To the Voters of Cass County

My name will appear on the ballot at the primary election as a candidate for the republican nomination to the office of sheriff of Cass county, and the support of my friends will be appreciated in the contest.

I am serving a two-year term in the office of sheriff and now seeking reelection for the second term for this office.

During my term I have tried to enforce the law fairly and impartially, protecting the interests of the taxpayers of Cass county, in the handling of crimes of all nature and in the handling of the business affairs of the office of sheriff.

Those who have had business with the office of the county sheriff have received the best service possible and the law enforcement has been made with a just regard for the laws of the state and the protection of the interests of the good people of Cass county.

My desire in the discharge of the office has been to make the law a protection to the people of the county and not to terrorize the taxpayers and residents of the county—fairly and impartially give my full time and service to the people who have called me to the office of chief law enforcing officer of the county.

If re-nominated and re-elected to the office of sheriff, I will do my utmost to serve the best interests of the state and county and to maintain the enforcement of all laws of the state.

If the record of my conduct of the office in the past two years, I feel justified in seeking your support for re-election to the office of sheriff and will appreciate your support.

Cass County Held Liable in Stohlman Case

Commissioner Rules Man in Employ of County When Hurt—Relieves City of Damage Claim.

The case of William Stohlman vs. the Village of Louisville and the County of Cass, wherein the plaintiff asked for damages for injuries sustained while working on a county bridge in the Village of Louisville, was heard before the state compensation officer in this city on June 21. An attempt was made to hold the Village of Louisville jointly responsible with the county, inasmuch as the village had paid for the labor on the said county bridge, but the evidence showed that the county commissioners were the employers and that the bridge in question was constructed and maintained by the county.

Following is the finding of the state compensation officer.

DOCKET G. NUMBER 167
Louisville, Nebr.

William Stohlman vs. Village of Louisville and County of Cass, Insurance Carrier: Employers' Liability.

Plaintiff, a laborer, was employed by the County Commissioners of Cass county to repair the planking on a bridge in the Village of Louisville. While engaged in that work he was struck by an automobile driven by a girl and suffered a broken leg. A controversy arose as to the liability of the village or the county.

A petition was filed May 26, 1926, and a hearing had June 21, 1926, when plaintiff was awarded compensation at $15.00 each week from November 20, 1925, to June 21, 1926, together with hospital and medical expense as provided by law.

The Commissioner decides that the County of Cass was the employer and therefore liable.—Louisville Courier.

Tells the Story of His Assault

William Deckert, Found Tied to Log in Missouri River, Gives Details of Attack Tuesday Night

Tekamah, Neb., July 8.—William Deckert, twenty-five Iowa farmer and former German army aviator, who yesterday was found severely injured and tied to a log floating down the Missouri river, told the story of the assault which almost cost him his life. The details were given by the young river island farmer between his lapses into unconsciousness. He is in a critical condition.

Deckert's partial report of the attack on him by three men was given to Sheriff Smith of Burt county, Neb., along with the names of the alleged attackers. Sheriff Smith refused to divulge the names of the trio pending their arrest.

A motive for the assault upon the former German soldier has not yet been definitely established, although Deckert has told the complete story of his being a participant to the Missouri river log jam.

After maintaining absolute ignorance of any reason for the men wanting to put him out of the way, Deckert finally admitted as a part of his incoherent story, that he had had several arguments, over "creation" of new land that the Missouri river is creating at St. Louis, Mo., with the Nebraska side after receiving the warning. He paid little attention to the note he said because he thought it was the work of his former housekeeper, who feared for his life in his somewhat unsafe boat.

At 9 o'clock Tuesday night three men met him at his boat on the Nebraska side, he said. One of them stuck a gun into his side, asking him if he did not know who sent the note. Upon his negative reply, the men started cursing him and calling him names that "would make any man fight," Deckert said. This roused his ire and he attempted to strike the man who did most of the talking. Deckert then was clubbed from behind.

He vaguely remembered being trussed up hands and feet and fastened to the log and had a hazy recollection of the log being slid into the river.

He remembered few of his many attempts to free himself from the log as it rolled and tossed, ducking him in and out of the stream for twelve hours.

Arrests in connection with the attempted murder of William T. Deckert are expected at any time, as officers are rapidly running down clues that are expected to place the blame for the crime on the returned home. Mrs. McKerron is a sister of Dr. Westover.

J. L. McKerron and wife, of St. Joseph, Missouri, who were here visiting at the home of Dr. and Mrs. R. P. Westover, have returned home.

Land Divided in Lithuania

Division of Estates by Agrarian Reform Measures Near Completion.

London.—The splitting up of the large estates in Lithuania which has been going steadily since the adoption of the Agrarian Reform Law by the Seimas, in February, 1922, is expected to be almost completed in the present year. About 1,850,000 acres were affected by the law, the purpose of which was to supply agricultural land to the landless and inadequately landed from a land "fund" composed of state land, lands assigned by the former Russian government for Russian objects, private land areas above 200 acres in single hands, various lands acquired by unlawful means and now reverting to the State.

In 1923 about 375,000 acres were parceled out and in 1924 a further 350,000 acres. The figure for 1925 was 300,000 acres, leaving about 70 per cent of the total still to be dealt with.

Up to the beginning of 1923 loans to new settlers were made only in kind—grain and timber—but thereafter money and other loans in kind were granted as well. Up to Jan. 1, 1925, loans to the value of nearly $,800,000 (its $380,000) were made. Money loans were 1,900,000 lts of this total, loans in timber 3,100,000 lts, in buildings 2,310,000 lts, in grain 940,000 lts, in seed grain 522,000 lts.

When supplying land to new settlers, the government issued temporary transfer agreements, which it is now intended to replace by the final deeds of land transfer. Until this is done, the new settlers are unable to obtain loans from the banks and other credit institutions with which to supplement the very meager government loan.

The buildings of appropriated estates were sold by public auction, which is now intended to replace by the final deeds of land transfer. Until this is done, the new settlers are unable to obtain loans from the banks and other credit institutions with which to supplement the very meager government loan.

The Ministry of Agriculture is already holding special building courses at Siauliai and it intends to acquire the plant necessary for the manufacture of cement, bricks and tiles with which the work of erecting buildings for the new settlers can be carried out. The material will be paid for by the latter out of the subventions granted to them and they will also have to transport it at their own expense. An album of building models is in course of preparation to help the settlers in selecting the type of building they prefer.
