BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON
Sunday, February 20th
By M. S. Briggs

Golden Text: "We are God's fellow workers."—I Cor. 3:9.

Serving Through the Church
The home, the initial unit of service and worship of the Father, and his son, Jesus Christ, is larger and more broadly exemplified in the church. As we learned in last Sunday's lesson, the home was the first place in which people gathered for the worship of the Father, and it was the place where the Master instituted the worship of the Father, and disciples in their homes, which custom continued general for a number of hundred years after the crucifixion of the Master, until the erection of churches became general, and people assembled in them for public worship, united as a church body. So, it was long after the institution of God's church that the organization as a body acquired the habit of meeting in a public place and observing communion.

The first meeting was of the twelve and the Master in an upper chamber—not a public place of meeting. The opposition to the young church was so great that they were compelled to flee the city of Jerusalem, and it was individually that the disciples when they were scattered abroad, did their best and truest work.

Paul taught in a school of Tyrannus, by invitation of the teacher. When the church did grow to a number where there was no private place where all could assemble, a public place was provided. Thus effecting of an organization where they could counsel and where they could hold their business meetings and their public meetings, put the young church in a position where it was able to do more effective work.

This is likewise true today. The church organization is peculiarly fitted to do better and more effective work, and give a broader and wider expression of the power and love of God than could individuals, to the end of glorifying the Father, even as the Master himself so potently expressed himself in many instances, when he said that he had glorified the Father and would glorify him again.

The church of this day and age, with its many auxiliaries, is greatly perfected over the church of olden times, and should be able to accomplish much greater results than with its members working separately.

Christ himself expressed accord with the idea of team work, when he sent out the seventy, two by two, and commanded them to go tell the story of the gospel, to heal the sick and to restore sight to the blind.

It is necessary for us to know the scriptures, for that is the power unto man. "Search the Scriptures, for in them will you find eternal life and they are those which testify of Me." It is well for us to give study of the Scriptures serious and careful consideration ourselves, but there is one provided thru the church organization upon whom we may rely for accurate information and instruction—the minister, whom we provide with a study, in the quiet surroundings of which he may prepare himself to instruct the people in ways of righteousness and the way of salvation, as well as working in a team with their fellow men for carrying the message of Salvation to the ends of the earth. For when the Gospel message of Christ is carried to the ends of the earth, and all people have received it, then and only then will sin be overcome.

The business of looking after the affairs of the church seems to have drifted into the hands of some few, who are willing to shoulder the burden, while most of the others are perfectly willing they shall, which makes it no one's business.

Many ways have been devised for the securing of funds with which to carry on the work. Not like in the early days when the Christians had all things in common and out of this general fund cared for the needs of the church as well as of its members. In later days the ladies took up the matter of providing funds for carrying on the work of the church. This was organized the Ladies Aid, the Dorcas society and many like organizations which have so nobly aided in successfully carrying on the all important work of the church. Besides the matter of providing funds, the Ladies aid of all churches—regardless of the particular name by which they may be known—have gotten together in many ways and are thus doing better and more effective work than would be possible for them to do working individually in the capacity of members. The mission of this loyal band of women is consummated in the fact that they are really and truly what the name implies—a ladies' aid to the better workings of the church.

And again the Young Peoples' society is a mighty potent factor in the working out of the best interests of the young people of the church, for it gives them training in the work of the church, which they will be called upon to assume in a few short years. This preparation for the work they will assume is one of the very fine things which the Young Peoples' society is doing, and it keeps the young people from other and distracting gatherings wherein would be provided an atmosphere in which temptation would be thrown in their way.

The church and its work is a school which prepares all its members for the work of life, as well as for the work of the church and fits one for all the avenues of life. The one essential feature of the church is the doing of the things which are just and right and the inculcation of the spirit of love and just dealing with all.

We say, "Go to church and work in and through the church for the broader vision of the Master and His cause."

In the matter of letting your light shine, William Christopher Sayers has to tell of the lesson in two verses, which are as follows:

Lamps
Why do you hide your lamps, friend—
When the world is looking on?
Your hands, they have been busy
From the early hour of dawn.
You are weaving a beautiful tapestry—
Uncover your lamp that the world may see.

FARM BUREAU NOTES

Copy for this Department furnished by County Agent

Women's Home Economics Club

With their plans well made during the past month for bushes and flower gardens and lawns outside the house, the Extension Service club women of the county are now turning their attention to their rugs and floors, walls and ceilings.

Project leaders of these clubs met February 8 at Weeping Water, and Feb. 9 at Elmwood with Miss Ripah Douglas of the Agricultural College at Lincoln for the February lesson. In addition to the lesson, they talked and planned for their local club achievement days in March and the big county-wide achievement day which is set for April 5th at Weeping Water and April 6th at Elmwood.

Miss Douglas furnished songs, stunts, and plays that might be used in the achievement program. These, with local numbers will make up a program that should appeal to every member of the family and to all the people of the community. The best number from each local program will be given by that club on the county achievement day program.

Mr. Hoppert, who was with Miss Douglas last month, is coming back to the county achievement day. Someone else from the Extension service will be with him at that time and appear on the program.

In the February lesson which the leaders are now taking back to their home clubs, Miss Douglas suggested that the women follow the coloring of nature in planning for rugs, walls and ceilings. The ground is dark, the trees and plants lighter, and the sky lightest of all in nature. Rugs and floors should be dark, walls lighter and the ceiling lightest of all.

The ladies also discussed warm and cool colors for rooms, designs for rugs and wall papers, painted or papered walls, etc. They found out how to mix a good wood cleaner and how to refinish floors. Each lady brought material and a rug hook and practiced making hooked rugs that have been so popular.

Soil and Crops Meeting.
There will be a meeting on Feb. 23 at 10 o'clock at the Bank of Union, and on the same day at 1:30 at the Community Hall at Mynard, and at the Farm Bureau office at Weeping Water on Thursday, Feb. 24, at 1:30.

Anyone interested in alfalfa or sweet or red clover should bring in a sample of the soil which they expect to seed this spring to these meetings and we will test it. Mr. Gross of the Extension Service will be at these meetings and talk to us on acid soils, and varieties of alfalfa that do best in Nebraska.

Correct Hog Houses.
Anyone interested in A-shaped individual hog houses should see the one that Mr. Wood and Mr. Posson of the Extension Service built at the home of Merritt Follard near Nehawka, and Ben Leffler near Weeping Water. Many of these individual houses built in Cass county have missed the most important facts in regard to ventilation.
