Today's Black and White Editorial!

"I've never been able to figure out why I was chosen as a sort of National Dinner Bird for a host of Thanksgiving guests! Why not a chicken, or a goose, or a duck? I've often wondered if my 'Gobble! Gobble!' hasn't been the means of suggesting that my delicate self was fit food to be 'gobbled' up by hungry mouths. If this is true, I'm going to change my tune. The Turkey Union will meet soon to decide on some uninviting sound—a growl, or a mew, or a hoot."

SAGE FUNERAL SERVICES

From Monday's Daily—

Yesterday afternoon the funeral services of the late James W. Sage were held at the Sattler funeral home at 4th and Vine street and the home was filled to its capacity by the old friends who gathered for the last farewell to the old friend and neighbor.

The body was brought here from Omaha and lay in state at the funeral home during the morning hours and a large number called to pay their last respects during the time.

The services were held by Father W. C. Middleton, rector of the St. Luke's Episcopal church, who celebrated the Episcopal burial service.

During the service a number of the old and loved hymns were given by friends from Omaha who were in attendance at the funeral.

The interment was delayed until Wednesday afternoon to permit the arrival of his sister, Mrs. Alta Bowen of Seattle to reach this city, as the word of her coming was not received until the funeral date was set. After the arrival of the sister the burial will be held at the Oak Hill cemetery in this city.

'COXEY'S ARMY' IS ASSEMBLING

Newport, Wales, Nov. 9.—The little army of unemployed marshalled by A. J. Cook, secretary of the British Federation of Miners, slept in Newport Tuesday night hopeful of the morrow.

The gathering did not get started toward London Tuesday as planned due to a cold snap which delayed marchers from scattered mining districts who are assembling here. Today, however, the leaders hope to start the 200-mile trek for the purpose of impressing parliament with the needs of the unemployed.

Race With Winter in the Flood Area

New England Communities Take Up Work of Rebuilding Ruined Homes and Industries.

Boston, Nov. 9.—New England's flood-stricken communities Tuesday took up the work of rebuilding their ruined homes and industries as the swollen streams fell back into their normal channels and communication was gradually restored with the outside world.

Late Tuesday night there were few places which relief agencies had not reached. As outsiders entered the last of the towns in northern Vermont, cut off since last Thursday by the flood, they found men armed with picks and shovels digging themselves out of the debris of wrecked houses and piles of mud, erecting temporary bridges and laying out roadways over which much-needed supplies may be brought.

Throughout Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut the streams continued to recede and there appeared no further danger from the waters. The Connecticut was dropping along its length and residents of towns and cities along its lower stretches breathed freely once more. Similar reports came from along the Merrimac in New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

No Food Shortage.

Vermont, hardest hit by the flood, was on its way toward recovery. Governor John E. Weeks Tuesday called together the heads of state departments at Montpelier and set machinery in motion to bring order out of confusion. He appointed Fred A. Howland emergency finance commissioner, and named committees to carry on the work of restoring conditions to normal.

There were few reports of food shortage. Newport, Vt., where a famine was feared, reported that there were no fatalities and that outside communication had been established by which a food supply was assured.

There was talk of a special session of the Vermont legislature to take relief measures, but no action was taken. The Vermont capital received a supply of cash for its banks and Governor Weeks was offered a fund of $10,000 for relief work by James L. Colgate of Old Bennington, Vt.

Air Quarters Moved.

The army air headquarters established at Concord, N. H., were ordered transferred to Burlington, Vt., in order to be in closer touch with the region most seriously affected and preparations were immediately made to move all of the aerial activities to that point. An army pontoon bridge was on its way from Fort Dupont, Del., to Burlington, for use in restoring communications between Burlington and Winoski so that relief may be carried along the Winoski river valley where the flood claimed $6 lives.

A measure of relief by which the railroads, their lines disrupted by washouts and wrecked bridges, might render aid more quickly, the interstate commerce commerce commission in Washington issued an order relieving the carriers of the routine restrictions applying to their operations and permitting them to use any routes available.

President Coolidge, guided by his knowledge of his home state, was credited with being of the opinion that no measures for future flood control could be taken, but undeterred by any fears of the future, work was started in the wrecked towns to rebuild homes on the sites which were swept by the high water.—Omaha Bee-News.

GOES BACK TO JAIL

From Wednesday's Daily—
The bright and pleasant fall weather means nothing to Frank Morgan, who was brought back on Monday night from Greenwood where he was arrested by Marshal Trunk-enholtz, as the gentleman is still in the confines of the county jail awaiting the sum necessary to release him from custody and to pay the fine of $50 and costs, the limit of the law assessed against him by County Judge A. H. Duxbury for having operated a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

Mr. Morgan yesterday morning gave the court a check for the amount of the fine and costs and which was drawn on a Greenwood bank but the investigation of the check disclosed that the account of Mr. Morgan was such that it was necessary for other relatives to consent to the payment of the amount before the bank could pay it out and as they declined to give the O. K. on the payment Sheriff Reed again placed the prisoner back in jail.

CATTLE BRING GOOD PRICE

From Wednesday's Daily—
Jacob Bengen, one of the prominent farmers living in the Mynard neighborhood yesterday topped the Omaha market with a load of ten yearlings or baby heaves, that found a ready demand on the market from the buyers and brought $14.35 a hundred, or a total of $150 each for the heaves. The showing of the Cass county raised stock was very pleasing and was one of the highest prices that has been commanded on the Omaha market for some time. The baby heaves were pronounced of the highest quality by the Omaha commission men and Mr. Bengen was congratulated on the showing that his stock had made.

Mrs. William Hassler was a visitor in Omaha today where she was called to look after some matters of business in that city for the day.

Woman Pioneer of Nebraska Ill at Decatur Home

Mrs. Emily Fontenelle, 94; Confined to Bed; Was Source of Many Thrilling Stories.

From Monday's Daily—
Mrs. Emily Fontenelle, 94, one of Nebraska's oldest and earliest residents, is ill at her home in Decatur, Neb.

For many years, Mrs. Fontenelle, who was born in St. Louis and married Henry Fontenelle at Bellevue, in 1855, has entertained her neighbors and friends with tales of the early days.

Mrs. Fontenelle is a third cousin of the late Peter A. Sarpy, for whom Sarpy county was named. Her husband was engaged with Sarpy in the fur trading business, in the employ of the American Fur company.

Tells of Kit Carson.
Later the Fontenelles moved to a homestead north of Bellevue where their seven children were born. One Eugene, survives.

One of Mrs. Fontenelle's favorite tales of the early days concerned Kit Carson.

"I remember seeing him at Bellevue," her story ran. "He was married there to a pretty Indian maiden, Moneta, an aunt of my husband. They were very happy. Two children were born to them. Word came of an uprising of the Sioux, and Kit rode away on scout duty. He never returned.

Scout Never Returned.
"When the Omahans moved to their present home in 1854, Moneta and her children came with them. But her children died about 10 and 12 years of age. When Moneta, for her somber and melancholy ways, came to be known as 'Old Granny,' at eventime, 'granny' would go to the top of a certain favorite hill, and, shading her eyes, look longingly toward the west, as if trying to discern some object in the distance."

Mrs. Fontenelle always ended her story, "But her hope was never realized. Poor 'Old Granny' died and was buried on the homestead. I was present at the funeral."
