CLOSE CALL FROM FIRE

The farm home of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Young near Murray was very near being the scene of a very serious fire on Friday, which but for the coolness of Mr. Young might have resulted seriously.

The oil stove was being used in the kitchen and Mrs. Young was called to the front of the house for a moment and while she was gone the wind blowing in the kitchen caused the blaze to get a start on the woodwork of the room, near the stove. Mr. Young came in from the barn yard a few moments after the stove had started the fire and at that time the blaze was starting to burn on the side of the wall and Mr. Young grabbing the oil stove started to get it out of the kitchen and in doing so some oil splashed out and caused the fire to burn up the side of the door and the door proper, that Mr. Young was finally able to be at out and stop further spread of the fire.

Mr. Young suffered the burning of his hands in the carrying out of the stove but which was not serious.

BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON

Sunday, July 3rd
By M. S. Briggs

Golden Text: "What doth Jehovahh require of thee, but to do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God."

Israel's Vanity

The Israelites had watched the surrounding nations and compared them with their own and observed how mighty were the armies of the heathen nations about them, how they displayed their captives and with what pomp they paraded when they achieved a victory over one of their neighbor nations or tribes.

They compared the simple manner of the conduct of their courts with the magnificence of the other countries at court, and becoming dissatisfied with the simple way in which under the guidance of the Great Jehovah, they were able to govern their own affairs, they were anxious for a change. They desired a king to lead them to battle, for the kings in those days were the ones who went into the forefront of the battle, and so they wanted a large and powerful man to lead them to victory over surrounding nations.

Samuel had been a just judge, and had given all justice and as he was a seer and a prophet, he was led by the hand of Jehovah, and was at all times able to deal out just the proper kind of justice, and under this just government, the country was prospering.

It is true that Samuel, who was connected to Moses, made some mistakes. We saw, when we were studying this connection before, that Eli, whom Samuel succeeded, had made a mistake in that he had allowed his sons to disgrace the government by openly consorting with abandoned women, even at the very gates of the palace of administering the government. For this reason was Eli removed and even was killed when he did not enforce discipline in his own household. Samuel like Eli, while one of the most just of judges did not profit by the experience of Eli, and for this reason had gotten in a manner into disrepute, also, and it was with some justice that the people were dissatisfied with him at the last. They asked for a king, when they should have kept to the worship of Jehovah. At this, Samuel, feeling the sting of the dissatisfaction of the people, went to God in prayer and said that the people had rejected him, but Jehovah said that it was He whom the people had rejected. Instead of Samuel.

However, God said, give the people a king. Samuel warned the people that they were doing the wrong thing and endeavored to dissuade them from their purpose.

Samuel Anoints Saul

Samuel called the people together at Mizpah, unto Jehovah, but before this he had anointed Saul to be king, when he had some looking for a herd of asses, which had strayed from his father's home. Samuel, when the people had come together, said: "Thus saith Jehovah, God of Israel: 'I brought up Israel out of Egypt, and I delivered you out of the hands of the Egyptians; out of the hands of the kingdoms which oppressed you. There were the tribes which surrounded the children of Israel and were the Moabites, Canaanites, Midianites, Amorrhites and the Philistines. God gave them to understand that it was He who had brought the ten plagues on the Egyptians that made it possible for the Children of Israel to become liberated from their bondage in Egypt. It was he that also stood the Red Sea up as a wall to the children of Israel, and he also allowed the waters to return to their place, and thus were the Egyptians who pursued them drowned. God had protected the children from all the perils which surrounded them and still they were this day rejecting him, and were asking for a human king—one who could lead them in conquest. This after God had saved them from all their calamities and distress.

However, God said unto Samuel, "Have them present themselves by their tribes, for the selection of a king," and they were so presented. The tribe of Benjamin was selected from which a king was to be chosen. This may have looked strange to many of the Israelites, for the tribe of Benjamin was the very smallest of all the tribes, and it would look to them like the king should have come from the most powerful. After the tribe of Benjamin was chosen, there remained further choosing and when the leaders of the families were presented the Matrites was taken and from the family or household of Kish was the selection made, and when the members of the family were brought up, the son of Kish, Saul was selected. Then, upon inquiry, it was shown that Saul could not be found anywhere. It would seem that he was to be made king would have been there on hand and especially when Saul knew he had been anointed as the king, and that this choosing would certainly settle on him.

Saul Among the Staff

This gathering brought people from afar, and as a necessity they had to bring some baggage, however small the amount might be, and in the aggregate it would amount to considerable. The Lord said, "He is here among the staff," and then he was found and brought forth and was there declared king. Many of the leaders of the more powerful tribes no doubt were much dissatisfied with the selection and ready to evince their displeasure at the making of this young man king, notwithstanding that he was head and shoulders above the other people.

Saul did not feel the responsibility which had been thrust upon him and went to his father's farm and again resumed his ordinary occupation, the farming, where he remained. It is thought, for a month or some such time, and as he was plowing in the field, like Cincinnatus, when he was called to the dictatorship at Rome, and like Israel Putnam, the American patriot, who was taken from the plow to be made a major general, and who served so gallantly at Bunker Hill and other places.

The Israelites were in sore straits and a portion of the province was to be taken by the enemy, and they were promised that their right eyes all should be taken out in order that they could not serve in any future wars as their left eyes would not be able to see from behind their shields. The victory of Saul over the enemy was very decisive, the enemy being routed, which caused them to leave the Israelites in peace.

Those who were opposed to the reign of Saul were then brought to be executed for their rebellion, but Saul in gratitude to God for the deliverance of the Israelites out of the hands of the enemy said, "There shall not a man be put to death this day. For today hath Jehovah wrought deliverance in Israel."

Then went the people to Gilgal, the first place where the people were congregated following the historic crossing of the river Jordan, when the waters were stayed by the hand of the Lord under the leadership of Joshua. Then the king was re-established and Saul was indeed king. With peace now realized, Saul and all the people of Israel rejoiced.

Income Tax Yield Shows Increase

Total Revenue Higher: Despite a Decrease in Number of Returns—Analysis of Treasury.

Washington, June 26.—Despite a decrease of 43.4 per cent in the number of income tax returns filed for the calendar year of 1925, and of 14.66 per cent in total reported net income, the 1926 revenue act produced an increase of $20,285,793 in the entire individual income tax collections, or 4.2 per cent over the net tax to $734,555,183. An analysis of the act, announced by the treasury today, showed that the average net income of those filing returns was $5,245, with an average tax rate of 3.85 per cent. This is an increase of $1,767.90 in the average income as compared with 1924, and compares with a tax rate of 2.74 per cent for that year.

The new law reduces materially the number of persons required to file returns. This and the fact that the entire population filed returns for 1925, as compared with 6.56 the preceding year. The aggregate net income of the 4,171,051 taxpayers who made returns was $21,894,576,408.

An increase of 15,945 corporations reporting net income through the year of 1926, which had a total of $22,324, and the total income to $9,583,683,697, which yielded a tax of $1,170,331,206. For the preceding year, the income was $7,586,652,292, and the tax $881,549,546. The number of corporations filing returns was 430,000 as compared with 417,421.

Corporations reporting no net income for 1925 numbered 177,738. They showed a gross income of $22,459,902,466 and a deficit of $1,962,628,095. Corporation income figures distributed by industrial groups showed that those engaged in the various activities such as banking, brokerage and insurance filed the greatest number of returns, 115,947, followed by those engaged in trades, 109,947, followed by those engaged in real estate, 109,558. While the corporations in these classes reported net income of $22,322,246 and $1,254,045,996, respectively, they were exceeded by the net income $4,383,357,349 of the 88,674 manufacturing corporations which made money that year, and by the $1,468,692,774 earned by the 14,862 transportation and other public utility concerns.

Of the corporations engaged in agriculture and related industries, 9,904 filed returns; only 4,662 showing net income. The gross income was $572,214,939, while net was $76,861,552.

Under the section requiring capital stock tax returns, 37,271 corporations filed, showing the following totals: Cash assets, $16,920,117,956; accounts receivable, $18,209,882,537; notes receivable, $5,656,461,195; inventory, $19,592,884,551; fixed property investments, $87,919,438,850.

PLANE WITHOUT A PILOT

Galesburg, Ill., June 26.—A pilotless airplane carrying a woman passenger, hepped over two hundred yards on the Lincoln park flying field here today before it crashed into a barbed wire fence and smashed its propeller on a parked automobile.

The woman, the pilot of the machine, several others were about to leave the plane, and hundreds of women and children on the field escaped injury. Ned Hatch, the pilot and owner, had seated the woman passenger and then twisted the propeller. He was then about to assist other passengers into the plane when it sped away.

Lindbergh Will Tour America This Summer

Lone Eagle to Fly Over U. S. for Purpose of Furthering Public Interest in Aviation Development

New York, June 29.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh will make an airplane tour of the United States, the Daniel Guggenheim fund for the promotion of Aeronautics, under whose auspices the tour will be made, announced Tuesday night.

Colonel Lindbergh will fly the Spirit of St. Louis, in which he made the New York-to-Paris flight. He will start in about three weeks and cover the entire country. It is expected that the nation-wide flight will take two or three months, during which Colonel Lindbergh will visit most of the principal cities in the United States. The entire undertaking will be financed by the Daniel Guggenheim fund for the promotion of aeronautics.

Harry F. Guggenheim, president of the fund, made this announcement concerning the proposed expedition.

Countrywide Tour.

"Arrangements have just been completed under which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh will undertake a country-wide airplane tour of the United States for the purpose of furthering public interest in aviation development. It has been Colonel Lindbergh's determination since the successful completion of his epoch-making flight across the Atlantic to devote himself to the advancement of aeronautics and, insofar as it is possible, to turn the nation's enthusiasm over his achievement into active interest in and support of the specialized development of air transportation in this country.

"Realizing the soundness and wisdom of such a program, it was the belief of the officers and members of the fund that one of the most effective means of accomplishing Colonel Lindbergh's desire was to send the Spirit of St. Louis, with its intrepid pilot on a tour of the United States. This proposal was made to Colonel Lindbergh Tuesday morning, and after consultation with his St. Louis sponsors he has decided to accept the fund's offer to arrange and finance the tour in co-operation with the Department of Commerce.

Details Not Given.

"Details of the trip have not yet been arranged. They will be announced later. Colonel Lindbergh leaves for Canada from Mitchell field on Wednesday and after that he plans to spend several weeks on his book. It will, therefore, be about three weeks before his tour under the fund's auspices will begin. It will probably take two or three months to complete the itinerary which will be laid out for him.

"Colonel Lindbergh's airplane tour will be undertaken for the primary purpose of stimulating popular interest in the use of air transport. It will enable millions of persons who have had an opportunity only to read and hear about the colonel's remarkable achievement to see him and his plane in action. We hope, too, that it will serve two other important ends. First, to encourage the use of our air transport facilities for mail, express and passenger carrying purposes, aerial photography and other services; and, thereby, foster the growth of this means of transportation, and, second, to promote the development of airports and air communication services.

"It is our belief that such an expedition to Colonel Lindbergh will make it strike the air consciousness of the American people and give added impetus to commercial flying as a practical, safe and useful means of transportation."

'Tool of Republican Party,' Declares Edwards

Regarding Wayne Wheeler and His Threat of Third Party in South—Opposition an Asset.

Washington, June 27.—The Anti-Saloon league was called the "tool" of the republican party in a statement issued today by Senator Edwards, democrat, New Jersey.

Replying to a statement issued last night by Wayne W. Wheeler, Mr. Edwards said Mr. Wheeler's "veiled threats of reprisal against most candidates are aimed indirectly at Governor Alfred Smith, who is nominated and enlisted the Anti-Saloon league's opposition as an asset and not a liability."

"Wheeler's threat of a third party in the south if Smith is nominated is not founded on facts," he continues. "One of Wheeler's own satellites, Mr. Anderson, former head of the New York Anti-Saloon league, and a dry among the dries, has publicly acknowledged that he found surprising Smith sentiment and support in the southland, during a recent tour in Dixie."

"A most healthy reaction set in against un-American activities of the league when both the president and Mr. Mellon refused to accept Major Roy A. Haynes as prohibition commissioner after Wheeler and his league had used every effort to have him appointed. This reaction will find an echo next year."
