Nothing insipid about this December.

There are still vacant lots on Easy street.

Now for the jolly, old, companionate New Year's Eve!

In "pan-America," "pan" is a Greek derivative, meaning "all."

Christmas shoppers' faces must be all the style this year, the way they're worn.

An old controversy as a rule does not down until settled, and if not settled will come up again until it is.

Automobile dealers in Warsaw, Poland, are making more profit in selling used cars than in new ones.

One thing that must be said for cold weather is that the flag poles are used more or less exclusively for flags.

And J. Borah or Norris had been "For Sa" they would never have had to go to Mexico for a buyer. Caramba, no.

How abysmally silly a big, fat, sweating, knock-kneed man in golf pants looks strutting around in a hotel lobby.

Los Angeles police asked "Scarface Al" Capone, Chicago gangster, to leave town. Some cities just can't appreciate an honor like that.

A congressman retains office 15 months after he is seated. Very often his campaign had to be begun two years and more before he was seated.

Since Hearst has such a passion for public documents, he will no doubt be glad to publish the public document addressed to him by Senator Norris.

AMBASSADORS OF GOOD MANNERS

Col. Lindbergh went to two bull-fights. That is his answer to the busybodies who tried to persuade him to insult a country and a people that have recognized him with every hospitality and homage.

It is an excellent answer—just about the best possible, and as such might be called typically Lindberghian. For this young man is the eighth wonder of the world. His experience is, of course, without parallel. Never was another youth so tested by the adulation of the crowd and the deference of the mighty. He has acquitted himself incomparably. He has never come within radio distance of a faux pas. If anywhere under the shining sun there is an individual who needs neither a social nor a moral cicerone, Lindbergh is that man.

It is fortunate, beyond compute, that that unique American eagle should have been endowed with such a wealth of talents. He has needed them all, and never, perhaps, was the need greater than the present instance. An occasion which it is hoped and believed, will prove a landmark in the relations between Mexico and the United States, might well have been distorted into a rancid memory had Lindbergh been influenced by the miserable counsel of officious impertinence.

Lindbergh has already been commissioned as the Ambassador of Good Will. We presume to confer another distinction—Ambassador of Good Manners.

Many of the current crop of congressmen, old and new, have spent much more time campaigning and waiting for their seats than they will now spend in said seats.

Our sole objection to the herescope is that by the time the young hopeful is able to read it the time when the stars could have any influence on him long since has passed.

About that detective scandal in Washington—the detectives seem to think it's an awful state of affairs when sleuths can't go around snooping without other sleuths snooping on their trail.

Because a serial story in Japanese newspaper has been running for a mere dozen years, a Tokio dispatch terms it "endless," and seems to imply that Americans have no acquaintance with such Marathon feats of fiction.

Judging from the increasing number of trade talks and other advertising stunts via the radio it won't be long until more stringent regulation in that respect will be necessary if the radio is to retain its popularity.

A striking illustration of how a newspaper unselfishly serves the public is furnished by the New Orleans Times-Picayune, which is now having published at its own expense, five full-pages advertisements in the Washington Star and the Washington Post, dealing with the flood control problem.

NORRIS ON HEARST

Not even Mr. Hearst, with his twenty-six newspapers and numerous monthlies, can lightly injure the good name of George W. Norris of Nebraska, the doughtiest member of the United States Senate.

The reputation of the Nebraska Senator, his sturdy character, his non-partisanship, and his straightforwardness, are in themselves a sufficient answer to the forged Mexican documents which Hearst first published in his papers and is now trying to defend before a senate investigating committee. What Hearst has done no member of the Senate would think of doing. Most of those men have at times disagreed with Senator Norris; some of them have clashed with him in bitter parliamentary combat; but none ever ascribed to him a dishonorable motive or weakened his cause by intimating that Senator Norris had lied.

It took Hearst to do that, and he is already answering for it. The Senator has hurled at the publisher a 3500-word letter in which his judgments are scathing. To Senator Norris the Hearst motive in the matter of the Mexican documents, which allege that $1,215,000 in bribes was paid by Mexico to Senators Borah, Norris, La Follette and Hefflin for their friendly attitude toward her, was to involve the United States in war with that country. To Senator Norris it is quite plain from what has come out in the Senate investigation that to have his way in a controversy with Mexico over her new land laws the publisher would involve the peoples of both countries in all the consequences of armed strife.

This is hardly a lighter blow than the one aimed at Senator Norris by Hearst. It is not impossible that an individual with Hearst's immense publicity powers could involve the two countries in war. Few words have had such an impetus, nor is the motive imputed to him beyond the country's experience with Hearst. The simple fact that he would blacken the names of the four Senators with a story which he says he did not believe himself shows how journalism has been degraded in his hands. That he would not give these men an opportunity to defend themselves before he published charges that had come to him through the hands of men who represented themselves as thieves, but who probably were forgers, is outside the bounds and practices of journalism everywhere except in the Hearst offices.

There is one point in the Norris letter which ought to convince anybody. It is that Mexico does not have to bribe men like Borah and Norris to win their support. They belong to a group in the senate which does this sort of thing for nothing. It is their delight to help the under dog. The sympathy which every oppressed nation commands in their breasts is beyond price, nor could an undeserving Mexico buy it. The Mexicans would be fools to pay a million and a quarter dollars for something they already have and have had from the time when Hearst himself was one of their friends.

No more asinine story was ever told, as no more fantastic fiction was ever invented. If Hearst is not ashamed to have impugned the good names of these men, beside which to their type all else is trash, he should be ashamed that his professional judgment of what is credible is so bad as it is.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

If he answers the question with an emphatic, "No, I don't play bridge," it is certain that he has at least a small shred of authority in his own home, or he is not married.

At the international convention of hoboes recently held in Minneapolis, it was said that the word "hoboes" originally meant "workers" being derived from "hoe" and "boys."

A professor has gone to Egypt to translate a medical manuscript of the seventeenth century before Christ. And suppose that should turn out to be only another lady talking about her operation.

"Husbands Hampering Happiness of Homes Here by Harboring Harassing Habits," says an illiterate headline writer in the Hattiesburg, American. Why not "Wild Wives Work Woo by Winning Willies?"

Scientific gentleman says we are rapidly returning to the primitive condition of our ancestors. Maybe so, but Adam and Eve would still be just a trifle out of place at a costume party.

Well, we are hoping and almost praying that Charley Lindbergh will get back from Mexico City without falling victim to one of those Spanish senoritas with I-dare-you lips and come-hither eyes.
