LIKewise, YE HUSBANDS

Likewise, ye husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wife, as unto the weaker vessel...

Have you not got over the 4th yet?

If you kill enough time it will kill you.

The more you rest the restless you become.

Gasoline prices seem to be set by the thermometer.

Some estimate the number of automobiles in Plattsmouth on the 4th, at 5,000.

Pretty soon women will look overdressed when they appear in one-piece bathing suits.

Oregon is cutting two billion feet of lumber per year. We'll be out of the woods before long.

There are still enough old-fashioned folks who believe in arbitration to make it interesting at least.

If your only car is a flivver you don't have to go around worrying about wrecking your limousine.

About all the birds have returned from the South now, including the goose who bought Florida land.

People who complain that they never get what's coming to them wouldn't be so well off if they did.

The day may come when the Fourth may be made safe, but if it is ever made safe they can take our ball out.

In New York someone stole a silver plate upon which the Ten Commandments were engraved, but perhaps he couldn't read.

An actress says she is mad at her husband. But that doesn't get her name in our newspaper. Nothing short of divorce goes.

There are hundreds of persons in every community who will never believe a "fresh paint" sign until they have dabbed a finger in the paint.

If the former husbands of Peggy Joyce and Mae Murray will all join the Democratic party, defeat of the predatory Republicans is assured.

Brazil has resigned from the league of nations, but it will be two years before she gets out. The league differs from most fashionable clubs, in that you have to be put on the waiting list if you want to get out.

Mr. Will Hys has been retained as czar of the motion pictures for another ten years at a salary reported to be between $100,000 and $150,000 a year. Immediately after signing the contract Mr. Hays went into a private room and swooned to be a great American statesman.

It's too hot for any use.

Work hard and become a prominent citizen so everyone will have to laugh at the jokes you tell.

Words are so funny. It used to be "drink, drink, drink." But now it's "drink, drink, drink, drink."

Bootleg customers prove one thing. Even if this isn't the land of the free, it's the home of the brave.

The modern girl is considered a good wife if she can put up with her husband's two evils, take up working instead of loafing.

A Nebraska man, now 100, announces that he gave up smoking at the age of 98. He must have felt the practice might shorten his life.

If street dresses get much shorter, the poor bathing suit's only chance to attract attention will be for its owner to wear it folded up as a sash.

Some people never get tired of running for office. Look at Charley Pool! Does he want to stay in the balance of his days? It looks that way.

In New York women crowd the big stores to see living models showing what women will wear, and men crowd private exhibitions to see what they don't wear.

Flunking a course in French is one of the most common phenomena of modern college life. It is only when it affects a president's son that it becomes noteworthy.

There are 364 days in the year on which we can be sensible as our capacity and inclination dictates, but we reserve the inalienable right to be foolish on the Fourth.

General von Lundenorff says his wife's incessant smoking caused all their domestic unhappiness. He's lucky at that. The average woman would have gassed him.

Out in Kansas two newspapers are warring over the important question whether a college graduate's first car, on leaving the seat of learning is to buy a pair of garters or a hat.

There are self-styled Americans who care no more for the United States than they do the dirt under their feet so long as they have plenty of money and can dupe the poorer class.

An American sailor was found asleep on a bench in the grounds of Buckingham palace in England recently. When arrested King George ordered him released. This proves that a king still has some power in England.

It is interesting to know that between March 16, 1915, and March 1, 1926, the federal trade commission has made forty-five different investigations at the instance of the senate or house, the president or the attorney-general. The total amount of money expended in these investigations has been $3,332,593.74. This does not include investigations made at the instance of the commission itself. Commissions are expensive luxuries.

AN OLD RACE PASSES

We need a poet to sing the song of a passing race—the American harvest hand. Time was when the scorching summer sun of the great middle western wheat belt beat down on a migratory herd of adventurous men bound on a mission both economic and romantic.

To quote a staff correspondent of the Kansas City Star, they led a hard life and "followed the harvest from Oklahoma on north through Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas into Canada. Blazing sun and intense heat to fight all the way—dust of many a weary mile of country road to a new "stand."

These men spent oppressive nights in barns, traveled in box cars, often were robbed of their earnings while on the road. But the harvest hands took their bumps without great complaint. His spirit grew as hard as the callouses on his hands, and as rough as his tanned skin. He exchanged chews of tobacco with his partner on the road, swapped rough and ready yarns and grew philosophical.

But today the species is rare. Farm machinery has wrought a great change in the farm labor situation on the wheat plains. Many farms require no outside assistance at harvest. Those that do are supplied by motor car hands, a new genus that infests the grain belt highways in dilapidated flivvers.

The government maintains permanent employment bureaus in many towns throughout the wheat country, but machinery has displaced about 75 per cent of human help.

Kansas has a banner crop of wheat. It may be the greatest in its history. And 80 per cent of it will be harvested by motor car hands, the product of an efficient age. It takes fewer of this new species of harvest hands to handle the grain, because they can get about with greater ease. They can do more work, with less labor, than their more romantic predecessors, but even they will grow fewer and fewer throughout the wheat country. They are the remnant of a picturesque race.

VOTING AGE FOR WOMEN

Not only justice but common sense is on the side of the women of England in their protest against the present suffrage laws which permit men to vote at the age of 21 but withhold the ballot from the women until they are 30. It is there is any one thing every one knows to be true it is that a woman at 21 is more mature than a man at the same age. She almost invariably has more common sense. She is certainly just as intelligent. It is hard to conceive of the reason behind the discrimination unless it is a desire to grant the vote to as few women as possible. The fact that seasoned statesmen like Lord Balfour and Lord Cecil are in sympathy with the women's demand for equal suffrage gives promise of a successful issue.

There are enough women voting to properly rebuke the parliamentarians who vote for the prolongation of the discrimination. An interesting phase of the discussion which has been forced in the alleged fear of the Conservative and Liberal leaders of granting the ballot to 5,000,000 women now excluded. If there is any sense at all in this fear it rests upon the theory that a majority of women between the ages of 21 and 30 are radical in spirit and would strengthen the Labor Party. If that be true, it does not matter much what Parliament does at the present time—the future of the Labor Party is assured. But what becomes of the ancient notion that women of the ages involved are naturally snobbish and more prone to associate themselves with the Lords and Ladies than with the dock hands and the seamstresses?

THE NEIGHBORLY SPIRIT

Out in Kansas Mrs. John Hybele's husband died, leaving a 75-acre field of wheat and a 1-acre plot of oats standing. It was the height of the busy season, with all hands busy in their own fields.

But they were not too busy to lend a hand. The other day 11 binders and 27 shockers descended upon the uncut fields. A 4 o'clock in the afternoon the wheat and oats were in the shocks.

The old spirit of neighborliness seems dead sometimes. In the cities people live next to one another for years and never say as much as "How do you do?" A next-door neighbor might die and be buried without his fellows knowing anything about it.

It is good to know that the spirit of the old neighbor, who used to rush in with a glass of grape jelly whenever anyone in the family would fall ill, has not vanished from the earth.

THE "SILENT" COOLIDGE

The tradition of "the silent man in the White House" is fully disposed of, so far as the number of presidential words is concerned, by Charles Merz in the New Republic. It is shown that as a matter of fact, Mr. Coolidge is literally the most talkative president we have ever had. Each year he delivers "words enough in public addresses to fill two fair-sized novels," and addresses by word of mouth or special communication some seventy-five kinds of public gatherings annually. In addition to all this he "pours 2,698 words a month, on an average, into the microphone." The total words he utters for public consumption, through the various channels, in a year is amazing. A "silent" man? On the contrary, he is "a very noisy man," who, instead of being economical in vocal expenditure, literally "squanders words."

President Wilson is remembered as a speech-maker, but in the matter of quantity President Coolidge beats him far and away. The comparison draws attention to the difference of method. Wilson discussed the issues of the hour, and did so with remarkable power, partly because he was a master in the choice of words and the selection of the telling phrase. Coolidge does not often refer to political issues, ordinarily confining himself to the safe, sane and universally accepted utterances to which nobody can object and which therefore few can read with more than mild interest. That is why though actually a man of many words, Mr. Coolidge has been described as "silent." It is not without reason that the writer of the New Republic article compares him to a constitutional king in Europe who by custom leaves politics and all debated issues to his prime minister. Mr. Coolidge, according to the writer quoted, "has become a decorative monarch like George V of England."

The driver of a water wagon in Cambridge, Mass., has been convicted of drunkenness. All reform movements, of course, bring a few attendant evils, but we had no idea prohibition was as bad as that. Has it really come to pass that a fellow can't get on the water wagon with reasonable assurance that he will not be pinched for intoxication? We can remember the day distinctly when husbands fooled their wives by telling them they (the husbands) were on the water wagon. The statement didn't mean much then; apparently, it doesn't mean anything now.

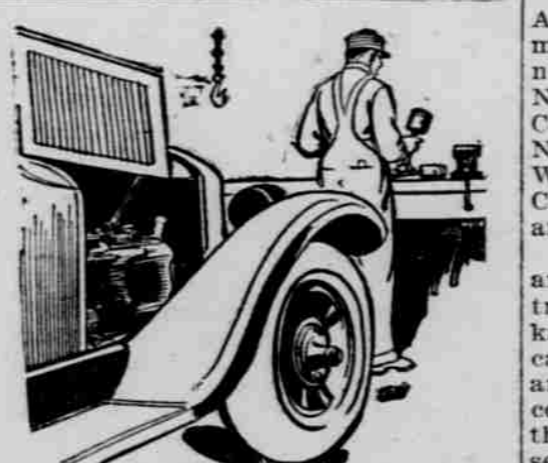

It is said that when Mt. Pelee blew up lava fell in the sea one hundred miles distant, or about one-half as far as the explosion of the Florida boom is now throwing grape fruit.

WHY Procrastinate? Not protect your profits? Feed stock to feed flies?

When White Gold plus ANTI-FLY SALINE means a larger Bank Balance for you.

Professor J. W. McCulloch, Department of Entomology, Kansas State Agricultural College, said:

"Flies are unquestionably an important factor to the live stock industry. Their presence results in worry and irritation to the animal, which is reflected in loss of appetite and the general run-down condition of the animal. Where abundant flies cause a serious loss of blood to animals by their piercing and sucking habits. Dairymen frequently report a loss to the milk supply of from 40 to 60 per cent in years when the flies are especially troublesome. The loss of weight is also an important item to beef cattle and to work animals. In some years, losses of from 10 to 25 per cent in weight have been noted. One other item which might be mentioned is that of the loss of time to the farm operations, since it frequently is impossible to work horses owing to the presence of large numbers of flies in the field."

The stable or stock fly is a farm robber that unless checked, produces great losses to owners of all kinds of stock.

The J. & R. Stock Salt Co., of Omaha, Nebraska, manufacturers of Anti-Fly Saline, the modern fly fighting method, has made it possible for stockmen, dairymen and horsemen to combat the fly pest by supplying your merchant with Anti-Fly Saline which you can purchase in 25, 50 and 100 pound white cotton bags. This product is a pinkish white and is fed in the usual way at your salt licks. It is safe and sure, and costs but very little over other salt prices. Ask your merchant. Once you feed Anti-Fly Saline you realize what a haven has been discovered for your stock. They can feed contentedly during the day. No more loss of milk yield and the vitality of your stock is not impaired by the blood-sucking fly.

Remember Anti-Fly Saline

Stock likes it. Stockmen praise it. The J. & R. Stock Salt Co., of Omaha manufactures it. And your merchant will supply you with Anti-Fly Saline.
