HONOR CHAPLAINS KILLED IN ACTION

Washington, May 5.—A bronze tablet was unveiled today at Arlington national cemetery in tribute to twenty-three arm chaplains who were killed in action or died during the world war.

The unveiling took place in the presence of Secretary of War Davis, a large group of regular army chaplains and clergymen who formerly were in the military service and relatives of the men honored.

McCook, Neb., May 6.—The fate of Bert M. Davis, former wealthy grocer and stock raiser of Beaver City, is in the hands of the jury following the closing of arguments in his trial on a charge of having murdered his wife, Blanche Davis, in order that he might wed Mrs. Kate Ressler, a neighbor woman.

Dr. Eggers, an associate of Myers, was called to the stand by the state and testified that in his belief death was the result of strychnine poisoning.

Both Mr. Myers and Eggers testified that plate pictures were taken of the substantial body of Myers. The jury will determine from the conflicting testimony of physicians whether or not Mrs. Davis died from poison, and second, whether or not Davis wrote notes to Mrs. Ressler and was intimate with her prior to his wife's death.

It is a sorry commentary on the honesty and good faith of the average business man of America, that whenever trade in certain lines becomes unprofitable, the number of men in such occupations at once increases.
