The lad is getting along nicely, but has a very sore face. This is literally getting one's nose against the grindstone, whether it is keeping it there or not.

Scotten is building in the north portion of Murray is making good progress and the fram of the same is up to the plate and will have the rafters up in a short time and with the hustlers who are doing the work the house will go up pretty rapidly. Church Services are Started at Nehawka

Mission from St. Luke's Church Here Held Sunday Evening by Father George D. Pierce.

On Saturday evening Father Geo. D. Pierce of the St. Luke's Episcopal church of this city motored to Nehawka, where he opened a mission to bring the message of this ancient Christian church into that section of the county.

The services at the present time are being held in the attractive building in the community building and the attendance at the opening service was very pleasing to the rector of St. Luke's church, offering as it did, the promise of a great deal of interest in the bringing of the message of the church into this new field.

It is expected by the rector of the church here to continue these services in the future and with the splendid efforts of Father Pierce to aid in the establishment of the mission, it should result in a great deal of good to the church in general and also to the community where the services are being held.

The mission at Nehawka will be served from this city similar to the Wyoming church which is served from the St. Mary's church at Nebraska City and will bring the teachings of the Episcopal church into that portion of Cass and Otoe counties.

Golden Text: "I am not disobedient unto the heavenly vision."—Act 26th chapter, 19th verse.

Paul Found Not Guilty

Notwithstanding the Jews accused Paul of many things, and would have killed him because of their hatred of him because he preached Jesus the Christ, the son of God and predicated it upon his birth, his life, his crucifixion, his resurrection and his ascension to the Father, all in fulfillment of prophecy, coupled with his (Paul's) own miraculous conversion, a trial before two governors and a king found him not guilty.

As we studied in last Sunday's lesson concerning the trial before Felix, when the noted attorney Tertullus, aided by the High Priest and many members of the Sanhedrin and leading Jews, Felix plainly said, "You have no case, but I will inquire more regarding the matter when Claudius shall come down." The real reason was Felix wanted some money and hoped Paul or his friends would give in to his extortions methods in order to procure Paul's liberty. In this, he was sorely disappointed, as Paul fully expected to go to Rome, but had been informed in a vision that he was to bear the message of the Master to the then western world.

While Felix treated Paul with much kindness, still he kept him in prison, vainly hoping for a bribe for his liberty.

With the changing scenes at Rome, Felix had something coming in the way of a political plum and the governorship of Judea was given him, Felix being recalled. In order to retain favor with the clamorous Jews, however, Felix left Paul in prison on his retirement, where we find him at the beginning of today's lesson.

As governor of Judea, his first duty, as he saw it, after having looked after matters at Caesarea, was to visit the principal places of his domain, among them Jerusalem. Here the Jews asked of him that Paul might be sent to Jerusalem for trial. Festus thought Caesarea, the capital of the province the proper place. However Festus remained at Jerusalem for ten days, when he returned to Caesarea and the day following sat in court, and as the Jews from Jerusalem had come down again to press their charges and were ready to depart, he called Paul. The Jews laid many charges against this man of God, but could prove nothing. Festus, wanting the good will of the Jews, asked Paul, "Are you willing to go to Jerusalem and stand trial?" But Paul who as a Roman citizen knew that Caesarea was the capital and that there was the place for the trial and not at Jerusalem, held to his rights, knowing also that the trial at Jerusalem was only a pretext and that they wanted to kill him on the way. So he answered Festus, "I stand at Caesar's judgment seat, where I ought to be judged. To the Jews I have done no wrong, as thou verily knowest. For if I be an offender or have committed anything worthy of death, I refuse not to die, but if there be none of these whereof they accuse me, no man may deliver me unto them. I appeal unto Caesar."

Then Festus, when he had conferred with his council answered, "Hast thou appealed unto Caesar; unto Caesar shalt thou go." Now, as the custom was, when a new governor had arrived the practice was that the king came to visit Festus. The king at this time was Herod Agrippa, better known only as Agrippa. He came with his wife, Atticus, to pay their compliments to the new governor. Following the greetings and other formal matters, as Festus was to send Paul to Rome, he did not know what charge to prefer as Paul had been guilty of no infraction of the Roman law; so he consulted with Agrippa and it was arranged to have a hearing of Paul before Agrippa. When he had been stretched forth his hand, though it was manacled and bound with the chain which had been his companion for two years, and said, "I think myself most happy, King Agrippa, because I shall answer for myself, this day touching all the things whereof I am accused by the Jews, especially because I know thee to be expert in all customs and questions which are among the Jews. Wherefore, I beseech thee to hear me patiently. My manner of life from my youth, which was at first among my own nation at Jerusalem; know all the Jews which know me from the beginning, if they would testify that I am accused of a thing which should be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead? I persecuted the Christians and when I was struck to the ground when hearing Damascus, I heard a voice saying, 'Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me; it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.' I said, 'Who art thou, Lord?' And he said, 'I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest. But arise and stand on thy feet; for I have appeared unto thee for a purpose to make thee a minister and a

Will Nebraska Prove Nemesis of Notre Dame

Will Prediction of Knute Rockne as to Losing Two Games This Season Come True.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 24.—Knute Rockne, early this fall, predicted that his Notre Dame football team for 1925 would lose at least two games this season.

To date, Notre Dame has lost but one game, that to the Army. They have been tied by Penn State.

Only one more game remains on the Notre Dame schedule—Nebraska being the opponent. Will Rockne's prediction be true? Knute says perhaps it will.

Only two days remain before the question is settled to the complete satisfaction (?) of everyone. On Thursday of this week, which is Thanksgiving Day, Notre Dame and Nebraska clash in their eleventh successive battle. Four times in the last ten years, the Cornhuskers have won; five times, Notre Dame has won; once no one won, a scoreless tie being the result. Now, football fans in all parts of the United States are wondering whether Nebraska will even the score of games, or Notre Dame will assume a two-game lead.

No team in the United States has had the success of the Cornhuskers in games with Notre Dame eleven. In four years, counting this one, Coach Rockne's teams have lost only three games, and two of those games were lost to the Huskers. In both 1922 and 1923, Notre Dame came to Lincoln with a clear record showing victories over leading eastern and mid-western teams. Both years they went back carrying the short end of the score.

Last year, the "Four Horsemen of Notre Dame," having on both the preceding years been effectively stopped by the Nebraskans, secured their long delayed desire by romping over the Lincoln team much as they had romped over all other teams on that year's schedule. It also might be well to point out that the 1924 Notre Dame team was practically the same eleven, man for man, as that which the Nebraskans had defeated in 1922 and 1923.

Now, more than 40,000 football fans, their tickets safely tucked away in pocketbooks, vest pockets, safety deposit vaults, office safes, and anywhere else where they will be sure of their presence on the day of the game, are awaiting the time for the game. An additional 5,000 probably will be able to find seats, about that number of pasteboards remaining to be sold.

The being off our chest, we'll await the pistol which will end the game on Turkey Day and then say, "Well, we told you so," for long ago we learned that it was unsafe to make predictions on the outcome of the Notre Dame-Nebraska game.

When two governments are sincerely anxious to come to an agreement, their representatives, if reasonable and fair-minded men, can find a basis for it. That is what has been done by the debt commission of Italy and the United States. With both Rome and Washington earnestly desirous of getting this left-over financial difficulty out of the way, the necessary compromise could hardly fail to be reached.

witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of the things in which I will appear unto thee, delivering thee from thy people and from the Gentiles unto whom now I send thee, to open their eyes and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the paths of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me." whereupon, O King Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision, but showed unto them first at Damascus, then at Jerusalem and throughout the coast of Judea, then to the Gentiles, they they should repent and turn to God and do the works meant for repentance. For these causes, the Jews caught me in the temple and went about to kill me.

As he thus spoke, Festus said in a loud voice, "Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad." Paul replied, "I am not mad, most noble Festus, but speak forth the words of truth and soberness. For the king knoweth these things, before whom I speak freely; for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him, for this was not done in a carum." Then addressing the king, he said, "King Agrippa, believest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest."

Then Agrippa said unto Paul, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." Paul replied, "I would to God that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost and altogether such as I am, except for these bonds."

They then arose to go, but later said, "This man doeth nothing worthy of death of bonds," and might have forthwith released him, had he not appealed unto Caesar.

The continuing ferocity of Paul is remarkable and illustrates the endurance of those early Christians bent on doing God's will, even though it meant death itself. How many present day followers of the lowly Nazarene could be tested under such conditions and found true to trust?

TWO REFORMATORY INMATES ESCAPE

Lincoln, Nov. 21.—Two inmates of the state reformatory made their escape late Friday afternoon after working at the cattle yards at Burnham. They are Ralph Mortice, 22 and Fred Bishop, 20. The pair with 10 others was cleaning cattle pens at the yards.

Police, sheriffs and peace officers have been notified of the escape and have been furnished with descriptions of the fugitives. Superintendent Gus Miller said he was of the opinion the boys will not be out long.

Mortice is from Overton Neb., and Bishop from Hershey, Neb. Mortice was sent from Dawson county to serve a sentence of one to three years for breaking and entering.

Bishop was sentenced from Lincoln county and was received at the institution on December 22, 1923, to serve from two to five years for auto theft.
