Mebbe Trotzky will start a third party in Moscow.

Fault is one thing that may be found where it is not.

No man can succeed unless he has faith in his own ability.

Two often cease to be company after they are made one.

If you worry you can always find people to help you—worry.

Austria claims to have the best detective force in the world.

A silly woman tries to drive a man; a wise one leads him.

Our failures are due to ourselves more often than to other people.

It's climbing hills before they come to them that makes some people tired.

The flow of reason needs no levees to protect from rising above the flood danger line.

Perhaps people can be made to be good, that is on the outside. The inside is different.

Every mother knows that her own children are superior to any other children on the market.

Despite the over production of oil, science is now looking after the ocean floor in search of oil. Science does not economize.

A Tennessee woman, 80 years old, has never seen an automobile. And if she keeps on that way, there's no reason why she shouldn't live to be a hundred.

When Earl Carroll gets back to Broadway he may find that putting a nude chorus girl in a tub of synthetic champagne is a very mild form of amusement.

"There was a great deal of underground work in the last election," remarked the Mexican guide as he conducted the visitor through the cemetery, "and here is some of it."

Five more generals, says a dispatch, have joined the Gomez insurrection in Mexico. They never have any trouble getting generals, but they're always short of private soldiers.

Dean Inge predicts that we shall have a childless world in 1950. Still we believe there will be a larger number of babies here at that time and also old people to chatter just as childishly as he does.

A poll taken by the New York World shows a very strong sentiment in the belt of western states for abolition of the two-thirds rule in Democratic national conventions, or at least a substantial modification.

"The Civil Service Commission cannot perform miracles. We do not promise the impossible, nor will the entire character of the service be changed in the twinkling of an eye, but I am willing to say this—that given seven years, the length of time elapsed since the Volstead law became effective, we promise you results."

"Here's to the Stork, a valuable bird,

Who inhabits the residence districts.

He doesn't sing tunes or yield any plumes,

But he helps out the vital statistics.

Many a girl shatters her ideal when she married him.

The ignorance of a lawyer isn't bliss for his client.

Starved goods doesn't always command a stiff price.

Snow fell in Eastern France early in September this year.

The more you see of some people the less you are satisfied.

You can't always judge the show by the price of admission.

Fortune is sometimes fickle, but misfortune is always sincere.

Sometimes a girl's diary always turns out to be a scrap book.

It is always the darkest before dawn. Just so with other things.

We realize that the world is getting better when it begins to sit up and look our way.

If you want to go as a delegate to the convention, you will have to take a political course.

We suppose turkeys are being fattened up for Thanksgiving. But they don't realize it.

A poet arrested in New Jersey for reckless driving probably was depending upon his poetic license.

It looks like France and Germany really want to get together again. But the only way is to leave the war guilt feature out.

"Less than an hour after the duck hunting season opened, a Milwaukee man stopped a load of buckshot."

Why do they use buckshot for ducks?

When one does a graceful thing, it feels better to have some one else put them on the back than to do this yourself. Self-congratulations don't hit the spot.

After the English channel disclosures, we are beset by the horrid suspicion that the banana-eating champion of 1927 is merely an expert sword-swallower.

It doesn't lie in the mouths of Americans who live in Oshkosh, Oconomowoc, Punnasatwaney, and Schneccady to laugh at the funny names of Chinese towns that they see in the newspapers.

Now that a Los Angeles woman has been sentenced to jail for having failed to pay her husband alimony, the fact seems to have been established that complete sex equality has finally been attained.

Further progress has been made in clarifying the Republican presidential situation. Senator Peza of Ohio is the latest statesman to learn that when President Coolidge said "I do not choose," he means precisely what he said.

THE FALL-SINCLAIR JURY

The surprising thing about the Fall-Sinclair trial is the ease with which a jury was secured. It was announced in advance that anyone who had enough intelligent interest in the Nation's affairs to have read or heard of the Supreme Court's decision, concluding that fraud tainted the transaction of the former Secretary of the Interior and the oil man, would be excluded from the jury. It seems incredible that in the Nation's capital it was possible in a few hours, and after the examination of a comparatively few prospective jurors, to find a jury of this description.

This is interesting aside from the trial. One wonders why, with so much gouging of the people and such flagrant corruption in public affairs, no political penalty has been exacted by the people. Here we have the answer—a very large portion of the people are stupidly ignorant of all governmental proceedings, and unashamed.

This jury is said to look more intelligent than that which promptly acquitted Mr. Fall and Mr. Dohney. Of course, this is not extravagant praise.

Another interesting thing about the jury is that it is to be at liberty during the trial. It seems there was some criticism because the jury in the Fall-Dohney case was locked up. Who complained? And why? Since when did it become a novelty to lock up juries?

There are two reasons for withdrawing the jury from all outside contacts during a trial. One is to prevent pressure from being brought to bear upon the jurors, irrespective of the weight of evidence; the other is to prevent any tampering with jurors. The court in this case evidently feels that the defendants or their representatives are entirely above such things. Thus, the jurors are free, and open to approach from all quarters.

THINKING AND HOLLERING

John Clarkson, veteran newspaper reporter, contributes a clever and caustic article to the current issue of the American Magazine on the subject of campaign oratory.

Like all seasoned reporters, Clarkson is "agin" oratory, especially the campaign brand, and he recites several incidents where loud-mouth demagogues have triumphed over substantial statesmen merely because of the ability of the demagogue to pile adjective upon adjective, and make a great deal of sound while, in reality, saying nothing at all.

Clarkson recites one story that might well have happened during gubernatorial campaign. One afternoon while reporting a political meeting he noticed a big-hatted farmer in the crowd who stood glum, silent, and disinterested while several speakers intelligently discussed the real issues of the campaign. Finally the favorite candidate of this farmer rose up, and the farmer commenced to yell lustily. Edging his way over toward the enthusiast, Clarkson asked:

"What do you think of this proposal to change the tax system?"

"Think?" shouted the farmer. "Aw, hell, I didn't come here to think! I came here to holler!"

And holler he did! That's what happen in Nebraska last political campaign. There was a lot of hollering but darned little thinking.

ROME'S PRAGMATIC ATTLA

Mussolini strikes a racial in the Latin people by his latest proscribing holidays, fetes, festivals, fiestas have been immemorably dear to the Mediterranean temperature "What Attila has come to govern Rome?" inquires the precious dust along the Applan Way.

The Attila of pragmatism, the Goths and vandals of economic necessity. Away with the spirit of geyety, the trapping of splendor, the genius of the carnival. It is to be six-day week in Italy. It will be all right to utilize Sunday for whatever celebrations tradition or emotion requires, but the day's work will be subject to no historic interruptions.

Mussolini may be right, only from the viewpoint of efficiency but from the viewpoint of imperial safety. Would there have been an idea of March in Caesar's calendar except for the Lupercal on which he thrice refused the crown? Neither Lupercal nor ideas of March for Mussolini. The "bread-and-the-circus" formula is bottled up.

Italy will achieve the golden age only by getting down to brass tacks. Such is Mussolini's philosophy, compressed in a paradox that undeniably has in this instance the merit of common sense.

There was more editorial space on fire prevention week for any other so-called week.

A COMMENDABLE RESIGNATION

The mayor of Indianapolis, indicted, tried, and convicted for an offense directly concerned with his office, still clings desperately to that office and shuffles his appointive subordinates around so as to get his wife in position to become his successor if the office which he disgraces shall be wrenched out of his own grasp.

One of his appointees, indicted, but not yet tried, for an alleged illegal act not concerned with his official conduct, saw the matter in a different light and immediately signed, though protesting his innocence of the charge against him. We shall let him state his own reasons.

"I know that if this indictment had been pending against me at the time I was appointed I would not have thought of accepting, and I do not believe that the citizens of this city would have felt that it was a proper appointment under such circumstances. They could rightfully have said that surely there could be found a man to fill this important position who is not under indictment. If under an indictment I would not be a proper person to continue to hold the office."

One can have for this man a degree of respect utterly impossible in the case of Mayor Duval, since the mayor has shown a callous lack of respect for himself, and for the city of Indianapolis, which had honored him by entrusting its highest official position to his keeping.

GOOD ADVICE

"Keep the Mississippi river in its banks and out of politics," says Dwight W. Davis, secretary of war.

That's a pungent paragraph, chock-full of common sense.

"Keep the Mississippi river in its banks and out of politics." The sentence ought to be emblazoned in letters four feet high, and placed over the main entrance of the capitol building at Washington.

If the food control problem is discussed by Congress in its economic aspect, speedy action will follow. If politics is injected, the melancholy history of Muscle Shoals will be repeated.

Secretary Davis has given a bit of advice equally good for Republicans and Democrats. The first man who attempts to play politics with the food control question ought to be kicked out of Congress.

A BAD IDEA FOR HUMOR

The scene was a little Pennsylvania town where several hundred men were working on a construction job. It was nearly noon and the men were getting hungry. They awaited and eyed their dinner pails hungrily.

There was a wag in the crowd. There was in the gang one of those fellows they call "the life of the party," who turns the laugh to everyone's expense save his own. It would be fun to attach a live wire to one of the dinner pails and see the man jump when he touched it.

It was fun. The boy whose dinner pail was wired, a youth of seventeen, reached for his bucket and that was his last reach. The strong current killed him. Another practical joker reaped the fruits of his ignorant designs. Practical jokers are not nice people to have around.

SPEED

Fourteen years ago the first Schneider cup race for seaplanes was won by France. The pilot made a speed of 44.7 miles an hour, and the world was wondering if a plane ever would go faster than an automobile.

The other day a British plane shot through the air at a rate of 281-488 miles an hour to win the same trophy. When you figure that a sprinter running the hundred-yard dash in ten seconds, you begin to realize what the word "flying" means.

Compared with that, a bullet travels like a schoolboy's paper-wad.

Avoid Excess Uric Acid!

To Be Well There Must Be Proper Kidney Action.

A STIFF, achy feeling is a common sign of sluggish kidneys and excess uric acid. One is apt to be tired and languid, nervous and depressed, suffer nagging backache, headaches and dizziness. A common warning of sluggish kidney action is scanty or burning secretions. Doan's Pills, by stimulating the activity of the kidneys, assist them to eliminate excess uric acid. If your kidneys are acting sluggishly, use Doan's. They have been recommended since 1885. Are endorsed the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Power

where power counts most

WHEN the task to be accomplished is difficult—when stamina, dependability and unflinching power are essential—the advice of those who know is, "Buy a Buick!"

In Buick for 1928, greater power, and greater get-away are imparted by vital engine improvements... greater grace and beauty are provided in its new low-swung bodies by Fisher... greater roadability and riding comfort result from built-in hydraulic shock absorbers and tailored seats.

Drive a Buick for 1928 today—and find out why Buick is so popular where power counts most.

HOW TO MAKE REVOLUTIONS

To make a revolution all you have to do is grind the people under the heels of a few exploiters, leave it long enough to ferment and then stir with a competent agitator like Danton, Juarez, Sun Yat Sen, Bolivar, Tom Pain or Lenin, and you have your blow-off.

They are having one just now in Bolivia. Three recent travelers have told us what is the matter with Bolivia. Nine-tenths of the people in Bolivia are exploited by the other tenth. You can see the sort of thing that inspired "The Man With the Hoe" all over the country—a people debased in body and intellect until they are of no use either to those who hold them in bondage or themselves.

They have at last revolted. What else could they do?

A correspondent asks: "What is the most effective method of killing a cockroach?" Well, we have discovered that jumping on him with both feet produces very satisfactory results.
