Vienna has an office building boom.

Steel wire, so fine it can be woven into cloth as soft as silk, is now being made.

Twenty times as many women in England are betting on races as did a few years ago.

You can't mistake the careful man these days. He keeps his overcoat on in the restaurant.

Nearly 3,000,000 pairs of foreign made footwear will be purchased in this country this year.

Apparently the prohibition party is the only one that isn't divided on the wet and dry question.

There has been no change in spread upon the waters regardless of whether the tide is coming in or not.

And the final test of the blindness of love is for her to refrain from criticizing the color scheme of his neckties.

The cloud in the silver lining is that if Mussolini continues with his regulations, soon he will be reduced to regulating himself.

A baby weighing one and one-half pounds that was born recently at West Ham, England, is believed to be the world's tiniest child.

One of the channel swimmers is to try it again, in order to vindicate the swimmers. What they really need is justification, not vindication.

Then again in the old days, when the men's styles were announced, it was not thought necessary to designate the pockets as "pint" or "quart" size.

Speaking of looking into the future, the St. Joseph News-Press warns that time is pressing and up to the present no turkey shortage has been organized.

Dog racing offered too much competition to the horse racing interests in Illinois, which caused a law to be passed outlawing betting upon racing after 7 p. m.

There has been no change in spectacle frames in the last 500 years, we learn, so it must be the face that makes some people look that way in tortoise shell frames.

Columbia university announced recently that it can take no more students. But perhaps the faculty has changed its mind since last Saturday's football game.

How Lindbergh did not influence Mayor Miller is illustrated by the latter's remark that he cannot see where the city would get any revenue from the purchase of an airport.

Geologists have finally figured out that it has taken 300,000,000 years for the ocean to attain its present saltness. And now, if they haven't anything else to do, they might get to work on ham.

With the span of life extended to 125 years, as a scientist predicts, any man of purpose, tenacity, character and the faith that moves mountains ought to be able to master the mashie-niblick.

Much attention has been given in the last few years to the wisdom of diversified agriculture. It has been shown that the chances of profits or prosperity are increasing with the number of crops or farm resources that are relied upon.

While confessing our utter inability to see anything more than foolhardiness in Ruth Elder's attempt to fly across the Atlantic, we must give unstinted admiration of her thoughtfulness in taking a lipstick and rouge box along, both of which she promptly proceeded to use after being rescued.

The winning of the recent world's series in four straight games was hailed everywhere as new evidence of the honesty of baseball. But it also gave evidence that the Yankees were possessed of the hideous "lust to win," which, according to one modern school of sport thought, is a regrettable attribute.

First deed of trust; an engagement ring.

Japan is extending its air mail lines and adding others.

Interest in aviation now is centered in the aerial pass in football.

Corn husking is on and already reports of large yields have come in.

A presidential candidate who chooses to run in Mexico may live to run another day.

Note on the Chinese war: All the generals married, and the people lived happily ever after.

It is a notable fact that most speed records are made by people who are not going anywhere.

Our private opinion is that no one is really as competent as Herbert Hoover is supposed to be.

Every man should remember that it is much easier to live within an income than to live without one.

"Beauty in Twenty Minutes" is the slogan of a beauty parlor recently opened in London by a theatrical star.

A really clever woman is one who makes him promise that he likes spinach before she accepts the engagement ring.

Those who put their money into a nice shiny sedan instead of going to the Dempsey-Tunney fight are the wise ones these chilly days.

Of course we do not know, but we have a faint suspicion that those who advocate a 13-month year did not figure it makes the bills come due often.

The meanest man in Plattsmouth is the fellow who always shaves the back of his wife's neck with the same razor she uses for sharpening lead pencils.

The United States sent a new ambassador to Mexico. That country didn't lose any time in showing him just what kind of a job he had on his hands.

After trying every thing else to frighten away the birds, a fruit grower in South Germany installed a loud speaker in his orchard, and every bird shuns the spot.

By attaching a parachute to the baby buggy, an inventor at Brighton, England, has lightened the nursemaid's task and provided entertainment for the little one.

The per capita consumption of machinery is $25 in the United States, $9 in Germany; $3.50 in Hungary, between $5.40 and $4 in Czechoslovakia and $1 in Poland.

It is said that keeping the eye on the ball wins football games, but after watching any number of fumbles, we are certain that keeping the hands on the ball is fully as important.

Don't you suppose the New York judge who made that ruling about scantily clad chorus girls had lots of fun explaining to his wife why he didn't handle some different kind of case?

Blackmer says he is staying in Europe because his testimony could not help the government. The question of what effect his testimony might have on his friends at once arises.

After a New York man had gone to the trouble of getting fat and raising a moustache just to please his fiancée, she broke the engagement. She must have seen a picture of Paul Whiteman.

All nations prate about peace, but they all maintain war secretaries and departments of preparation. No nation, not even the United States, has yet suggested a secretary of the peace department.

RELIEF FOR LINDBERGH

Something must be done for Charles Lindbergh. Five months ago Lindbergh was the world's greatest hero. Today he is just a tired, long-suffering young man who sits by with an anguished look on his face while he is mauled by reception committees, gassed by non-stop orators, and stuffed with a variety of food that would ruin the digestion of an ostrich.

Five months ago Lindbergh wasn't at home unless he had a pilot stick in his hand. Today he isn't at home unless he has a bunch of celery in one hand and a glass of ice water in the other.

In the spring he was exploring "uncharted lanes of the air." Now he is exploring uncertified chicken patties of the earth.

Lindbergh must think at his moment that to Uncle Sam a hero is a boy who eats a barrel of olives a week.

One more month of this and he will be certain that a Gallant Knight is a fellow who knows every soup in the world by its French name, and that when the country hails a youth as an Intrepid Crusader it means a lad who has eaten radishes in every state in the union, who never cuts his salad with his knife, and who is a bear at drinking coffee after the guest at his left has dropped his cigarette ashes into it.

He will soon be satisfied that when the president referred to him last spring as "a glorious inspiration to the youth of our land," he had in mind somebody who would eat anything a waiter served him.

Lindbergh's slogan today might be, "I only regret that I have one digestive apparatus to give for my country."

He performed the most heroic feat of our time, and gave the world one of the most inspiring performances in history. And what is his reward? All the celery he can eat.

He did something no other men had ever done, bringing glory and distinction to his country. And what did he get? About 2,573 plates of bad fish with the usual piece of lemon on the side.

He turned down millions of dollars from moving picture magnates and advertising moguls. For what? About $4,000 worth of maple-nut ice cream and French pastry.

Is that justice? Is that a nice way to treat a boy hero? Uncle Sam, we ask you.

ACHILLES HEEL OR HOMERIC NOD

There is scarcely a good orthodox republican in the whole country but has sagely remarked at some time or other in this post-war period that Andrew W. Mellon is the greatest Secretary of the Treasury since Alexander Hamilton. And now former Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania, addressing the Winona Lake Congress, declares that Mr. Mellon is "the chief obstacle to complete enforcement of prohibition in the United States. And the Washington correspondent of the New Republic, commenting genially on Mr. Coolidge's withdrawal, observes that the banking interests of the East—meaning New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Connecticut and New Hampshire—can, and will, name the next republican candidate for the presidency, and the most powerful of those interests. Still this Nietzschean superman, it will be recalled, was not able to put over his distinguished candidate for the United States senate in that memorable "golden primary." How do his courtiers or his tireless critic Pinchot, diagnose that? Achilles heel or Homeric nod?

PRaise BE TO BIDDY

The feat of Lady Skyline, of the hen royalty of Canon City, Colo., in laying 231 eggs on 231 consecutive days, calls to mind a number of quietly clucking heroines about the country who go about their work with little fuss and display and produce splendid results.

We are speaking of the millions of American hens who are now rolling up a total of 24,000,000,000 eggs a year. A recent report of government experts, giving that figure as an estimate of Biddy's output, is a paean of praise to the mother of the poultry family.

We dig less than $50,000,000 worth of gold out of the earth annually. Sale of eggs yields $600,000,000. It seems the hen is the bird that's laying the golden egg these days. More power to her.

All the leading countries are constantly increasing their purchases of American dried apples.

EX-AMBASSADOR WALL-LACE EVOLVES SOMETHING

Hugh C. Wallace, who was ambassador to France during the Wilson administration, is credited with saying that Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the late President Wilson, would make a good running mate for Gov. Smith. He thing the influence of Mrs. Wilson is very great throughout the country, that such a ticket would sweep the states of the South and carry such western states as Washington, Oregon, California, Montana, Idaho, Nevada and Wyoming. The rest of the states necessarily would be carried by the governor. This ticket would be invincible, says Mr. Wallace, and the more the Republicans attacked it, the more votes they would lose. It can not be imagined what sort of microbe has infected this former diplomacy that is, if he is really in earnest, and it may be thought that he is. It is no disrespect to the widow of the late president to say that nothing of the sort would happen, except to admit that the southern states would be solid. This nomination would remove none of the objections to Gov. Smith, nor would sentiment play any part towards allaying opposition to the Democratic party gaining control of the country. The country has seen this sentiment feature worked in before and there was nothing to it. As a political play, this would fail.

It may be questioned if Mrs. Wilson would accept any such a proposition, and also questioned if she was first consulted in this matter. This was more likely evolved out of unused portion of what Mr. Wallace had left of his political course, and the good lady is not to be charged with such ideas or aspirations. The late ambassador must assume all responsibility. Of course if the New York governor was consulted first, naturally he would have much hesitation in replying in the negative, so in such supposition, this answer might have been, "Have you talked with Mrs. Wilson about this?" The probabilities are that the governor knew nothing about it.

The country has a high respect for Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. She showed her ability during the long sickness of the president, but it has no wish to drag her into the whirlpools of politics. Indeed, it may be doubted very much if the country would respond in any degree to this appeal. The respect of the country does not lie in the political line.

BUYING THE NEW-FORD

More than 125,000 orders have been received for the new model of the Ford automobile, all of them "eight unseen." Most of those buyers know what the new Ford will be like only from rumor and the little announcements about gear-shift, etc., that have appeared in the newspapers from time to time.

These 125,000 people who have bought Fords don't know what the car is going to cost. They have faith in Henry Ford, and that is their guarantee. This constitutes a remarkable modern story of industrial trust—indeed, such a thing never before was heard of in the world.

So you're going to make a new car, Mr. Ford? Very well, wrap up one for me and send it out!

An ambitious youth came to Washington from the country in order to join the police. He passed the usual examination and was then interviewed. "Well, young man," said an officer, "you look like a promising young fellow. You have a good general knowledge, I hope? Can you tell me how many miles it is from Washington to Baltimore? The ambitious youth became alarmed. "Look here sir, he blurted out, "if you are going to put me on a beat of that length I'd rather help father with the cows."

Camel

The cigarette preferred by experienced smokers

In the remarkable growing popularity of the cigarette many brands have bid for favor, but Camel continues to lead by billions. Quality put it there; quality keeps it there.

If all cigarettes were as good as Camel you wouldn't hear anything about special treatments to make cigarettes good for the throat. Nothing takes the place of choice tobaccos.

"One or twice a year," Dr. Mayo says "the human body should be submitted to a good doctor for examination and overhauling. That is the least you would do for your car. Disease and premature breakdown of vital organs would be obviated to an unbelievable extent."

A Nebraska woman shot and killed her husband "for fear some other woman might get him." And though one shouldn't speak ill of the departed, yet the lady would probably be surprised to learn how few other women really wanted him.
