TO DIRECT MAN'S STEPS

O Lord, I know that the way of man is not in himself; it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps. —Jeremiah 10:23.

A MONUMENT TO EVE

Robert Quillen, whose paragraphs are familiar to American newspaper readers, would do what he regards as tardy honor to Eve, so he has erected a monument to her in the front yard of his home, at Fountain Inn, South Carolina. The monument, the work of a local marble cutter, was placed on the Quillen lawn some time ago, bearing the inscription, "In Memory of Eve the First Woman," but the neighbors do not take kindly to Mr. Quillen's plan for paying his respects to the "first mother." He says they "stared at the monument with incredulous horror."

Just why the neighbors were horrified is not explained in the dispatch quoting Mr. Quillen's comment in his paper, the Fountain Inn Tribune. It could not be any personal objection to Eve herself. As Mr. Quillen says, and according to the most reliable accounts, Eve was a "charming lady." Perhaps she was a little too credulous, and if she had had less feminine coquetry things might have turned out better for the human race, but taking her by and large, as the saying is, Eve was well worthy of the eulogy of poets and artists and the loving care of the sculptors' chisel. Of course, she lived 6,000 years before she had a close rival of Helen of Troy for comeliness.

The Fountain Inn neighbors of Mr. Quillen—

...the artists who have ever painted... the modernism and fundamentalism have come to grips again, and this time on the paragrapher's lawn! If so, it is a bum place for a dispute. The paragrapher has no spacer for wear; some details. Bob Quillen wanted to honor Eve, he has done so to the best of his ability, so let it go at that.

THE SPIRIT THAT LIVES

A bank failed in Springfield, Ill., after the panic of 1873. Several hundreds of thousands of dollars were lost by depositors. It seemed hopelessly lost. How many times is restitution made for losses in such a failure?

Jacob Bunn, the president of that bank, passed through the bankruptcy court. He might have charged those losses off and forgotten about it. But Jacob Bunn did not. He said he would pay every cent. So he started out all over again.

The other day the heirs of Jacob Bunn announced that debt could now be paid. The accounts had been carried all those years in the ledger of the family's honor.

Family honor! If there was more like the Bunn family in America!

THE RIGHT TO EAT AND DRINK

After a sojourn in Europe William E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson returns to New York apparently converted to a more sensible view of the principle involved in the eighteenth amendment than that which he held a few years ago, when he raided without warrant such places as were supposed to be violating the prohibition laws. He is now quoted as saying that some good men drink and some do not, that "drinking is a matter of personal taste. A man has a right to drink if he pleases." Also that "Prohibition certainly has not worked out the way we wanted it to."

"A man has a right to drink if he pleases." But can a person hold such a view and remain a sincere prohibitionist?

The right to eat, and choose one's food has never been questioned. But a few years ago the vegetarians were conducting a crusade against meat eating. Vegetarian restaurants sprang up in all large cities. The books, tracts and leaflets on vegetarianism persuaded many people, as the fact is, that meat-eating caused the slaying of innocent creatures. But, although the necessity eating meat involves wholesale slaughter of animals, the vegetarians never entered politics to bring about legislation in favor of their beliefs. Had they done so, and by more persistent propaganda induced a sufficient number of followers to join with them, we might have had antimeat laws on the statute books and a vegetarian amendment in the constitution.

Pussyfoot Johnson, who now has charge of the European office of the World League Against Alcoholism, tells us to repeal the eighteenth amendment, if prohibition has as had an effect as its enemies charge. And, as time goes on, we may expect to see many more erstwhile prohibition fanatics look with more or less favor on a return to the time when a man had the right to drink, as well as eat, what he chose, so long as he does not injure anyone else.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Ku Klux Klan in Salt Lake City demanded that local Santa Claus obey the law and appear on the street without masks or disguises. Well, a Santa Claus can be pretty effectively disguised by appearing without a mask.
