WHEN HE OPENS THE GRAVES

And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your grave.

The trees are budding very fast.

The new mayor goes in next Monday.

Farmers are pleased with the fine weather.

Meeting expenses isn't half so difficult as dodging them.

Either enforce the speed limit or take the law off the book.

Getting even is a virtue only if it is with your bank account.

The faster you try to wait the longer it seems to take you.

Autos and radios, you can't look at either and tell what distance you will get.

New fashions would be more comfortable if the weather wasn't so old-fashioned.

Well, just stop a minute and think. We can't understand what some motorists are driving at.

But the United States isn't such a terrific place. There are more than 100,000 bicycles in Tokio.

President Von Hindenburg must have a new line now. He is making a speaking tour of Germany.

The points about spring yet to be settled are, have we had it, is it yet to come, or isn't there to be any.

Harish F. Stone, who is 54, is the youngest of the justices of the supreme court of the United States.

It seems to be around election time in Spain. The king over there picked up a day laborer and drove him home.

Those cocktails out at San Diego were the old familiar kind—you could take a dozen of them, they were so mild.

Vision Back of Engineers.—Headline. The place for vision, it seems to us, is in front. Hindsight is fine, but something everybody has.

Every year there is an overproduction of advice in this country, and yet the producers seem to have no difficulty in disposing of the whole crop.

Maybe another reason so little is heard of Billy Sunday these days is that so many other erstwhile reserved preachers have succeeded in out-Sundaying him.

Patriotism is the ability to believe that one would pay less for one's automobile tires if the rubber monopoly was owned in the United States instead of in England.

THE WOMAN'S CHANCE

Nowadays any woman can succeed in the kind of work she likes to do.

Is it the arts? A woman of the British nobility is one of the world's ablest sculptors; and within the past few months two young girls, Marion Talley and Mary Lewis, have reached stardom in grand opera.

Is it the professions? One of the country's most eminent neurologists is a woman on the staff of the government hospital for the insane at Washington; and the prosecutor of all prohibition cases in the police court of the District of Columbia is Mrs. Rebecca S. Greathouse.

Is it business? In Germany, after the World War, Frau Hedwig Heyl converted her immense dye factory into a canned goods plant, making it a paying business from the start.

In Oklahoma City Mrs. Walter Draper, 86-year-old widow of a congressman, earns her living as a telephone operator.

In Constantinople, Makboule Hanoun, daughter of a former governor of Saloniki, is getting rich running a dressmaking shop.

A few months ago cablegrams reported the death of Captain Maderhda Budennaya the Joan of Arc of Red Russia, who was a dead shot and fought countless battles leading her own troops.

Miss Gertrude Bell, who won fame on secret service for the British in Cairo during the World War, is now one of the ruling powers in Iraq.

Mrs. Jacob Baur, head of a big business and known as "Chicago's most extraordinary woman," announced recently that she was running for congress because she considered it her civic duty.

So it goes, and endless list of great and courageous things brilliantly done by women who buckled down to work. And what they did is prophecy that you also will excel.

Those political friends of the farmers who are always ready to fly in the face of economic law in order to save agriculture should give careful attention to a report from the Department of Agriculture on the consumption of flour in the United States.

A friend asks us, "Can they recall an officer elected by the people?" We suppose so. But we are no lawyer, of which there are ten or fifteen in town.

The wets and the dries are having the times of their lives, and it will be a happy event when the time comes for congress to adjourn for their vacation.

A pint of liquor was found in a precinct ballot box by a Chicago judge of election. We contend that it should be counted as a vote for our rotund friend, George Brennan, for senator.

Nebraskans are again reminded of one of their duties by a proclamation from the governor. It designates the week of April 19-24 as forestation week. In this week falls Arbor day, April 22, anniversary of the birth of J. Sterling Morton, whose example and precept did so much to stimulate tree planting in Nebraska.

Once upon a time there dwelt a couple who grew tired of looking at each other across the breakfast table. Also, the dinner table.

"Shall I consult a lawyer?" queried the man of himself. Then, shaking his head in negative fashion he added: "No, I shall consult a florist."

Beginning next day, a high bank of cut flowers adorned the dining table, completely cutting off the man's view of his wife, and his wife's view of him.

"This costs less than a lawyer," said the man, "and it looks better from the outside."

Field Marshal Hindenberg has completed a service of six years in the German army. That's nothing. Some of us who took up arms during the World War were certain, when the thing was over, we had spent 100 years in the United States Army.

LAW ENFORCEMENT

Officials charged with responsibility for impartial enforcement of laws not universally approved cannot fail to derive encouragement from such a convention as that of the women's national committee for law enforcement, now in session in Washington.

President Coolidge perhaps with the dramatic prohibition hearing in mind, was moved to observe in his brief message to the convention that he was heartened by the interest of many sincere and thoughtful American women in promoting obedience to the laws.

As he said it is of utmost importance that free citizens who believe in self-government and would make any necessary sacrifice to perpetuate it should realize that law enforcement is "not a matter of choice but an expression of a moral requirement."

Only the superficial citizens of a republic can ask their public servants to ignore laws that represent the convictions and sentiments of popular majorities.

There is, however, another aspect of the question of law making. Insistence upon law enforcement is not in the least incompatible with earnest intellectual and moral opposition to a mistaken law, or with vigorous efforts to bring about its amendment or repeal.

The conscientious citizen is just as anxious to correct legislative errors as he is to vindicate the authority of the law while it remains law.

Politics and government are not exact sciences. Lawmakers constantly revise and improve their handiwork. They are not infallible, and they do not serve the cause of good government by obstinate adherence to a demonstrable fallacy.

It is the duty of intelligent lawmakers to make statutes enforceable by making them reasonable and consistent with the judgments of science and the ascertained results of experience.

John Garibaldi Sargent is stealing the stuff of his colleague, Secretary Kellogg. If Kellogg did not originate the excuse of keeping things dark that "publication would be incompatible with the public interest" he has been most faithfully addicted to it.

Will you tell us the names of those two persons?" "Can I or will I?" "Can you?" "Yes."

And the reason given for this reticence is Attorney-General Sargent's tender solicitude for the public interest. It is to laugh.

The Liverpool Medical association desired to commemorate the great service which F. T. Paul, eminent surgeon, performed for mankind. Instead of erecting the conventional bust, the association has made a bronze cast of the surgeon's right hand, the hand which made possible delicate and critical operations.

If this form of commemoration becomes a fad, we expect to see casts of Ann Pennington's knees, Lady Astor's eyes, Marion Talley's larynx, Charlie Chaplin's feet, Dempsey's fist and, possibly, Mussolini's martyred nose.

This may be an age of specialization when even parts of the body may lead one to success. But, after all, it is the mind which is the directing force that makes all things possible.

For the average person, the mind expresses itself best through the character of the face.

A bust of Surgeon Paul would probably be a more enduring monument and a greater inspiration to other physicians than the bronze cast.

Take an army of boys chasing butterflies, put bald heads and wrinkles on the boys, and change the butterflies into banknotes, and there you have a beautiful panorama of the modern world.

HEAT FROM SEA

The master quest of the scientists of the world is the search for new sources of energy.

Among German scientists this fascinating quest has taken a new direction. Germans are seeking to utilize the enormous supplies of heat latent in sea water.

The pressure of the vapor thus obtained would be used in steam turbines. The exhaust would be condensed by means of cold water.

The search for new sources of energy is one of the most fascinating adventures that constantly confronts men of science.

We know now that there is a tremendous source of heat and energy in the atom. Some day it will move the world with new power.

Every day this world becomes a more fascinating place in which to live.

HONEYMOON COOKING

A certain city health commissioner believes that young husbands are being dangerously overfed. The young wife is so ambitious about her cooking, so anxious to show off her skill and keep her husband's heart by satisfying his stomach, that she "serves her husband delicacies, pastries, sweets and an over-abundant supply of fats, instead of feeding him fresh fruits and vegetables."

It doesn't matter so much for a little while at first, the doctor admits. But if it continues the over-feeding will make the husband lazy, ill-natured, lacking in pep.

Undoubtedly the warning is sound and logical. Overfeeding with fats and starches is bad for people—male or female—and fruits and vegetables are good. But what most startles the casual reader is the commissioner's calm assurance of the skill of brides in the culinary arts.

To hear the pessimists, one might think no modern young woman used more effort or knowledge than that required to open a can or make a trip to the delicatessen store. If the brides of that blessed community are keen and skillful with their household jobs, more power to their cake-mixing elbows.

Soon enough as the family increases, will the rich chocolate cakes give place to batches of plain cookies, the mayonnaise mixer vanish as the big bowl of apples and oranges appears on the sideboard, and buttered carrots and spinach march along with a deadly regularity never accorded to mushrooms a la king.

If we may judge by reports of what was said in the pulpit one way and another around the country on Sunday, the country is spending six days a week frivolously and getting well scolded for it on the seventh.

President Coolidge is not in favor of a United States film censor. He is inclined to believe that the states should have control of this matter.
