PAYMENT OF PENSIONS

Washington, D. C., March, 1927

To Pensioners:

Because of the failure of the Senate of the United States to pass the necessary appropriation bill the Bureau of Pensions will be unable to send to you the May and June, 1927, pension checks before July 4. On July 4, 1927, when you receive your regular July check you will at that time receive the May and June amounts. Correspondence will avail nothing, because the condition of appropriations is such that no payments can, under the law, be made after April until July 4, when the May, June, and July, 1927, payments will be included in one check.

DEMOCRACY OF THE FUTURE

"The statesmen see a new war looming, far worse than the late war, because more scientific; yet they cannot turn their backs on the old methods. There is no issue from this situation but in a new philosophy of life. Our power to injure each other has increased so much that malevolent passions have become infinitely more harmful than they were before the spread of industrialism. In order to survive, we must learn to tolerate each other, to give freedom to the oppressed and peace to the strong. If men were guided by reason, mere self-preservation might lead them to the new philosophy of life that is required. But in fact they are governed by their passions, and the problem is to substitute passions that make for life in the place of the present passions that make for universal death. This cannot be done by an appeal to self-interest, but only by widening and deepening those impulses and emotions which make co-operation possible. Science and machines have transformed the world, and the outlook which can make them beneficial must absorb and dominate them, but must not ignore them. Viewed in a sufficiently long perspective, they are forces for good rather than evil, since they are capable of liberating men from material cares. Democracy is a product of the West, very imperfect as yet, very limited in scope both within and without the nominally democratic nations. But no man with a sense of justice can doubt that it represents an advance upon previous modes of government, and that it ought not to be allowed to perish because of the vices of those who inadequately practice it. There is good and evil in the Western outlook, as there is good and evil in the outlook of the East. If the West is too impatient perhaps the East has hitherto been too patient. If the Western energy at times makes the world worse (as is happening in our day), Eastern philosophy, unalloyed, will hardly bring about great improvements. It is the marriage of the East and the West that must bring forth the new ideals, not the solitary self-glorification of either. What is needed is the Western energy devoted to Eastern purposes, Eastern spirituality applied to life by means of Western scientific methods. Nothing old will save the world as it is today. The dangers are new, and the philosophy which is to avert them must also be new. In the creation of this new philosophy a potent factor is likely to be that fruitful intercourse between East and West."—Taken from an article by Bertrand Russell in the Oriental Magazine for March.

A NEW ERA IN RAILROADING

When the New York Central railroad placed in operation the other day a new type of locomotive, it took what seems to many the first steps in a new era, of railroading. Intended for passenger service, this new locomotive is swifter and more powerful than any other built for such work. The preliminary debut of No. 5200, as the new monster is designated, was signaled by a christening. No. 5200 will be temporarily in freight service for thorough testing.

The new locomotive and others of its type are expected to effect a marked economy in railroading. No. 5200 for instance, is powerful enough to haul heavy passenger trains of 20 cars instead of the customary ten or twelve, thereby reducing the number of sections now necessary on crack trains. If it were let out, No. 5200, it is said, could average 90 miles an hour with a fairly heavy train and could attain 120 miles on a straightaway. Locomotives like No. 5200 cost $100,000 each, but they are described as the railroads' solution to the problems involved in higher wages and greater operating expense.

Railroading in America is still less than 100 years old, but the progress in rail travel in that time is little short of amazing. The first locomotive seen in this country was imported from England. Peter Cooper, the manufacturer, inventor and philanthropist, is credited with building the first locomotive constructed in the United States. This was the "Tom Thumb," built in 1830 and said to have been about the size of a hand-car. No. 5200, by contrast is 88 feet long and its great driving wheels, of which there are six, are 72 inches in diameter. How far we have come, literally and figuratively since the days of the "Tom Thumb?"

We don't just off-hand remember what army it was in which, for every soldier killed two sprang up to take his place, but we judge it must have been an army of reformers.

WHO'S OUT OF STEP?

A rich New York woman, not so long ago, made a will leaving her sizable fortune to the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. In the will was the stipulation that a bust of herself be placed over the urn which shall contain her ashes, and that the bust bear the word: "The more I saw of human beings, the more I thought of dogs."

Now, to be sure, the S. P. C. A. is a worthy organization, and we are all glad to see it get all the money it can. And, by the same token, there probably are a good many of us who can understand the feeling that lay back of that little quip about human beings, too. It's the kind of remark you hear quite often; and the person who makes it is usually given credit for a clear-eyed, shrewd insight to his fellow men.

Yet, on the whole, making nasty cracks about mankind is rather a cheap way of getting credit for real insight; and more often than not it reveals more about the person who makes the remark than it does about mankind as a whole.

It has often been said that one sees in the human race only what one sees in one's heart.

Which is just another way of saying that your fellow man is what you choose to consider him. You will find in your neighbors the qualities you look for. If you are eternally on the alert to see evidences of cheapness and untruthfulness and selfishness and meanness, you will find them never far. But if you keep looking for kindness and honesty and bravery and loyalty you will find those qualities, in abundance too.

Why is it that one man can live for years in one neighborhood and find it delightful, while another will move to the same place and in three weeks' time will go about bewailing the shoddiness of the people among whom he lives? Why does one man see fine qualities and fine people in a certain city while another man can see only base qualities and base people?

It is because the shadows of ourselves fill the world for us and color all we see.

If you feel that everyone about you is low and unworthy, don't announce the fact. You may remind people of the mother who announced that the whole army was out of step, "but her Jim."

Presumably, Harry Sinclair, who refused to answer questions put to him by the Walsh committee, is in the same boat with Messrs. Insull, Schuyler and Cunningham, who refused to answer questions put to them by the Reed committee. His status differs from theirs only in that he has been convicted by a jury of being in contempt of the senate.

Modern smokers enjoy the mellow fragrance of Camel

THE smokers of this modern age appreciate the smooth, mellow fragrance of Camels—that taste and goodness that come from the choicest tobaccos grown. Camel's steadily growing popularity with modern smokers has given it the greatest preference any cigarette ever had. In quality and in fame Camel is supreme.

Meet the cigarette that has won the modern world. There is not another like it—regardless of the price. Always mellow, always mild—the smoothest smoke ever made.
