THE LORD IS MY STRENGTH

I will love Thee, O Lord, my strength. The Lord is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my strength in whom I trust.—Psalms 28:1-2.

Food will keep longer if you put a lock on the refrigerator.

It begins to seem that Ma will never, never desert Mr. Ferguson.

He who scoffs at the crooked man had best hold himself pretty straight.

We have tried year after year and we find it is going to take us a long time to get rich.

To keep finger prints and dirty marks off the wall paper have it all pasted on the ceiling.

English opera singers eat onions, which explains why they enact those tragedies so naturally.

Better sit in your old comfortable chair all you can before spring cleaning comes and gets it.

About the only thanks you ever get for handing out advice is a good cussing for it not working.

When a man grabs your hand and pumps it up and down he is trying to get something out of you.

A scientist says bow-legs are a sign of courage. They certainly are if their owner wears a short skirt.

League hopes seem to fade, Chamberlain sees disaster ahead, as all nations refuse to make concessions.

We just happened to see the lawn mower in the basement the other day and it made our back start aching.

The committee on tariff that Dawes names is blow to Democrats. What else could you expect with a vice-president all one-sided?

The man who was too polite to grab a vacant seat on the street car when a lady had her eye on it, now tries to beat her to a parking place.

The exchange editor of the Wichita Eagle finds that the "Home from Florida" items are increasing in number in all the Nebraska papers these days.

A scientific note says that only two percent of the men on earth can sing. That didn't use to discourage the old-fashioned Sweet Adeline whiskey quartet, however.

Regardless of the fact that there is no one on the force but himself, the town marshal always feels better and bigger when he is referred to as the Chief of Police.

Everybody seems surprised when a politician plays politics.

The faster you try to wait the longer it seems to take you.

These days no woman looks old, but the man who doesn't look it.

Man many learn to fly like a bird, but he'll never learn to sit on a barbed wire fence.

The chief grounds for a famous divorce filed recently is that they have been married since 1925.

Get out the Christmas gifts and polish them up. You'll need them for wedding presents soon.

Mexicans are again murdering Americans. Why don't Americans be loyal and stay home to get murdered?

It wasn't modesty that kept the previous generation from showing its knees. It must have been lack of soap, then.

Man is such a cantankerous critter that all you'd have to do with religion would be to bootleg it and people would be wild to get it.

One out of every five families in America has a radio set, and radio dealers are busy and will have the other four families supplied in a few months.

A certain chewing gum is being pushed as a wonderful fat reducer. An advertisement of its says "Fat rolls off while you chew!" Hanged if we believe it.

A scientist says it requires no energy to produce human speech, and we had suspected as much in most cases except those of some children between the ages of 4 and 7.

A doctor says folks have a sixth sense if they would only cultivate it. They will have to if the automobile industry keeps the same pace it has been going the past few years.

The Association Opposed to Blue Laws has received a $100,000 donation to be used in purchasing property in Washington on which it is planned to erect a building to be used as headquarters in fighting reform movements.

SUCCESS AFTER FORTY

Now and then one reads those sparkling stories in which are set forth tales of boyhood success that make one wonder. Some young man in his twenties has made a million; someone else has reached a high station before he is 35. Has the world changed, shutting out the man who has turned 40?

Well, follow those "boy wonders" and usually you find they are not such howling successes after all. Seldom do they live up to the advertising. They haven't done nearly so much as has been recorded, or, after the first big jump, they never jump again. Many of them later in life have rather a hard time of it.

Then go more extensively into the records and you will find, today as in past decades, that real success usually comes after forty. The period up to that time is necessarily one of preparation and getting a foothold. At 40 the man who has looked to his health and his mental training is at the height of his power. Whatever position he has gained he is able to hold and to use as a point from which to advance. His family is founded, his business connections are made, the foundation is laid for success. At that time he has the experience and confidence to carry him through.

Nor does there appear to be much to the assertion that a man gets no new ideas after reaching 40. There are too many cases to disprove that. MacCauley said that of the really good books, nineteen-twentieths of them were written by men who had reached this middle point in life. Lew Wallace did not complete Ben Hur until he was past 50. William de Morgan did not become a novelist until he was in his sixties. A reporter whose name has become a tradition on the London Times did not write a line until he was fifty. The really great lawyers, doctors and financiers are past 40.

The world has not changed; the old rules for success still hold. It is best, as a general proposition, to look on the period up to 40 as preparatory; getting as much experience and power as you can, and climbing as high as you can in connection with this preparation; but reserving your strength for the real race after the half-mile point is turned.

LUCY STONE LEAGUERS

The Lucy Stone League, which is an organization advocating that women retain their maiden names after marriage, has been the subject of much controversy lately.

Most men can't understand why they refuse to take their husband's names, but are willing to take everything else he has.

Their slogan is "A Lucy Stone Gathers No Boss."

One man said that when he proposed he asked for a wife and they gave him a Lucy Stone.

Two of the most inconspicuous figures in history are the husbands of Lucy Stone and Lydia Pinkham.

Lucy probably kept her own name because her husband's was difficult to pronounce. Although it couldn't possibly have been harder than Stone.

The girls claim that they don't want to lose their individuality. In other words, they advocate "the freedom of the shes."

Many of them insist not only on keeping their own individuality, but that of their husbands also. Their husbands become merely a violet by a Lucy Stoner. The only thing that makes a Lucy Stoner more indignant than to have some man suggest that she change her name is to have no man suggest that she do it.

It isn't so much that she wants to get married as that she at least wants the opportunity of refusing to.

SOME DAY

The Fields Museum, at Chicago, issues a detailed report on the discoveries made by its expedition to Kish, in Mesopotamia, where a cemetery several thousand years old was excavated.

It prints pictures of the pottery, weapons and ornaments found in the graves. To most of us they are interesting only because they are so imperfect, so crude. We marvel that people could have lived with such makeshift things.

But we don't realize that a couple of thousand years from now when some historical society issues a report on the civilization of America in the twentieth century, people of that future time are going to find our finest machines and most cunningly devised instruments just as crude as the clay pots and the copper hairpins of the old Mesopotamians are to us.

The government announces that only four months remain in which war veterans may convert and reinstate the war risk insurance they took out during the World War. Any ex-service man in good health may reinstate his policy, no matter how long ago it lapsed, but this offer holds good only for four more months. Since the terms offered are extremely liberal, an ex-service man who hasn't attended to this matter yet will act at once, if he is wise.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

In the District Court of Cass county, Nebraska.

In the Matter of the Estate of Mary E. Thompson, deceased.

The above cause came on for hearing upon the petition of Frank A. Clodt, administrator of the estate of Mary E. Thompson, deceased, praying for a license to sell Lots four, five and six, in Block twenty-five, of South Park Addition to the City of Plattsmouth, Nebraska, or a sufficient amount of the same to bring the sum of $500.00 for the payment of debts allowed against said estate and the costs of administering the same, there not being sufficient personal property to pay said debts and expenses.

It is therefore ordered that all persons interested in said estate appear before me in the District Court room in the courthouse in the City of Plattsmouth, Nebraska, on the 24th day of April, 1926, at ten o'clock a. m., to show cause why a license should not be granted to said administrator to sell the above described real estate of said deceased to pay debts and expenses of said estate and that this order be published in the Plattsmouth Journal for four successive weeks preceding said time.

Dated this 11th day of March, A. D. 1926.

JAMES T. BEGLEY, Judge of the District Court.
