Solon Hits Diplomats as Real Boozers

Senator Blease Stuns Senate With Fiery Attack on Envoys Who Feed Our Women Liqueur.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Shattering all precedent for fiery oratory, Senator Cole Blease of South Carolina, Friday stunned the senate with a fiery attack on foreign diplomats in Washington, charging them with "leading liquor to American women, debauching them and keeping houses of ill-fame."
Thundering and hammering his desk, Blease directed his most vitriolic denunciation at an unnamed diplomat, who, he charged, served "lik-ker"—as he called it—to an American girl in a Washington cabaret recently and escaped under diplomatic immunity when the girl was arrested.

"One of these days," shouted Blease, "one of these foreigners will sneak up on the president and stab him in the back with a stiletto, or he will feed him poison."

"Then instead of punishing this foreigner, we'll send him back to his country. And over there, they'll say that because he killed a 'one-horse American'—that's no reflection on the president—he should be made an ambassador as a reward."

"That's the attitude of these foreign diplomats toward Americans and that's what we are leading up to with this diplomatic immunity."

American Women Debauched
"The ambassadors get immunity. Why hasn't the cotton bill boy who works from daylight to dark the same privilege of carrying a dash as some little half-nigger from a foreign country?"

"These foreigners bring their liquor by the truck load from Baltimore to parties and can drink openly; feed liquor to American women, debauch them and keep houses of ill-fame."

"But what of the poor cab driver, out in the rain, wet and cold? He buys a half pint and goes to his room to take a drink to warm his body. A dirty spy, calling himself a prohibition agent, looks in the window, grabs the poor man and locks him up. Then he is railroaded to the rockpile for 30 days."

"Alongside of this law-breaker is the ambassador. He wasn't arrested. The judge says: 'Good morning, you're immune.'"

"The ambassador drank liquor in a public place. It was a noted public restaurant. He had violated our laws and had betrayed our women, but he goes free under international law. But the cab driver and the girl who took a drink go to jail."

"God What a Country."
"Good God! What a country!" Blease said that he had been charged in South Carolina with "carrying liquor on his hip," and added: "I never carried much, but I did drink it."

The fiery southerner declared that the enforcement was a mockery when bootleggers invaded the capitol itself to solicit trade. He said:

"These bootleggers come into the senate office building soliciting trade. They come into the house office building and even under the very dome of the capitol. And yet some people say we have prohibition?"

His voice vibrant with emotion, Blease concluded scornfully: "Yes, we have prohibition only for the poor devils who haven't got the money to buy liquor."

DEATH OF OLD GRAY MARE DELICATE CASE FOR LEGION

Brownwood Tex., Jan. 14.—A small brown mule may take the place of the Old Gray Mare in the affections of Texas Legionnaires, Sarah, for five years mascot of the Old Gray Mare band, died suddenly and left as her heir and offspring, a mule colt. Sarah's death came in the midst of a controversy between the Oklahoma and Texas departments as to which had prior right to the use of the Old Gray Mare tune. Just after the Texas legion had agreed to permit a membership contest to decide the question, Sarah was found dead in her pasture near here, her little brown colt standing mournfully beside her. She was buried there with full military honors.

The Old Gray Mare attended the American Legion conventions in San Francisco and St. Paul, beside numerous conventions in Texas.

Married a Second Time

Premier Mussolini Sain to Have Come Through Religious Ceremony With Wife.

London, Jan. 15.—There is no confirmation from any source of the report printed by the daily Herald dispatch from Chaux, Switzerland, that Benito Mussolini, the fascist premier of Italy, has gone thru religious marriage ceremony with his wife, Rachele, to whom he was previously joined in a civil ceremony. The correspondent at Chaux throws no light on the reasons which induced Signor Mussolini and his wife to have the church's blessing on their civil union, which was legal and regular according to Italian law and usage. He says the religious ceremony occurred at Milan December 29, a few hours before Mussolini left there. The Vatican granted the marriage license, and the wedding took place in Mussolini's private residence.

Rome, Jan. 15. Official quarters today denied the report published in London that Premier Mussolini and his wife, Rachele, who were united by a civil marriage had gone thru a religious marriage ceremony during his recent visit to Milan. In any case, it was stated such action by the premier would have no connection with his desire for a complete rapprochement between the church and state.

ATTORNEYS WILL CONVENE

Grand Island, Neb., Jan. 14.—The annual meeting of the County Attorneys' association of Nebraska will be held here Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. Sheriff of the state will hold their annual meeting at the same time and joint meetings are planned.

Speaker's at Wednesday's session include F. M. Trout, Falls City; Fred S. Beery, Wayne; Charles E. Matson, Charles B. Letton and O. S. Spillman, Lincoln; G. W. Wertz, Schuyler; Will C. Heelan, Valentine, the latter two secretary and treasurer, respectively, and Henry Deutsch of Minneapolis whose topic will be "The Criminal Situation and Law Enforcement." Mr. Duetsch will represent the American Bar association.

BRING ON STRAUSS

London, Jan. 14.—An audience's taste for alcoholic beverages varies according to the kind of music it hears. This, at least, is the judgment of the bartender at Queen's hall, after 30 years of dispensing drinks at this center for London's music lovers.

He said that when a concert of Wagnerian music is presented the demand for beer is 15 times as great as when a mixed program is given. He asserted that Johann Strauss' works create a demand for wine, while Richard Strauss causes the sale of spirits to rise. Mendelssohn concerts mean more beer and whiskey. When Mozart dominates a program very little drink is sold.

Requests Court to Give Opinion

Lewis C. Westwood in Asking for Declaration on Application of Inheritance Tax Law.

Lewis C. Westwood, attorney for Johnson county, asks the supreme court for a rehearing of the case recently decided in favor of the estate of William Kneeland, and which involved the question of whether a widow should pay an inheritance tax on personal property that came to her thru the death of her husband.

The court has on file a number of requests from county attorneys from all parts of the state seconding the position of Mr. Westwood. He asks that a carefully prepared opinion be filed and published after due presentation and consideration on a rehearing, by as full a bench as possible. The question is of great importance to the counties of the state, and there is much dissatisfaction, he says, with the reasoning in the Strahan case, which the court adopted without an opinion being filed.

Mr. Westwood says that the judgment of affirmance is subject to the same objections as to the old opinion, that it is inconsistent legally and in conflict with statutory enactments. He says that this is done in declaring:

"That the interest of a wife in the personal property of her husband is similar to that of a silent partner; that the husband is but the managing partner in his own personal property and that at his death his wife's interest in that property comes to her in her own right and does not pass to her by the interstate laws of the state."

That the effect of the decedent law is practically the same as the law of community property; that under the present law the wife's interest in the husband's personality is something that belongs to her absolutely and independently of any right of inheritance or succession, and that the wife's share of the personal estate of her deceased husband, by the present inheritance law is given her in lieu of dower.

Mr. Westwood contends that these holdings are illogical, unsound, contrary to established principles of personal property titles and disregard plain statutory enactments.
