It's an ill wind that leaves a tire flat.

Poets are born, but widows are made.

One of the best ways to give advice is to listen.

The man or woman who is not curious is a curiosity.

Courtship is a bowknot that matrimony pulls into a hard knot.

Measure your strength by your mind power not physical power.

Trotzky seems to have been over by the machine he helped to crank.

Suggested epitaph for a movie star's press agent: Here he lies, as usual.

Geese travel north in January but, after all, it must be remembered that geese are geese.

We can remember the time when horseshoers were just as common as alienists are now.

The clock points out the hours for a man, but a charming woman, makes him forget them.

must wear a bathing suit, who poses for a candy advertisement must wear a bathing suit.

Cheer up! We know a radio soprano who has tonsillitis and won't be able to sing for a couple of weeks.

We have no taste for murder, but reports of the killing of gangsters by gangsters always leave us strangely undisturbed.

St. Louis has had fifteen murders in one bootleg feud. The business couldn't be much more hazardous if they'd drink their own hooch.

The path of some bills through congress resembles a mountain trail. This seems to be the case with the farm relief and alien property.

A prohibition official tells the ladies of the W. C. T. U. that Chicago is now bone dry, all sinful places having been closed tightly.

Reports state Hoover and Willis are to wage battle in Ohio for the national convention delegates. It seems these are to be owned by somebody.

Two hundred ninety million dollars is to be spent on federal buildings during the next ten years. Here is hoping that Plattsmouth gets a share.

Christian charity should not be such a rarity in our treatment of each other for differences of opinion. Singularly enough politics seem to be an exception.

Education costs money, lack of it costs much more.

Getting cold feet is not always due to the weather.

A hold front on a weak face doesn't always connect well.

For Sale: A good piano in good condition. Phone 174.

A detour is better than no road at all, if that isn't what it is.

Play by the rules of the game. You stand better with the umpire.

Too much wind jamming in the senate. People perfectly understand it.

What is needed is some direct way to take up a church collection by radio.

The cold waves this winter lack sticking qualities. No regrets on this account.

In these days of female dieting, nearly every household has a family skeleton.

A man likes to refer to himself as an idiot at times, but makes him mad if anybody else agrees with him.

"Reed to Stump the West," says a headline. But you can't Senator, you just can't stump the boys out there.

Many a man boasts of his ancestors whose ancestors would be ashamed to admit he belonged to the family.

If takes the average woman about twice as long to make up her complexion as it does to make up her mind.

When a candidate thinks he has every thing sewed up, another candidate may just be going on a rip and tear campaign.

It looks as if tax reduction would have to be revenue production before congress gets through with its work.

A general has gone down to supervise the elections in Nicaragua. The army has done nothing, however, about Pennsylvania and Illinois.

This being Lent, you'd think some of the paragraphs would give up jokes about mother-in-laws, saxophones, and congress and go to work.

A man in Chicago is a candidate for six offices. At last! The fellow who said "Something should be done about that" has wheeled into action.

There would seem to be something in a name when Miss Hildegrade Schwinghammer wins a nail-driving contest at the University of Minnesota.

The two robbers who held up a college professor in Kansas needed not only the experience by an education.

The younger intellectuals are now questioning the existence of time. Seems to us they are only trying to kill time.

The stock market has been coveting around right smart lately. That's one of the reasons why gentlemen prefer blondes.

A golf player says cigarettes keep his throat clear. And that's what a golfer needs, especially in sand traps and at the water hole.

The Missouri woman who had a needle in her stomach for 30 years probably hasn't been paying much attention to her knitting.

Our forests are going, but things could be worse. Just suppose some fashion leader should come down the street wearing a wood leg.

Church service over the radio never will be a success until the announcer tells what kind of hats and gowns the ladies are wearing.

We refuse to believe that a toad placed in a cornerstone in Texas, lived there 31 years, until we hear there were some tourist's initials on it.

Mayor Walker decline champagne in New Orleans. The Mayor explained some time ago that his health prohibited further participation in the national pastime.

The flapper is gone and we have with us now the sober young lady of poise, with correct speech. We won't believe it until we see a girl with a rat in her hair.

Yet it is possible to disagree with him.

It is true that we seem far more interested in baseball, criminal trials, airplane flights, and new fivers than in our governmental leaders and their problems. But this may be our fault as much as the fault of our leaders.

As a matter of fact, there is no country on earth where the average man looks so longingly for a capable leader as in America. Our trouble is that too often, of recent years, we have learned that our idols had feet of clay. We have grown somewhat suspicious; we have become clever at detecting shams. But let a really great man arise, or even a half-great man, and we are ready to go wherever he asks.

This explains, undoubtedly, our tendency to idolize our industrial captains. We look up to men like Ford, Sloan, Farrell, and Du Pont because we recognize that here, for all their shortcomings, are men who are in their own way genuinely big. They may move in narrow fields, but in those fields they loom large. We are hungry for leaders, and since our politicians so often have failed us, we are turning to the business men.

The American does not readily lose his capacity for giving himself to great leaders. There is grounded in every heart an inarticulate idealism, shy but ardent, eager to take command if only there will arise a captain capable of making the right appear. On every battlefield from Lexington to Chateau Thierry there are American bodies to testify this.

Sir Bertram Hayes commanded the big liner Olympic during the World War, and helped transport many English and American troops to France. In his recently published book of reminiscences he comments on the contrast between the troops of the two nations. The English soldiers, he said, were carefree and joyful. The American soldiers were serious, sober, and "like crusaders."

Whatever the historians may have discovered regarding the causes of the war; whatever may have happened since then in the rooms where treaties have been signed; the fact remains that we entered the war because the common American was convinced that by so doing he was serving a loftier cause than he could know otherwise. We were asked to give ourselves for an ideal, and we responded.

Is that spirit dead, then? Have we lost our capacity for rising to high ideals? We have not. We are still looking for leaders. We have had a dearth of them of late. But we are ready for them.

Let a man arise again—a man of genuine greatness, with a call to real service on his lips—and there will be a response to shake the world. America is waiting, now as always. Let every politician remember it.

LOOKING FOR A LEADER

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, the energetic young man from Montana who drove Harry Daugherty out of the cabinet, is discouraged about the American people.

The nation, he believes, is selfish and inert. If Lincoln himself were to appear today, the Senator declares, he could do nothing because the people would be too indifferent to follow him.

It is hard to blame the Senator from being pessimistic. He courageously made war on corruption in high places, and was rewarded by being indicted on trumped-up charges; nor was there any great outcry of popular indignation over the treatment he received.

Yet it is possible to disagree with him.

It is true that we seem far more interested in baseball, criminal trials, airplane flights, and new fivers than in our governmental leaders and their problems. But this may be our fault as much as the fault of our leaders.

As a matter of fact, there is no country on earth where the average man looks so longingly for a capable leader as in America. ### LONG AND USEFUL LIFE

Thomas A. Edison, who passed his eighty-first milestone a few days ago, says he is really 162 years old, because he has done two days work every day of his 81 years. Commenting on Mr. Edison's statement, Arthur Brisbane has this to say:

"Mr. Edison did 10,000 years' work when he changed man's lighting system from kerosene to electricity. His habit of working two days in one, accounts for the fact that mentally he is 40, not 81. An active mind stays young, in man or woman. Women grow old prematurely because badly organized civilization gives them nothing to do except talk and dress, when their children are grown up."

It might be said with equal truth that Mr. Edison did several thousand years' work when he gave to the people the phonograph, and other thousand of years' labor when he completed some of his other inventions.

Always a busy man the great inventor has not permitted the year to cloud his genius or slow down his interest in life.

Mr. Edison, riding to his eighty-second anniversary, still remains one of America's greatest men and one of the world's brightest lights.
