MISPLACED TALENT

Two young men, who are brothers, swung off a train in a midwestern city the other day.

When the fight was over one of the cousins needed a doctor and the other was little better off.

Each of the two brothers drew a thirtyday sentence from the court.

To nourish a grievance for fifteen years is a record.

Such determination and persistence are sufficient to carry one across the ocean, build a house, take one to congress or win a wife.

Roosevelt, a puny youth, was determined to be strong.

Edward Bok, determined to make the world more beautiful, published pictures and specifications of artistic homes in his magazine until thousands of such homes had been built.

George W. Goethals, put in charge of digging the Panama Canal, made that the chief business of his life from the day of his appointment.

One of his biographers says "Goethals took the Canal to bed with him."

If you would make your mark you must concentrate.

He needs the persistence of the two belligerent brothers who stuck to one bad idea for fifteen years.

It might just as well have been a good idea.

THEY WILL HAVE TO SHOW US

We have a sneaking idea that the British combine on crude rubber is the least of the reasons for high price in auto tires.

"Lost bonds traced to Daugherty." Forty thousand dollars in government securities, once owned by Germans, reached former Attorney-General Daugherty.

A conservative statement. Some people say that monkeys came down out of the trees longer ago than that—and the trees weren't mineral specimens, were they?

Prof. Moulton, of the University of Chicago, says that plant life existed on this earth two million years ago.

SELF-CONFIDENCE

How is your confidence today? If everything we hear and read about self-confidence is true, it is very nearly the only thing essential for success.

There are numerous schools that claim to develop this wonderful gift by mail.

Indeed, if you try to get a refund they will send you another bill with the claim that the course has given you over-confidence.

Believe in yourself and your ability. Then you can always be sure of having at least one admirer.

One pupil of a correspondence school reports that, after taking the course he went straight to his boss and told him he'd quit if he didn't get a raise.

Self-confidence may be a nice thing to have, but it is an unpleasant thing to listen to.

A rugged confidence is essential for success in prize-fighting.

The correspondence schools should spend less time teaching people how to get jobs and more time telling them how to keep them.

Some men can say two and two equals four, with as much impressiveness as though they were explaining the theory of relativity.

However, it has never been really decided whether self-confidence develops success or success develops self-confidence.

HE GOT RESULTS

Many fortunes have been made, much of practical and beneficial success promoted, by the newspapers, as generally known, but that not so very frequently is acknowledged.

Recently, in New York, Mr. Willys gave a luncheon to a number of newspapermen of that city and in the course of the entertainment said:

"All of you know what has happened in Willys-Overland during the past four years. We have stepped from a deficit of $23,000,000 in 1921, to a profit and loss surplus of about $25,000,000; from a production of 40,000 cars a year in 1921 to a planned production of 200,000 for 1926; and we owe a tremendous percentage of this success to the manner in which we have gone to the public in general through the newspapers to tell the story of our product.

Extending comment is not necessary in this instance, except to say that even though Mr. Willys' company had kept quiet about it, had not employed the newspapers to carry the information to millions of people, his company would still be nursing a deficit.

If you would make your mark you must concentrate.

He needs the persistence of the two belligerent brothers who stuck to one bad idea for fifteen years.

It might just as well have been a good idea.
