Not every bad lie happens on the links.

Did you ever notice that a lady is seldom outspoken.

Picnics at all the go now, even if the grass is a little bit wet.

The rains so far here hasn't interfered to any great extent with farming.

Occasionally a man gets so discouraged that he feels like writing poetry.

Time is money and in our country if you have one you don't have to do the other.

Plant-a-Tree week should find a ready response in at least one place—the Mississippi valley.

Not only can money talk, but has few equals, if any, when it comes to singing a conscience to sleep.

Mussolini has been photographed in a lion cage, thus disproving forever the belief that lions are cowardly.

They talk "swimming pool" all winter and then when the time comes for one they shut up like a clam. No action.

A Chicago criminal is called "The Cat" and as he already has been shot six times it is evident that he has nine lives.

Very fair trade in Plattsmouth yesterday. Those who were here to take advantage of the low prices, seemed very well satisfied.

Pink sea monsters have been discovered in Canada. The tourist movement from the states got an early start this year.

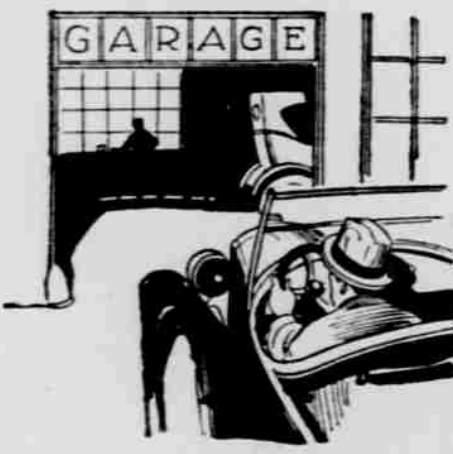

A New York girl, arrested for having four husbands, told the police that she had a weak heart. Yes, a weak heart, but a roomy one.

What convinces us that people are not as superstitious as they used to be is the fact that today nobody takes any interest in a ghost unless it walks every payday.

The other day a neighbor assured us that no matter how new or fine an automobile may be if a man's wife rides on the back he will be sure to hear a lot of knocks in it.

A group of mouth organ players walked to London for a contest. If they had walked backward, eating Camembert sandwiches and playing their mouth organs at the same time, wouldn't that have been some story!

It is very easy to be patriotic while the bands are playing, and it is equally easy to feel a keen sympathy for the flood sufferers while they are confined in refugee camps. But the all-important question is what the state of Mississippi, through its legislature, is going to be doing for these people two months hence when they are feeling the real pinch of poverty.

Raise your chin, but let cheeks alone.

Experience that is given away is seldom appreciated.

Walter W. Head is named as president of the Y. M. C. A. board.

Mussolini evidently intends to see that Italy is dictated, but not red.

It is better to have a few good friends than a good many friends.

An actress is writing "Memoirs of Hollywood." Isn't that, Oh! so killing!

Omaha seems to be getting all the worst. Even a hail storm Tuesday night.

It is difficult to settle a case in court while the litigants have any money.

We are waiting the day when somebody will go to Paris and return without a divorce.

Principles prove that you stand for something; prejudice merely proves that you fall for something.

If there is any just cause for the weather we are having, we would like for someone to give it.

The reason men's hats are cheaper is because a man doesn't want a hat—he merely wants to get it over with.

One reason why newspapers give so much space to affairs like the Snyder trial is that many readers are weepers.

A North Carolina student bit a snake into three parts. Some day a snake is going to bite a man, that will be news.

Anyway the king of Italy can still get his picture in the paper by getting Mussolini to shake hands with him in public.

The law forbidding the sale of firearms by mail is expected to drive many up-to-date thugs back to the old-fashioned sling shot.

Doubtless the Pittsburg woman who killed her husband with a rolling pin was a constant reader of the doings of Mrs. Maggie Jiggs.

News stories refer to the new 35-600-ton British dreadnaught, Nelson, as "he." Ships have been feminine from time immemorial and the Nelson's armament of sixteen-inch guns does not alter the case.

Our hat is off to the historic city of Natchez. When the call came from Washington for subscriptions to the Red Cross flood relief fund, Natchez, despite the current belief that it is a "slow town," promptly subscribed five times its quota and right now it is in the midst of the work of providing shelter for several thousand flood refugees.

SMALL TOWN THINKING

There has been too much small town thinking in connection with the flood disaster in the lower Mississippi Valley.

The narrow conception started with President Coolidge when he asked for only $5,000,000 for Red Cross relief work. To those acquainted with the Mississippi river in flood stage it was apparent from the beginning that this would be the worst flood disaster in the history of the big stream.

When informed by Secretary Hoover that $5,000,000 was inadequate the president raised the amount to $10,000,000. More small town thinking. It should have been $20,000,000, and with the sugar bowl of Louisiana now filling up with water and 2,500 refugees fleeing for their lives $20,000,000 will not be sufficient to meet the legitimate needs of those in distress.

There is food for thought in this for our own officials in charge of rehabilitation work. Getting the delta back on its feet again is a task that will test our resources, our courage and our patriotism. We should set up a large target.

"COME HOME"

A suggestion was recently made by the Manufacturers' Record to a New York business man that he ought to go South and study for himself the wonderful development under way.

Frankly, I am afraid to go—afraid that I might not want to come back. "One reason is that I have been rather a religious reader of the Manufacturers' Record until late in the night. Its alluring appeal to return has only served to revive and add fire to my boyhood aspirations and ambitions."

The address to which this gentleman refers was delivered in Boston before the Southern Society, and it did cause some members of that society to return to the South and take part in its development.

The view of this New York man is an interesting one. It shows that deep down in the soul of many a man living in the North and West, there is a longing to come home; to come back and get into touch with home, which comes to every Southern-born man who having left his section to seek employment elsewhere, longs, with an increasing longing as the years go by, once more to breathe the atmosphere of Southern life and to take part in the wonderful development underway.

Menchen has recently in derision dubbed the south "The Bible South." He was seeking to ridicule the devotion of this section to the Bible, but that was the highest compliment he could possibly have paid to it; and this devotion to the Bible and the things it stands for is of the reasons why many a man born in that section, but living elsewhere, is anxious to get into an atmosphere where life is not all sordid, but where the Bible is so universally recognized as to have caused the blatant writer to refer to it in derision as "The Bible South."

"Come home" is the cry the South is sending broadcast to the millions of its people who are now living elsewhere. "Come home" and rear your children in a Bible atmosphere; rear them where education and religious opportunities can be found in every community. "Come home," where climatic conditions and what we have termed atmosphere as distinct from climate—the atmosphere of love, of kindness, of hospitality—make life worth living. "Come home" to a section which has become more richly endowed than any other part of the world in material resources and in opportunities for upbuilding.

And when calling upon its natives to "Come home" the South sends out with equal earnestness a call to people of other sections to come and make the South their home; to come and share in all its blessings and opportunities; to come and build a home where life is sweeter; where home means more than anywhere else; to come and take part in the boundless opportunities this section offers to the man of brain, brawn, or money.

Are American young men becoming effeminate and sissy-fied? We doubt hear that they are; but we doubt it. Listen to this dispatch from Peoria, Illinois: "Two seniors at Peoria high school consented to be swatted with a stout paddle for 5 cents a swat to raise money for the flood relief fund. They made more than $4 and are still able to sit and walk in a normal manner."

REAL HE-MEN

Effeminate? Those lads rank with the hardy mountaineers of legend.

SEE OUR ECLIPSE

Several American astronomers are planning to make a journey of 22,000 miles for the purpose of seeing an eclipse that will not last more than fifteen minutes.

Just these distinguished gentlemen must see an eclipse, and any sort of eclipse will do, we cordially invite them to come to Mississippi during the early part of August.

During the first week of that month some perpetual office seekers who were in the ascendency a few years ago, and imagine that they can again approach the zenith will go into eclipse—and it's going to last longer than fifteen minutes, too.
