Three-Day Death Toll of Storms is Now Set at 228

Thousands Injured and Hundred Are Homeless After Scourge of Elements.

Kansas City, Mo., May 10.—Scourged by tornadoes, torrential storms and blizzards over a three-day period, the midwest counted its dead at 219 late today, with probably a thousand persons injured, hundreds homeless and property damage in the millions.

In eight states, from the Rocky mountains region to the east and south eastward, the fury of the weather brought death and suffering.

First destruction was wrought in Kansas, where a twister roared in from the southwest Saturday night. There followed on Monday tornadoes that lashed Texas, Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana and Illinois, flattening farm houses and laying waste towns and villages.

Twice the elements struck at Missouri, early Monday in a dozen communities in the central part of the state, and late in the day at Poplar Bluff, in the southeastern section. The known dead at Poplar Bluff stood at 80 with scores injured and the heart of the city devastated. Ten persons were killed in central Missouri, three by high wind at St. Louis and two by twisters near Springfield, making a total of 92 deaths in the state.

Hundred Homes Destroyed.

The tornado started two miles southwest of Poplar Bluff, damaged the Missouri Pacific roundhouse and Frisco station, then jumped to the Meibourne hotel and Harris house, from which the largest number of dead were taken; wiped out most of the business section, and continued to the east side where nearly one hundred houses and a school house were demolished.

The more optimistic pointed out that if the tornado had hit 20 minutes later, more than seven hundred school children would have been in the business district on their way home, but the tornado found them safely under the care of their teachers in the western part of the city.

When the three-story Meibourne hotel crumpled into the basement, Mrs. Opal Sherrill was wedged tightly beneath the beams below the three floors and roof. It was decided to have her rescued by the fire department. C. T. Bloodworth, an attorney, crawled through the water but was unable to free her. For nine hours she lay in water nearly up to her neck, until rescuers were able to take her out.

Arkansas Toll Higher.

Arkansas was swept from the southern section to the northeastern counties by a series of twisters late Monday. Latest reports placed the dead at 68 and the injured at more than three hundred.

Several isolated communities in the northeastern part of the state were not heard from, and it was feared that reports from these places might increase the number of fatalities to 75 or more.

Dipping into the south end of the state at Strong and Norphet, the tornadoes heaped, skipped and jumped diagonally across the eastern half of the state, dipping down here and there to lash the countryside before passing into Missouri above Walnut Ridge.

The death list in Texas, where tornadoes struck at two points, reached 35 today when two died of injuries.

First reports of casualties in Louisiana came today when word was received that three Negroes were killed and several persons injured by

1,500,000 PIKE PLANTED IN BLUE AND PLATTE RIVERS

The Blue river and the Platte river which years ago offered some excellent pike fishing will hold the same lure for Nebraska fishermen again within the next few years.

The state fish and game department recently planted a million and a half young pike in these two streams. For several years the department has been trying unsuccessfully to obtain pike eggs. This year State Game Warden O'Connell succeeded in buying two million eggs from an eastern hatchery, and a million and a half little pike were hatched out. They were kept in the state nurseries until they were large enough to take care of themselves and where then turned loose in the streams. The department is planning to obtain about ten million pike eggs next year for hatching.

Approximately a million little trout are now in the fish hatcheries and nurseries and will be planted in the Nebraska streams in the fall. The department is keeping the little fish in the nurseries until they are large enough to shift for themselves rather than turning them loose shortly after they are hatched.

This plan requires greater hatchery and nursery facilities but it has been found that where slightly over five per cent of the fish survived before, between fifty and seventy-five per cent survive under the present plan.

MORE BODIES FROM MINE

Fairmont, W. Va., May 8.—Rescue workers approached the end of the long trail today in their search for bodies in the Everettsville mine disaster. Completely subdued after a week of stubborn fighting, the tunnel offered little resistance to the helmetmen as they rolled back the gases from heading after heading and brought forth from their sepulchre the lifeless forms of numbers of underground workers entombed eight days ago.

Seventeen bodies were located within the last twenty-four hours, bringing the total known dead to fifty-three. Search for the remaining bodies yet in the mine was continued without abatement.
