What the democrats really need is some kind of a rule that will insure them two-thirds of the vote at the polls.

It would be a good joke on the wets if the dries would let them have their referendum and then beat them at their own game.

Senator Reed merciful to a foe. Illness of Wheeler takes edge from the senator's examination and as a result the "show" that Washington expected is merely interesting.

"KARNAK TOOK UP WHERE THE OTHERS FAILED"

"Five Operations Failed, But This Medicine Made A Clean Sweep Of All My Troubles," Says Mrs. Bruner.

Mrs. Emma Bruner, Karnak is sold in Plattsmouth exclusively by F. G. Fricke & Co., and by the leading druggist in every town.

"Just think of it, I underwent five operations without getting relief, and then Karnak just made a clean sweep of all my troubles," declares Mrs. Emma Bruner, of 1305 Ames Ave., Omaha, Neb.

"Words can't express the agony I went through. I was forced to live on milk and toast, and even then my stomach cramped and cramped and pained me terribly, and gas pressed around my heart till I could hardly breathe. Weakening pains made my back feel as if it would break, my housework was a burden, and I just couldn't get relief.

"But Karnak took up where everything else failed, and made a clean sweep of my troubles. Why, I don't know when I ever felt better, and I just can't say enough for Karnak."

BIGOTRY

From the state of New Jersey comes this news item:

A Jewish girl became converted to the Roman Catholic faith and entered a convent as a nun. Her parents tore her from their very hearts. They burned her clothes, destroyed all the little pictures and knick-knacks which she had left at home and buried them in a small coffin. Then they went through the long Jewish ceremony of mourning for the dead.

From the state of New York, recently, came this news item: The daughter of a wealthy Catholic eloped with a Jew. Her father promptly disowned her.

The dictionary defines the word "bigot" as follows—"A person who regards his own faith and views in matters of religion as unquestionably right, and any belief or opinion opposed to or different from them as unreasonably or wicked."

Bigotry is wrong. From every standpoint it must be condemned. Whatever is wrong is immoral from the ethical standpoint.

We hear much talk these days about moral training. The churches are clamoring that the young generation are not receiving a sufficient amount of moral training.

If, however, bigotry can exist with religious belief, how can a religion be entrusted with the task of "moral training?"

Is real "moral training" a proper function of the church or should it be left to whatever system of education we have which tries to develop the mind of the young? A system of education, no matter how poor it may be, has, at least, no personal feeling toward other systems of education. It has no bigotry.

If you think that "moral training"—whatever that may mean to you—is the job of the various religions, don't you think that each religion which undertakes it should, at least, throw its bigotry overboard?

To be sure, many Jewish Rabbis will deplore the first item of news mentioned above. They will say that the parents of the girl went too far. You may be equally sure that many Catholic priests will deplore the second item of news. They will say that the father's love for his daughter should have been strong enough to enable him to forgive her.

Both these attitudes reflect charity and kind-heartedness. But do they reflect that sense of justice which ought to be the basis of all "moral training?"

It is a matter upon which there is, probably a great diversity of opinion. This writer can only present his own view.

The church that says "believe in some religion. We prefer you to believe in ours. But if you cannot find it in your heart to agree with us, follow the dictates of your conscience and join another church. If you sincerely believe in the teachings of that other church, our heart and soul are with you."

Such a church may safely be entrusted with the "moral training" of the younger generation.

A North Dakota editor recently left his home town because, in an account of a social affair which thirty guests attended, his paper said, "Thirty guests assembled at the home of J. B. Smith, Monday evening, and a fine time was had by all."

With the franc down alongside the mark, the sou appears to have toppled over the vanishing point on top of the lamented pfennig.

HIGH COST OF KNOWLEDGE

Sir Robert Gregory, in his book called "Discovery," tells a story of Dr. Robert Grant, who was a professor of zoology in London.

Dr. Grant was so devoted to his subject that he spent eight or ten hours of a sleepless day in February wading in the shallows of a bay in order to get some specimens of a little aquatic creature which can best be studied in a living state.

Showing his class the specimens, he said: "I had no companion. I had nothing to eat or drink, I was wet through, my hand were half frozen, and I was chilled to the marrow. But, gentlemen, I am rewarded, I became the happy possessor of no less than three of these beautiful little creatures."

And the professor held up a vial containing three scarcely visible, bladder-like animals. When Newton, then a college teacher, had been engaged twenty years the subject of light and color, a candle left burning among his papers destroyed them.

Twenty years' work was gone. It is recorded by a student of the times that the greater scientist was not himself for a month thereafter. All Newton said about it was that he would be obliged to do the work all over again.

And in a painstaking effort, this is what he did.

When Herschel was making mirrors for his telescope he had to do all his polishing by hand. When in the final stage, the polishing could not cease for a moment. The astronomer's sister had to feed him while he worked.

Once he never took his hand from a mirror for sixteen hours.

It is said that Schwabe, the astronomer who gave the world the facts about sun spots, looked at the sun through his telescope every day that it was visible for thirty years.

THE OFFICIAL DOPE

Here is the official dope on that Pennsylvania primary, as breezily served by Mr. Vare's campaign manager, Mr. Mackey:

Peper had the newspapers, the banks, the high-brows, the bootleggers, the porch-climbers and the social climbers.

Pinchot had the earnest and liberal support of himself, his wife and every member of his family.

Vare got the votes.

Solemn and stately ceremonies symbolizing with all the pomp and glory of ancient Rome, the faith of Nineteen Centuries and the unity of the world-wide church marked the formal opening of the twenty-eighth international eucharistic congress.

WOT A LIFE

Attention, 100-per cent Americans! Here's another thing which will produce in you that emotion known as the hebe-jeebes. The Fascists have begun to undermine American institutions Dr. Charles Fama of New York has been peering into the doings of Italians in America, and he finds what he thinks is proof that these perfidious dwellers on our soil have all privately sworn allegiance to Mussolini. He has taken his fears to the House Immigration and Naturalization Committee, whose chairman is giving them "serious consideration" with a view to a law refusing American citizenship to these persons. So all 100-per centers when they look under the bed each night to see if any emissaries of the Soviet have slipped in should also keep their eye peeled for these Mussolini-loving Fascists.

Dear, Dear! Life in the United States with all these secretive and dangerous foreigners is certainly becoming desperate.

Senator Howell after canal plan, which is a scheme to draw money to pay for a thing that the government has no use for only to relieve those who have placed money in the proposition and want to throw it upon the government. Go after them, senator, hot and heavy!

Here is a typical convention program: (1) Resolution of regret over the nation's increasing lawlessness; (2) discussion and solution of the question, "What's Wrong With America?" (3) clever repartee on the inconsistency of women.
