

LEGION NEWS!

A column appearing in the Daily Journal on Saturdays

The annual elections in both the Legion and the Auxiliary are now accomplished.

Leslie Niel heads the Legion for 1928, and Mrs. J. P. Johnson the Auxiliary. Both good selections.

Now, we can get down to real work for the year, the first objective so far as the Legion is concerned being the securing of our 1928 membership. Dues are now due and there is no need dragging out their payment beyond January 1st. Let's have them now—or by then at the latest.

Fine social meeting last night and everyone having a good time. Several visitors present, among them Martha Greife, of Louisville. Also a number of local Legionnaires who have moved here within the year and still retain their membership in other posts. We hope to have them all enrolled with us for 1928.

Praise is due "June" Marshall and those members of his "Little Band" who turned out and played gratis for the dance following last night's social meeting of the Legion and Auxiliary. "June" is ever ready and willing to do his part, regardless of whether he sees a "pay" job ahead or not, and the pursuit of such a policy cannot help but pay big dividends in the long run.

Our Harvest Festival opens a week from tonight. Intensive preparations will be required during the coming week to get everything in readiness and among the important things is a good turnout for the booster trip on Wednesday night. There will be plenty of cars to provide transportation for everyone who wants to go, so just because you don't have a car of your own, don't feel backward about asking to be assigned a place in the car of someone else.

We are advertising this carnival as bigger, greater and better than ever before—and it will be just that. New features, new entertainment—and lots of it—make Legion carnivals popular with the public. And then, too, everyone knows the proceeds all go to pay indebtedness on our present building and lay up a fund for its early completion. Five big nights of fun and delight for everyone.

The Legion has featured some of the best orchestras in the state at its mid-week dances—orchestras that could not have been brought here except with a building and floor like ours available. And with them, we have attracted dancers from as far away as 65 miles—not one or two, but lots of them. In fact at any mid-week dance you will find fully as many strangers here as home folks. And they all spend some money in Plattsmouth—gas, oil and lunch being certain articles of consumption in making trips via the modern day method.

Our next mid-week dance comes on Wednesday, Dec. 14, with Pat Kroh playing a return engagement, and we would like to see more home town people—our erstwhile dancing businessmen—with many of whom dancing has become a lost art in the past few years—come out to this dance and see how much real fun and enjoyment they can get out of tripping the light fantastic once more. No advance ticket canvass will be made, but we feel so sure you will get your money's worth in good, wholesome amusement at these mid-week feature offerings that we urge you to again include dancing in your amusement program. "One never gets too old to dance" you know.

Pay your dues—and then get some other buddy to pay his. That's one way of being a good Legionnaire. Same old price—$2 a year. And that includes subscription to the American Legion Monthly and Nebraska Legionnaire—if you can get it. We have received numerous complaints about non-receipt of the state publication—in fact haven't received the last two issues ourselves. A change in publication personnel is about to be made, however, and we are informed will include a regular editor, who will look after maintaining the circulation. The Legionnaire has been run in a pretty slipshod manner the past couple of years—since the retirement of Adjutant O'Connell, who is a trained newspaper man, and gave the publication standing by his energetic editing of it.

School Dispute in Higher Court

Question of Whether Electors May Banish High School Teacher from District in Suit.

Following the advice of the county and state superintendent, Joseph Mills, Herbert Fuller and Herman Trauernicht, members of the school board in District No. 16, Frontier county, disregarded the vote at the annual meeting in favor of dispensing with high school instruction, and now they are in supreme court asking that tribunal to overturn an order of the district court that they follow the instructions of the annual meeting and hold no such school.

The question does not involve the validity of the law providing for the giving of high school instruction in rural schools, it was expressly stated by the lower court, in its opinion, but is whether the offering of such instruction is so mandatory in character that the board must do so or whether the vote at the annual meeting controls. Little dispute exists as to the facts.

The district is a small one, with but eleven pupils, and George Volkman and the others who brought the action in mandamus insist that there are no children this year of high school age, and hence no necessity exists for the instruction being given. They said that the giving of this work means an expense of at least $110 a month for a teacher competent to give it, and the motion to dispense with it, if that could be legally done, was carried by a vote of fourteen to seven.

In spite of the vote, the directors said they would have to give it, and hence the action to mandamus them before any expense had been incurred. They say that they believe enough pupils are available to pay the expenses, coming from other districts that pay tuition, and that as the schoolhouse was added to for this purpose, it will be convenient to parents, because the other nearest schools are ten and fifteen miles away.

WHY AMERICA FOREMOST

New York, Nov. 18.—American resources, skilled labor and industrial organization would have won the country its present position in international finance even if there had been no world war, Thomas W. Lamont, of J. P. Morgan & Co., asserted tonight. Speaking at the dinner of the academy of political science, he said that America's pre-eminence in mass production had become one of the seven wonders of the world.

International finance, in the modern sense, he said, has existed for America only since the early days of the world war. Before that time the United States looked to foreign nations for capital with which to advance industrial and agricultural progress.
