The people of Rumania give the queen a most cheerful reception on her return home. Right!
The sesquicentennial closed the other day with a $5,200,000 deficit. "What price independence?"

High altitudes hurt the pilot worse than the plane, says Lieutenant MacReady. Not to mention the passengers.
Houdini left his books to the Congressional library. Perhaps the congressmen can find in them some way to pass farm relief.
One nice thing about the approaching Christmas is the fact that we are certain no one will send us a book of cross word puzzles.

Deaths from heart disease are increasing in Chicago. Did the gangsters know that when they signed their truce?
Plattsmouth is not without its poor and they will get no Christmas presents unless some good Samaritan looks after them.
Charley Chaplin is not the whole "cheese." There are others who have rights that must be respected. And his wife is one of them.

A New York expert predicts houses made with steel frames like skyscrapers. He probably lives in a flat, and the people upstairs are fond of dancing.
Business depressions according to a Yale professor, follow long dry spells. It looks bad for Republican prosperity if General Andrews ever succeeds in doing what he threatens to do.

The divorce laws among the movies are too lenient among the male members. They are more to blame, in many cases, than the wife. Give the devil his dues.
Of all modern foot-wear, the most damnable, devilish and murderous is the high-heeled pump, according to a shoe merchant. No matter what the women wear, or do not wear, someone finds fault with it.

Sensational statements regarding the increase in juvenile crime should be taken with a grain of salt, the labor department says. Reports of that sort may also be taken pleasantly in orange juice, as one takes reports from the labor department regarding the declining cost of living.

You can depend on something good in pictures when you go to the Parmele. An immense crowd was there last night, and the picture, "Midnight Lovers," was a dandy. It could not possibly be otherwise with Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson in the lead.

BILL OF RIGHTS—1927 MODEL
In the bewailing about the current plight of our over-burdened Federal courts, no attention appears to be given to one of the greatest obstacles to their business-like procedure. We refer to the inability of the Federal judiciary to comprehend the exact present meaning of the first, fourth, fifth, sixth, eighth, ninth and tenth amendments to the Constitution. This is not the fault of the jurists who sit upon the Federal benches, because neither the Supreme Court nor any other authority has ever attempted to express these amendments accurately as they exist at the present time. The consequence of this dereliction is that the judges, whose dockets are overloaded with cases which involve reinterpretation of these amendments, are presented with a predicament which amounts to a practical impasse.

In the hope that we may be aiding the judiciary in again achieving a notable degree of efficiency we suggest the following redefinitions. It will be observed that, in the left column, are to be found the parts of the amendments in dispute as adopted by the founding fathers, while, in the right, are to be observed the same articles as they exist at the moment:

ARTICLE I.
Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

ARTICLE I.
Congress shall, except in time of war, make no law abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

ARTICLE IV.
The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated.

ARTICLE IV.
The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, except when it shall be suspected by an official that a person, or persons, may possibly be violating some Federal law.

ARTICLE V.
Nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb.

ARTICLE V.
Nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb, unless the offense be one prohibited by both State and Federal law even though the offense be the same.

ARTICLE VI.
In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed.

ARTICLE VI.
In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a trial at such time as shall suit his prosecutors, and by a jury of whatever state and district said prosecutors believe most likely to convict him.

ARTICLE VIII.
Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

ARTICLE VIII.
The amount of bail required, the fine imposed and the punishment, shall be at the discretion of the court.

ARTICLE IX.
The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

ARTICLE IX.
The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to guarantee these rights to the people, nor shall it be construed to suggest that the people have any rights whatever which government is bound to respect.

ARTICLE X.
The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people.

ARTICLE X.
The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are to be considered as innate powers of the United States.

We make no claim of infallibility for these redefinitions, according to contemporary rulings, of our so-called fundamental rights. But we do believe as we have intimated, that if each Federal judge would frame them and place them above his bench for convenient reference, he would find his duties considerably lightened and his business dispatched with much greater speed.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

CAUSES OF DEPRESSION

There is sometimes prosperity in business and sometimes there is depression.

These periods of depression are considered by some necessary and due to economic causes. Many explanations are given.

The reasons, however, seem to be quite simple. Periods of business depression are simply opportunities for business to get back upon an equitable basis.

They are caused by a department generally from business straight dealing.

An examination of the case yields, after mature consideration, the following causes of these bad spells.

The first cause is extravagance. It is people's buying what they do not need or paying unnecessary prices for things they think they need.

It will be found that the community as well as the man has spells of buying when it loads up on a lot of useless things. Paying for these things and getting back to normalcy is one cause of depression.

Another cause is inflation. It is the old greenback fallacy, that plenty of easy money is necessary for everybody. It is the pit into which France, Italy, Germany and most European countries fell and from which they are climbing out with much labor. Inflation is always a tax made upon thrift. It hurts those people who have saved up money and have prepared to live upon their income. It bears hardest upon the saving and careful, and helps most the extravagant and wasteful. This is always a difficult road for any community to follow—to get back from an inflated to a sound currency.

A third cause is waste. The origin of many business successes has been the elimination of waste. In many cases the profits of a concern come from the saving of waste. The forming of huge trusts was primarily for the purpose of eliminating waste. While this is not to be carried to meticulous extreme, intelligent management is always on the watch for waste.

There is a story told of a concern which made money skimming the stream that ran from the stockyards and using the waste fat which flowed upon the surface. That was until the stockyards themselves saw the necessity of saving this loss.

Inefficiency is another cause. It consists in not making good on orders. In lack of promptness and fidelity in carrying out contracts, in poor work, and so on. Nothing pays better in the long run than to do what you say you will do and to make your products reliable and dependable.

Another cause is sheer panic. People get to listening to rumors and paying attention to wild reports that have no foundation. It is easy for these rumors to spread when a lot of superstitious people believe in them and they do vast harm.

All of these causes result in loss of morale and in business depression.

There is no reason whatever why America should not continue to progress without serious setbacks if it will stick to the old honesties of business. Honesty and integrity are not fanciful excellencies, but they have their effect upon practical business prosperity.

There is no way to insure permanent business prosperity.

There is no way to insure permanent progress—except to watch the foundation of all good business, which are always the moral qualities, and not a matter of sharp dealing.

Business prosperity does not consist in buying things low and selling them high, in watching the markets go on, but in steady making good.

Congressman Morehead was 64 years old on Thursday of last week—the day he left Falls City for Washington. We extend our most sincere congratulations to our good friend, and hope he may live long, and ever prove as true to his many friends in the future as he has in the past. A grand good man is Hon. John Morehead and none know it better than the writer.

A bill will be presented at the approaching session of congress carrying appropriation for building a stadium on Potomac Drive, sometimes known as the speedway, as a memorial to the late President Roosevelt. The idea is a good one, except that if the stadium is built, the city of Washington ought to pay for it and not ask the entire nation to do so.

ONE-THIRD OF A DRESS

Somewhere between three dresses and one-third of a dress lies the bold mean of women's gowns. Turkey is one of the last countries from which fashion hints might be expected to emanate yet it is from the Constantinople press that this mild suggestion comes intended, to be sure, to apply only to Turkish women.

Up-to-date women of Constantinople, it appears are addicted to the one-third type of gown, while women of the interior sometimes wear three dresses, one over the other, long and flowing, more than twenty-six yards of material in each. Aghast at the waste caused by this over-modesty, the perfect of one Turkish village—a brave man—has pre-emptorily ordered a change in style in the interest of national economy.

Maybe it'll work. It all depends. One-third of a dress sometimes costs less than three dresses. And then—what?

Dr. William J. Mayo, famous surgeon, declares his belief that man has a soul, and says that the world needs more religion and fewer creeds. The thought is not new. Crying out against creeds will never result in their disbandment. The average man is too fond of his own opinions, and gets too much relish out of scriptural interpretation.

Messrs. Clويد and Moore, managers of the Parmele Theater, are trying their best to please the amusement-loving people of Plattsmouth. They get the best pictures to be had and if you fall to see them its your own fault.

Each day, as the inspirational writers assure us, is an entirely new creation. We agree; today neither bores us nor bothers us. What irritates is the remembrance of all our yesterdays.

ORDER OF HEARING AND NOTICE OF PETITION FOR SETTLEMENT OF ACCOUNT

In the County Court of Cass County, Nebraska.
State of Nebraska, Cass County, ss.
To all persons interested in the estate of John Coleman, deceased:
On reading the petition of W. E. Hand, administrator, praying a final settlement and allowance of his account filed in this court on the 6th day of December 1926 and for proofs of heirship, assignment of the residue of said estate, and for said administrator's discharge from further liability by reason of said administration—

It is hereby ordered that you and all persons interested in said matter may and do, appear at the County Court to be held in and for said county on the 14th day of December A. D. 1926, at 10 o'clock a. m., to show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted, and that notice of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof be given to all persons interested in said matter by publishing a copy of this order in The Plattsmouth Journal, a semi-weekly newspaper printed in said county, for one week prior to said day of hearing.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and the seal of said court this 6th day of December A. D. 1926.
A. H. DUXBURY,
County Judge.

The failure of prohibition is not a matter of race or religion or temperament or geography. Prohibition is a fundamental folly, potentially capable of moral and governmental ruin. That is the written verdict of history.
