Citizens Military Training Camp is Good for Nation

Peaceful and Rational Method of Training for the Betterment of Youth of the Country.

Army officers and civilian friends of the military service are engaged at the present moment in extending the invitation to the youth of this country to attend one of the Citizens' Military Training camps to be conducted this summer. They find it necessary, in addition to presenting the positive merits of these camps, to combat a notion that in some occult manner they are the foot of a vicious militaristic infection that will nullify somehow the national will to peace.

This is a notion which does not seem to be justified either in fact or theory. The purpose of maintaining these camps as an element in the military establishment of the nation is wholly consistent with the American tradition of a national defense, dependent not upon a great army of professional soldiers, but on the patriotic devotion of a citizen soldiery, committed to peace and yet able and willing to fight when peace is no longer possible.

There is a beautiful ideal of a world completely disarmed. The means to its realization are sought in international conferences which aim at bringing about disarmament, through mutual agreement. Those persons who would disarm without waiting for such international agreement, form but an imponderable minority of the people. The vast majority, however strong its predilection for peace, recognizes that without mutual confidence some form of national defense must be maintained. The only practical questions involved are the size of the establishment devoted to that purpose and the principles which govern its maintenance.

Shall it be a large army, burdensome to the taxpayer and insolently meddlesome in federal politics, or shall it be a small army supplemented by a citizen reserve? Shall it be a conscript army under a system of universal military service or shall it be a democratic army of volunteers? The national policy, regardless of the political complexion of the administration, has been and still is the maintenance of a military establishment reduced to the minimum consistent with the requirement of national safety. It is through the medium of such institutions as the Citizens' Military Training camps, the Officers' Reserve corps and the National Guard that conflicting opinions as to the margin of national safety are practically harmonized. So long as the citizenry maintains an interest in them the danger of universal peace-time conscription is remote. These means of supplementing the strength of the regular army are thoroughly in accord with the democratic ideal. They coincide perfectly with the conditions of national defense outlined by Thomas Jefferson as dependent upon a well disciplined militia.

BALL PARK FIXED UP

From Friday's Daily—The streets, alleys and bridge committee of the city council that has had charge of the work of the repairing of the baseball park that has for the past two years been in a very much run down condition have completed their work and now have the park looking a great deal better.

The fence that formerly leaned in disorder and a large section of which was missing, has been replaced and straightened up and new posts and supports placed to make the fence again serviceable and in this there has been used a large number of the zinc pans that are a part of the refrigerator cars repaired here which have been junked and which make a very good fence as they will permit the flow of water through them in case of a flood and save the destruction of the fence from the force of the water. Repairs have also been made on the grandstand and the park is made a great deal better as the result of the efforts of Councilman Kunsman and his force of workmen.

By adding American machinery one of the largest glass plants in the world located at Thuringen, Germany, is to increase its capacity.

Summer School to Open June 5

University Banks Eighth in Vacation Section Enrollment—Prominent Educators There.

Since more than half the students in the University of Nebraska summer sessions are teachers or prospective teachers, the policy of the university to bring in prominent educators to teach special courses in the summer will be continued this year, according to Dean W. E. Seacock, of teachers' college, director of the summer session.

The first term of the summer session this year will begin Tuesday, June 5 and close July 15. The second term will begin July 19 and end August 26. Last year the total enrollment for summer school work was 3,355. Students are permitted to carry six hours of work in each term.

Commenting on the special emphasis on educational subjects during the summer sessions, Dean W. E. Seacock of teachers' college, director of the summer school, said:

"Were it not for summer sessions, the vast majority of teachers would be barred from opportunities for further improvement, for many teachers find it impossible to give up their work for a year or two and attend college." Many students also shorten their college courses to three years by attending summer school.

Harman Will Lecture
Dr. A. F. Harman, county superintendent of Montgomery county, Alabama, the leading rural educational expert in the south, will be at the university for two weeks, during the first term of summer school. He will teach classes and give general lectures on the subject of rural education.

Miss Mabel E. Kell, assistant professor of education in the Pennsylvania state college, will direct the work in rural education during the first term.

Dr. William H. Kilpatrick of Columbia university, one of the most noted educational specialists in the country, will be at the university for the last two weeks of the second term. He will teach a class in philosophy of education and will also give a series of general lectures, some of which will be based on experiences on a tour of the world which he is now completing.

In strictly academic lines a number of professors from other colleges will also be brought to the university for the summer sessions. Among these are Dr. G. R. Davies, professor of sociology in the University of North Carolina; Dr. W. N. Gewehr, professor of history in Denison university, Granville, O.; Dr. L. M. Sears, professor of history in Purdue university, Lafayette, Ind.; and Dr. O. Douglas Weeks, professor of political sciences in the University of Texas.

Young men desiring work in athletic coaching will have the opportunity in classes under university coaches.

Botany Field Trip
Among the courses which are attracting special attention are those in botany to be given at Estes Park, Colo., under the direction of Dr. R. J. Peol, chairman of the department of botany. The principal course to be given in the mountains will be general in scope. There will also be opportunity for graduate work.

Under the direction of Prof. E. F. Schramm a party of geology students will make a six weeks' study of mines, mills, ore deposits and oil fields in South Dakota, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and Arizona.

During the second term, Prof. F. D. Keim of the college of agriculture will conduct a party of agronomy students on a 1,200 mile trip thru the state to study crop and soil problems.

The first summer session at the University of Nebraska was held in 1892, with seventy-eight students. There has been a steady increase to the peak of 3,355 last year. In the year 1921 Nebraska was in nineteenth place among the thirty-three leading colleges and universities of the country in summer school enrollment. Last year's total brought the University of Nebraska to eighth place among these same thirty-three institutions. Enrollment this summer is expected to be greater than ever before, according to Dean Seacock.

We have a few of the Cass county maps showing every man's farm, and will close them out at 50c each. Call at Journal office and get one now.

ASSIGNS STORE STOCK

M. Fanger, for many years a retail merchant of this city, and for the past fifteen years engaged in the conduct of a large retail department store at Missouri Valley, Iowa, has made a voluntary assignment of the store at that place to his creditors, discharges from Missouri Valley state. The stock of goods, one of the largest in the Iowa city, has been taken over by the Retail Credit Clearing association, of Omaha, and who are planning to close out the stock in the interest of the creditors.

Mr. Fanger came to Plattsmouth some thirty years ago, a poor immigrant boy from the old world, and during his stay of fifteen years in this community amassed a very comfortable fortune and was well fixed financially when removing from here to Omaha, where he has since lived.

Later he became interested in the business at Missouri Valley, which was operated most successfully for a number of years. Mr. Fanger's success was a wonderful story of the opportunities of the United States, as he started his first ventures here in a small wagon with a pack, making the rounds of the city and surrounding country to see in person the householders and prospective customers and from this small beginning he expanded into one of the largest business houses of the city when he retired from business activity in Plattsmouth fifteen years ago.

MALDON CRABILL GRADUATES FROM LINCOLN HIGH

The Louisville friends of Maldon B. Crabill were pleased and interested this week to receive announcement cards of the Commencement exercises of the Lincoln High school that take place on Friday of this week, June 3, at St. Paul's church. Maldon is one of the graduates and has made a fine record since entering the Lincoln schools. The Crabill family are doing well in Lincoln and have bought them a comfortable home and are well pleased with the choice of Lincoln as a home.

They still retain their interest and affection for Louisville, where they have a host of friends who will join the Courier in extending heartiest congratulations to Maldon and best wishes for future success.—Louisville Courier.

Miss Wiggenhorn of Ashland Honor Guest

At Two Pretty Social Affairs Given as Pre-Uuptial Parties; Wedding to Take Place This Month.

Mrs. Susie Cummer, Mrs. R. H. Barta, and Mrs. Otis Ballou were hostesses at a 1 o'clock luncheon Thursday at the home of Mrs. Cummer, honoring Miss Louise Wiggenhorn, who is to be a June bride. White and painted daisies with other garden flowers were tastefully arranged about the rooms and each table was centered with a small bouquet of daisies. The guests were seated at seven tables where the three course luncheon was served and following the luncheon progressive bridge was played during the afternoon. Mrs. Burt Greenslit won the high score and Mrs. Frank Woodward low score for the afternoon. Miss Wiggenhorn was presented with a beautiful sugar bowl and cream pitcher as the guest of honor gift from the hostess.

Mrs. F. W. Bontz entertained at a May breakfast Friday morning at 9 o'clock at her home in honor of Miss Wiggenhorn. The guests were seated at eight small tables, three of which were placed on the porch, and places were found by cars arranged in pretty wald rose holders which were dainty little souvenirs of the party. The breakfast was served in three courses and this was followed by progressive bridge until noon.

Mrs. Susie Cummer received the head prize and Miss Dora Wiggenhorn the consolation. The guest of honor gift was a salad fork and spoon with hand decorated handles.—Ashland Gazette

PLATTSMOUTH BOOSTER VISITS LOUISVILLE FRIDAY

Secretary W. G. Davis, of the Plattsmouth Chamber of Commerce, accompanied by Mrs. Davis, was a Louisville visitor last Friday. They drove up to look the town over and get acquainted with Louisville people. When they called at the Courier office the whiter was at Plattsmouth on a like mission, but Mr. Davis left a note on our desk stating that he had met a number of our business men and had a fine visit. Come again, Bill, and we will try to be at home the next time.—Louisville Courier.
