Golden Text: "Seekest thou a man diligent in his business, he shall stand before kings."—Proverbs 22:19.

Joseph Dreams Dreams

Joseph was a wonderful boy, and a wonderful man. Joseph was the son of Jacob, who loved Rachel, one of the most wonderful of women, and was a reflection of the best in both these characters, and as such was indeed a wonderful son. He was the favorite of the father, and was the one of the most diligent in his life, for she had died when he was a mere lad of some thirteen years. This was at the time that the only full brother of Joseph, Benjamin, was born. When Joseph was seventeen years of age, his father to show his affection for him, had a coat made of many colors, this signifying that he considered him in a way more capable and especially endowed than the others of the family. At this time Joseph dreamed a dream, in which he was binding sheaves in the harvest field with his brothers, and the sheaves of his brothers bowed to his sheaf, and again he dreamed a dream, which he also told his brothers. In this he said, "Behold the sun, the moon and eleven stars did obedience to me." Thus signifying that even his father, his mother and his brethren should all bow down to him. For this his brothers hated him and could not treat him decent.

At this time there was a drouth in the land where Jacob lived and he sent the boys with the flocks north where there was more pasture and where Jacob had some lands. This was at or near Shechem, and after they had been away for some time, Jacob said to Joseph, a lad of seven years. "Go find the boys with the stock and find out how they are getting along. Take with you some food for them, and then come and tell me how they are doing and if the stock is all right." While Joseph was on his way he could be trusted with this mission.

Brothers Conspire Against Him

The matter of the coat of many colors which Jacob had given his son Joseph rankled in the breasts of the other brothers and but one of them had a feeling of fellowship for the lad. As he approached, they could discern him a long way off on account of this pretty coat, and they said, "Here comes the dreamer. Now let us kill him and he will not be so smart and rule over us." For it was the belief that dreams were portends of things which were to come to pass. So when he came they seized him and were going to kill him, when Reuben said, "Let us not kill him, but let us put him in this dry cistern," which had been heaved out of solid rock, and there let him die. Now Reuben had in mind to come again and take Joseph from the pit and turn him at liberty, that he might return to his father. While Reuben was away to look after some of the stock, a caravan of traders from the interior of Asia, came along and to them the brothers said Joseph, and they departed for Egypt and took Joseph with them. But a little while afterwards came Reuben to the pit to take Joseph out and found him gone. He went to the brothers, telling them, whereupon they dipped the coat in the blood of a kid which they had killed, and sent it to the father saying, we found this coat, and we do not know whether it is thy son's coat or not. Jacob said a wild beast has slain my son, and he mourned many days.

Now we see Joseph as he is with the band of Midianite traders; they arrive in Egypt, and there they find ready sale for the lad, who is of good appearance, and one whom it would appear would make a good slave. The purchaser was Potiphar, one of the high officers of King Pharaoh of Egypt. The purchase of Potiphar proved a good one, and he soon found out that he could trust him, and he also found that since he had purchased Joseph, that he prospered, and he easily deemed that it was because Joseph believed in God.

While Joseph was a slave he proved himself to be an excellent man for Potiphar, and he was finally trusted and put in charge of the household of Potiphar, who was the custodian of the prison of Egypt, and it is said that Potiphar turned over all the management and care of this prison, as well as the household to Joseph, and he knew but little of how it was run himself. Potiphar was away a good deal during the time Joseph ran the house, this continued for some ten years and Joseph then was a man of twenty-seven years of age.

Potiphar's wife fell in love with Joseph and wanted to beguile him into a disreputable alliance, which he would not agree to, she used a pretext of seeking to have his advice, enticed him into her chamber, where she pressed her desires and as Joseph sought to make his escape, she caught him by his coat which he slipped out of in getting away. Upon Potiphar's return the wife wished to have Joseph, but he refused, and told Potiphar and to add to the very plausible story showed the coat as evidence of an attack on her. It is doubtful whether Potiphar believed this or not, but he had Joseph placed in prison where he remained for three years. But even in prison Potiphar made Joseph warden, or keeper of the prison. Joseph did not sulk or pine, but still believed in the just God of his fathers. Charles Wells has made Joseph to say:

There is ever a good side to be found. Even in a man's bad fortune; for that I who am a prisoner and in disgrace, Do keep the keys, and am the jailor here, Warden of mine own liberty and ease. There were two other prisoners, they being to king's butler and his baker and they dreamed both of them, and they came to Joseph and said we have dreamed dreams, and we would know what they might mean. Now the chief butler said that in his dream that he saw a vine and the ripe clusters of grapes grew thereon and he dreamed that he took the grapes therefrom and pressed the juice into a cup and gave it to Pharaoh. The interpretation of the dream said Joseph is that within three days you shall be taken from prison and restored to your own place. This was done within the stated time, and Joseph asked that he be remembered to Pharaoh, by the butler, but he, when he gained his liberty forgot Joseph. In the case of the baker, he dreamed that he had three baskets on his head for that was the manner of carrying baskets, and in the upper one was all kinds of baked stuff for Pharaoh, and the birds came and carried them away.

This said Joseph is the interpretation of the dream. The three baskets are three days, and in three days shall Pharaoh come and take thy head from thee and shall hang thee to a tree and the birds of the air shall come and eat of thy flesh from off thee.

This was fulfilled in the time and still Joseph remained in prison, under the same conditions as formerly. Then after two full years Pharaoh dreamed a dream, and he dreamed he stood by the river Nile, and as he viewed the river and the lands there he saw seven fat cattle, very beautiful, and as fat and sleek as ever grew, and they came up out of the river and pastured on the luxuriant grass by the river's side, and they made a most beautiful picture. As he gazed upon them in admiration, he also noticed that out of the same river seven more cattle, this time nothing but a rack of bones, the most scrony looking animals that could claim a name of cattle, and they immediately attacked the fat cattle and entirely eat them up, leaving nothing, and after that the poor cattle were just as poor as formerly.

Then Pharaoh slept and dreamed a second dream, this time he saw a field of corn with seven well filled ears which were beautiful, and all growing on one stalk, veritable beauties, while after them came out seven thin ears, blasted by the east wind, and they in a like manner with the other dream, ate the full ears and they were gone and the thin ears still remained thin. We will try and find the interpretation in the next weeks lesson.

Damage Suit Stricken from Court Docket

Case of Harry Linder vs. Dr. J. S. Deering Thrown Out of Court at Cost of Plaintiff.

From Wednesday's Daily— This morning the members of the petit jury panel returned to their labors in the district court where they had expected to assist Judge Begley in disposing of the case of Harry Linder vs. Dr. J. S. Deering, an action for $15,000 damages. The case was short lived however, as on the plaintiff failing to be able to come to trial with the case the matter was ordered stricken from the docket by Judge Begley and the costs taxed to the plaintiff.

The action has been hanging fire through several terms of the district court and is now stricken off the docket that it has so long adorned. The action was filed by the plaintiff who had claimed the $15,000 damage as the result it was alleged of the operation performed by the defendant on the plaintiff on October 23, 1921. It was claimed that all of the affected appendix and intestines had not been removed and which made a second operation necessary.

The plaintiff summoned as chief witness Dr. Carl Johnson of Lincoln but who was not present for the hearing being at Detroit, Michigan, and as the matter had been delayed and continued for a number of times the court decided that it was time to close up the matter.

HAS A USEFUL ARTICLE
From Wednesday's Daily— Bruce Rosenkrans, the versatile and accommodating clerk at the well known clothing emporium of Philip Thiefolt, has perfected a belt rack that is a very neat and attractive piece of work and in addition a very much needed addition to the store equipment. The rack is one that will hold a large number of belts and has each section of the rack labeled with the sizes of the belts and saves a great deal of time in serving the trade and obviates the necessity of having to haul over all of the belts in stock before the right size is found. The rack is made so that it can be turned to any size that is desired with ease. Mr. Rosenkrans is planning improvements on the device and will probably have the device patented as it is an article very useful in stores and should have a good demand on the market.

HAVE MASHED POTATOES

From Tuesday's Daily— Herman Thomas, the genial agent of the Missouri Pacific railroad in this city has just purchased him a cozy and comfortable house that he has had moved from the Masonic Home grounds where it formerly stood, to the lot that Mr. Thomas purchased at the corner of 13th and Elm street. Now where the house is to rest has been a potato patch, as the former owner of the lot had the whole area of the lot planted with the favorite Irish fruit. Herman, it is said by his friends had a double purpose in getting the residence moved, first, the securing of a fine and comfortable home and second to secure a crop of mashed potatoes without a great effort as the moving of the house has thoroughly mashed the potatoes that Bill Evers had planted there and now all Herman has to do is to go out and bring in the mashed potatoes.
