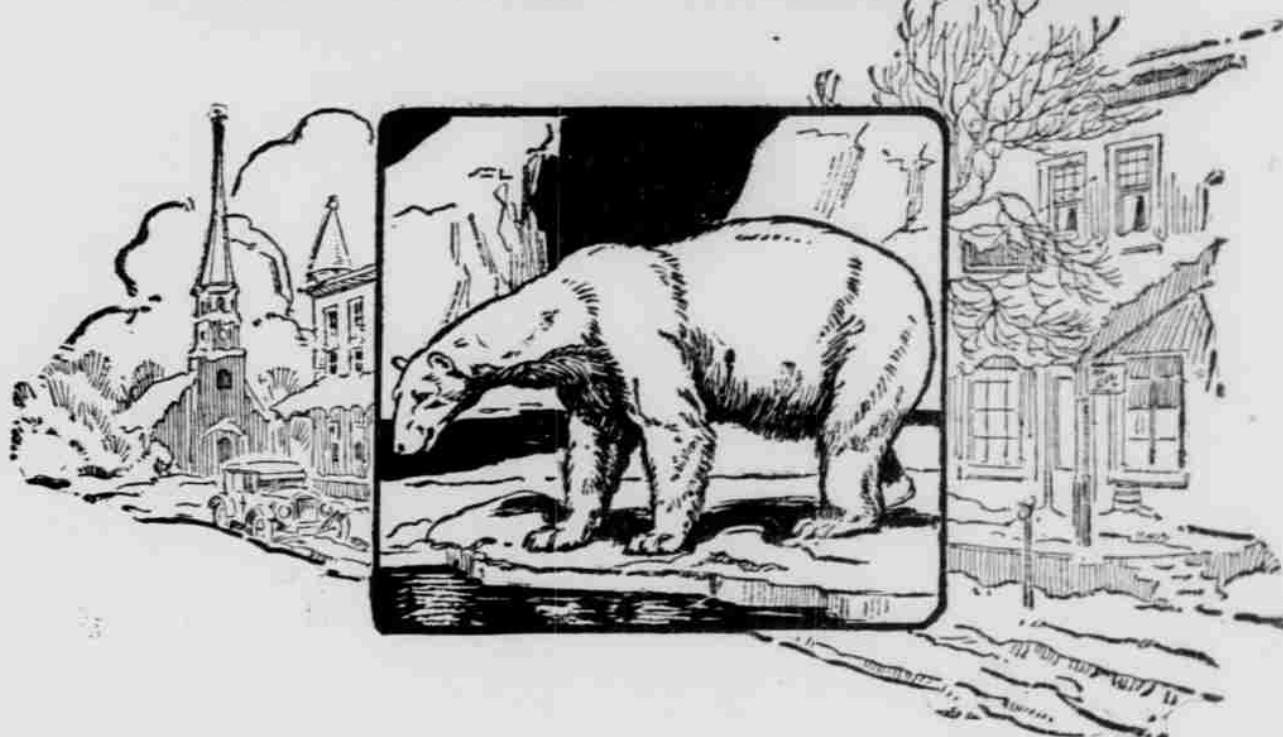

In the District Court of Cass county, Nebraska.
In the matter of the guardianship of John Wurga, mentally incompetent.

Now on this 7th day of November, A. D. 1925, this cause came on for hearing on the petition heretofore filed by James Wurga as guardian of John Wurga mentally incompetent, praying for license to sell the following described real estate, to-wit:

Beginning at a point thirty rods north of the center of Section thirteen (13) in Township twelve (12) North, Range thirteen (13) east of the Sixth Principal Meridian in Cass county, Nebraska, running thence west along the south line of Lot thirteen, five chains and fifteen links, thence south three chains and eighty-seven links, or to the north line of Pearl street, thence east along the line of said street five chains and fifteen links to the west line of Maiden Lane, thence north three chains and ninety links to the place of beginning, except the right-of-way of the Missouri Pacific Railway company across the northwest corner thereof; also known as Lot one in the southeast quarter of the northwest quarter of Section thirteen (13), Township twelve (12) North, Range thirteen (13) east of the Sixth Principal Meridian in Cass county, Nebraska.

for the purpose of securing funds for the support and maintenance of his said ward and the support, maintenance and education of the family of said ward, and the sale of the personal property of said ward for that purpose not being advisable.
It is therefore ordered that all persons interested in said estate appear before me at the District Court room in Plattsmouth, Cass county, Nebraska, on the 7th day of December, A. D. 1925, at 10 o'clock a. m., to show cause why a license should not be granted to said guardian to sell the above described real estate for the purpose of paying the expenses and maintenance of said ward and his family.
It is further ordered that notice of such hearing be given to all persons

Why Red Crown is a WINTER GASOLINE

Winter weather puts your motor to the test and much depends on your gasoline and oil. That shifts the responsibility to us—our gasoline must be good and make good.

Ever since automobiles first came to Nebraska, Red Crown has met the test; and it is there to meet it, not only in the cities and towns where delivery is safe and easy, but far out in the villages and rural districts where the haul is long and hard.

No other oil company renders or attempts to render such broad and consistent service to Nebraska motorists, and we respectfully claim it as an added merit for Red Crown.

So get the good Red Crown habit and stick to it. Always when you need Gasoline turn in at the Red Crown sign. You will receive obliging service and full measure of absolutely uniform and dependable gasoline—balanced to give a quick start to your motor and utmost mileage to your car.
