Business Without Banks—How Would It Work?

How many mercantile houses could do business without banks? Mighty few!

How many manufacturers, railroads, farmers, professional men? Mighty few!

There's a highly logical reason and it applies to every man who believes in head-work as well as hard-work.

Our bank service is a potent means to a satisfactory end.

Golden Text: "For there is no distinction between Jew and Greek, for the same Lord is Lord of all, and is rich to all that call upon him."—Romans 10:12.

A Call to Service

Peter had been traveling over the land of Judea and had come to Lydda, where he went to the home of Eneas, who had been an invalid for about eight years, having received a stroke of palsy, which kept him in bed to his bed during all that time. He was beginning to feel that he would always be a cripple and was much discouraged. Some of his friends had heard that Peter had done through the power of Christ in healing people's bodies as well as their souls, and called the attention of Eneas to the things that Peter had done. So Peter was called to the home, where he immediately said, "Eneas, Jesus Christ maketh thee whole; arise and make thy bed."

Immediately Eneas arose and was made whole. This was noised about and the news soon spread to the next town Joppa, where there was a woman named Tabitha, by which interpretation was called Dorcas. Dorcas was a good woman and did many good acts for the people whom she knew, supplying them with clothing and nursing their sick, as well as ministering to their wants in many other ways. Dorcas was taken sick and while everything possible was done for her, she continued to grow worse and died. The people, and especially the poor, whom she had so nobly befriended, mourned the death of this good woman. The body had been laid in an upper chamber and there was great mourning in the house, for every one had been a recipient of the good works which she did and the alms which she had given so freely to the needy.

The people, hearing of the fame of Peter as a teacher, and that he sent two men for him, insisting that he must come at once, which he did, and when he had come and been told of the death of Dorcas, and of the good things which she had done for the people who were mourning for her, Peter put the people out of the house and kneeling prayed unto the Father, following which he turned and said unto Dorcas, "Arise." She thereupon rose and he extended her hand, and she stood up. He then called the people who had mourned and presented Dorcas alive. It was known throughout that portion of the country that he had raised Dorcas from the dead by the grace of Jesus Christ and many people were obedient to the faith. Then did Peter go to live with one Simon a tanner. This latter act on his part was considered a breach of etiquette, for the Jews considered the profession of a tanner as unclean and especially ceremonially, and many criticized Peter for his conduct in that respect. He practiced what the few who were obedient to do. Still Peter followed the practices which were required by the Jews and went every day three times to pray on the housetops, at the third, sixth and ninth hours, which were nine in the morning, high noon and three o'clock in the afternoon, the latter being called the evening prayer. While at prayer, it being noon, he was hungry, and would have liked to have eaten, but as he was praying he fell into a trance, and a sheet was let down from heaven, filled with all kinds of animals, all of which the Jews considered as being unclean and unfit for a Jew to eat.

As the sheet appeared before Peter, a voice came from the heavens saying, "Peter, slay and eat," for he was hungry. But Peter replied, "Not so Lord, for I have never eaten anything that is common and unclean." Then came the voice saying, "Call not thou common or unclean what God has cleansed." This was done three times. When Peter awoke from his trance, he wondered what all this could mean and he pondered on the import of the matter. While he was thus considering what all this vision might mean, a call was made telling him that men were at the gate and would see him.

At Cesarea was also a centurion of the Roman Empire, who was a worshipper of the true God, and as he was praying, a vision also came to him in which the Angel of God appeared unto him saying, "Thy prayers have been heard and thy alms have come up before God as a memorial for thee. Now send to Joppa and call one Simon whose surname is Peter and he will tell you what thou oughtest to do. This man may be found with one who is a tanner and Simon by name."

Cornelius, the centurion, sent an escort who appeared at the gate and Peter had come from the trance in which he had seen the sheet let down from heaven. Peter went down and said, "Behold, I am the one whom you seek." The delegation said unto Peter, "We are a delegation from Cesarea from Cornelius, who hath just had a vision in which he was told to call for you and that you would tell him what to do." Peter, taking with him a number

Memorial Sunday Services are Very Impressive

Large Number Attend the Services Held at the First Presbyterian Church Sunday Morning

From Tuesday's Daily—The memorial services held Sunday morning at the First Presbyterian church, which were in the nature of a union service, participated in by the congregations of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Christian churches, were quite largely attended by the residents of the city irrespective of religious faith.

The patriotic societies of the city were in attendance at the service, there being large numbers of the W. R. C. and the Legion Auxiliary as well as the few surviving veterans of the Civil war whose condition would permit them to attend as well as representatives of the American Legion.

The services opened with the organ prelude by Mrs. H. F. Goos, followed by the invocation and the opening hymn in which the congregation joined. The invocation and scripture lesson were given by Rev. H. E. Soritor, pastor of the First Methodist church.

The address of Rev. H. G. McClusky was especially devoted to the great struggle of the war of the rebellion in which the aged veterans present had fought and in whose honor Memorial day is particularly regarded by the people of the nation as a day of memory and tribute.

The pastor traced the causes of the Civil war, the lack of strong leadership and idealism in the days preceding the war and the fact that the issue of human slavery had been the great underlying cause of the war as being a thing in opposition to the American idea of government, a thing that was in opposition to the very ideals on which our government had been founded and which by the great tide of public sentiment was being swept away when the war was precipitated by the south. The services of the men in blue were extolled by the speaker and their acts had made the preservation of the nation as one unit possible.

Rev. McClusky also touched on the other war in which the country had taken part, the relief of the suffering people in Cuba and later the great world war in which over four million American men had been enrolled. The war of the revolution, that of 1812 and the Mexican war, with their important issues of rights of men and freedom of the individual were also touched upon by the speaker in his tribute to the fallen sailors and soldiers of the nation.

The speaker also deplored the trend to attack the national defenses, which had in the last few years been much in evidence in attempts to throttle the army and navy, which were the first line of defense and without which the great and wealthy nation would be a tempting object to the less peaceful nations of the world.

During the service the choir of the church gave a special anthem and Miss Ruth Lindsay, director of the choir, a very beautiful solo, "O Love Divine."

At the conclusion of the service, the audience joined in the singing of "America" and remained standing as the Grand Army veterans and the W. R. C. marched from the church.

Pappio Takes a Hard Fought Game Sunday

Errors of the Locals Contribute to Loss as Well as Inability to Hit at Needed Times.

From Tuesday's Daily—The Plattsmouth team of the Sarpy-County league dropped a hard fought game at Papillion on Sunday that was a heart breaker to the Platters and one that they had bitterly contended in a scoreless battle until the sixth when the Sarpy county aggregation gained their talons in the game.

The score had been minus until the last of the sixth and both Swanson for Plattsmouth and Barthelme for the Pappio were going like a million dollars when this stanza of the game spilled the bean pot for the hard working Plattsmouth hurler.

In the sixth inning Lilly was able to scratch a hit and was followed by
