State vs. Dovey Continues Thru the Day in Court

State Rests in Prosecution of Former Banker at 10:55—Defense is Now Being Heard.

From Thursday's Daily—
The case of the State of Nebraska vs. George O. Dovey, former cashier of the First National Bank, charged with unlawfully receiving county money for deposit, was continuing through the second day today in the district court before Judge W. G. Hastings, of Omaha.

The various deposit slips, records and ledgers were offered by the means of the witnesses, Fred Buerstetta, the present cashier of the First National Bank, and Miss Edna Warren, formerly a book keeper at the bank, and which records formed the basis for the presentation of the bank's receipts for the deposit alleged to be in excess of the amount of the bond carried by the bank and which the defendant Dovey is charged with having solicited and received from the county treasurer.

The chief witness of the state was Miss Mia U. Gering, county treasurer on December 2, 1926, who made the deposit in the defunct bank, upon which the charges against Mr. Dovey are based.

Miss Gering testified as to conversations with the defendant Dovey at her office in which he had asked for the deposit of the Missouri Pacific in the payment of the taxes of the railroad. Witness stated that she had asked as to the condition of the First National Bank and had been assured that it was all right and in sound condition, by the defendant Dovey, and that she had insisted on having a bond for the amount of the money that was in excess of the bond carried by the First National Bank. This bond, Miss Gering stated, Mr. Dovey had promised to supply to secure the check for $24,000, and which she had demanded when taking the check to the bank. Witness also testified as to other conversations with the defendant urging the supplying of the bond and also to the fact that no bond had been supplied to cover the amount of the county money deposit. On cross-examination, Miss Gering was given a very thorough attack by the defense attorneys who sought to show that there were many other times where excess deposits had been made, but did not result in loss to the county.

H. N. Drey, president of the First National Bank, was called to the stand, but stood on his constitutional rights and refused to testify in the case as was requested by the state. The state rested at 10:45 and the defense was given leave to present a motion, the jury being excluded from the room while attorneys for the defendant argued a motion that the case be dismissed and a directed verdict ordered for the defendant. The defense asked the directed verdict on a number of grounds, that the information failed to charge the defendant with a crime, that the evidence was insufficient to warrant a verdict of guilty, that the defendant was an officer of a National bank operating under the national banking laws and that they were governed by the laws enacted by the congress of the United States and not the state laws of Nebraska; that the federal laws prescribed the duties of the officers of National banks and the penalties for the violation thereof; that the statute under which the information and complaint was made was not binding on any bank, banker or corporation or anyone excepting county treasurers; that the statute had no application to National banks and that the section of the law of 1925 was null and void.

The motion of the defense was overruled by Judge Hastings, who held that the statute had specifically mentioned banks protected by the state guaranty fund as not having to supply bonds for deposits, and which in the opinion of the court left the class of banks named as necessary to supply bonds, National banks, as there are no private banks allowed in Nebraska. If the law had specifically named National banks it would have been a bad law. The court held that while federal laws designate the manner in which National banks shall be operated, the officer of no National bank is above the state law in his position as a citizen of the state of Nebraska.

After the holding of the court was given, the trial was again taken up, the first witness called by the defense being George O. Dovey, the defendant, who gave his version of the case in which he is charged with having solicited and received a deposit of county funds in excess of the amount of bond.

Witness stated that he had a conversation with Miss Gering in her office on or about November 22nd, that he had gone there to request the deposit of the check of the Burlington railroad given in payment of taxes, in his bank. Miss Gering had told him that she had promised to place this check in the Farmers State Bank, but that she would allow him the Missouri Pacific or the Rock Island check. The next conversation the witness testified he had with Miss Gering was on December 1st at her office, when she had informed him that the Missouri Pacific check had arrived. Witness stated that Miss Gering had called him into her private office and had asked him as to the condition of the First National Bank, that she had heard rumors as to the soundness of the bank and the witness had told her he had also heard similar rumors; had further told her that there had been some withdrawals from the bank, but that it was sound.

Miss Gering had said that she would have to have a bond to cover the deposit and he had told her he would get one in a week or ten days' time as it took some time to get these bonds as the bank had been securing security bonds.

Witness had seen Miss Gering at First National Bank on December 2nd and Miss Gering had made no reference to bond. Witness testified to having called W. B. Hughes, secretary of the Bankers' association, to arrange for a bond, Hughes had said that as the deposits were merely temporary could supply a bond with the deposit of mortgages or securities with the county clerk.

Defendant testified he had held a conversation with Miss Gering on December 11th, as to a check for $2,000 which had been turned down and which had been reported to Miss Gering by an Elmwood bank. This had excited Miss Gering and she had again insisted on the bond. Witness had called Glen Boedeker at Murray and was arranging to have him take over notes and securities and supply funds so that the amount of the county deposits might be checked out. This was on the day that suit was filed by Miss Gering against the bank and the deal had not been completed.

Mrs. Charles L. Carlson was a visitor in Omaha today where she will spend a short time there attending to some matters of business in that city.

CAME NEAR BEING A FIRE

Tuesday evening as John Linn night watchman was going down the alley near the Woodman Building he discovered light in the rear office room. He immediately made an investigation and found that the building was on fire and turned in the alarm. Fire chief Fred Prentice and Harry Tolhurst were called and were on the ground in short notice with pyrenes. They had to fight their way through the dense smoke to get to the fire which was soon put out. It is fortunate that Mr. Linn discovered the fire when he did for in a very few minutes it would have been going strong and the building which is a wood frame would make a big fire and endangered the Leader-Echo office and other buildings. — Elmwood Leader-Echo.
