INTENDED ACREAGE
OF CROPS IN 1928

Nebraska farmers are not planning any marked changes in crop acreage except for barley and potatoes, according to the results of the spring planting survey released today by the state and federal division of agricultural statistics. Some potato growers in western Nebraska have already taken action to reduce the acreage of potatoes. Some winter wheat will be abandoned which will force some further adjustment of acreage.

Planting intentions of Nebraska farmers are as follows: corn, 100% spring wheat, 96% and 99.2%; oats 101%; grain sorghum, 100%; potatoes, 112% and tame hay 101%.

Planting intentions for the U. S. and North Central States are respectively as follows: corn 102.8%; and 98.3%; oats, 98.6% and 99.2% barley, 123.9% and 128.2%; flaxseed, 114.3%; grain sorghum, 102.3%; potatoes, 111.9% and 113.5%; sweet potatoes, 106.5% and 106.1%; tame hay, 98.6% and 97.6%.

In view of the generally large intended acreage of potatoes for the country, it is likely that this acreage will be reduced somewhat, since past history shows marked priced reduction following large production. Western Nebraska growers have already taken steps toward reduced acreage. Barley gives good results as a feed crop, particularly in western and south central Nebraska where corn is somewhat uncertain. Barley can be harvested by combines which may further increase the acreage.

From present reports, it appears that the winter wheat abandonment may range from 5% to 10%. The acreage for the country as a whole is 10% larger. Flax would be a good substitute for spring wheat in northwestern Nebraska since U. S. production is well below domestic requirements.

The Kingdom of God

A Murray Industry.
M. G. Churchill, the barber and shoemaker, has put in some of his spare time working his brain as well as his hands, and has invented a garden plow, which has been giving excellent satisfaction, and which is meeting with good demands. A short time since he received one hundred of these handy bits of machinery, and with some nine people selling for him the hundred did not last long. Another hundred is on the way to Murray, and but last week Mac made a trip to Atchison, where he has the machines manufactured and arranged for a larger quantity output. This is a fair trade of Murray, and bids fair in the future to be a matter of much importance to the hustling little city.

Friends Surprise Mrs. Stewart
A number of the friends of Mrs. Stewart, on learning that she would soon be celebrating the date of her birth, planned a most successfully carried out surprise party in honor of the occasion.

Rev. Stewart, having been put wise as to the plans and preparations kindly invited Mrs. Stewart to go calling with him on Thursday afternoon, and it was during their absence that the merry group of ladies invaded the manse. Upon the return of the pastor and his good wife they were greeted at the door with the "Happy Birthday" song. After Mrs. Stewart recovered from the shock of the surprise, a most pleasant afternoon was enjoyed by all, and was brought to a close by the ladies of the missionary society serving delicious sherbert, cakes and coffee. The huge birthday cake was baked by Mrs. Boedeker, and with its decorations and candles, was proof that she is a real artist. Mrs. Stewart was the recipient of some beautiful and useful gifts, which attest the love and esteem with which she is held by her Murray friends, among whom the Stewart family have resided but a few months, which fact made the surprise more complete, as Mrs. Stewart never suspected that any one in Murray had any idea as to when her birthday would occur.

Those present to enjoy the happy event were Mesdames Harry Nelson, Dick Pittman, H. C. Long, W. G. Boedeker, C. D. Spangler, Geo. Nickles, W. S. Smith, Robert Burr, Ed Tutt, A. G. Long, G. H. Gilmore, W. B. Virgin, W. A. Brown, Roy Howard, Henry Timms, O. A. Davis, Banker, De Les Derber, Roy Gering, H. G. Todd, Marshall, Nick Frederick, Wm. Minford, Margaret Todd, John Vantine, A. D. Bakke and Misses Beulah Sans, Frances Stewart and Dorothy Todd, and Rev. and Mrs. Stewart.

Isaiah, where he wrote: "Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, who shall prepare the way. The voice of one crying in the wilderness, 'Make ready the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.'"

And so there came John, who baptised in the wilderness and preached the baptism of repentance unto the remission of sin.

Mark told of the coming of John the Baptist, and of his being a forerunner of the Christ, the very son of God, which was to come, and this introduced the question of the certainty of Christ being the ambassador to the world from the Father in heaven. He also tells how he preached and with such force and popularity that all came to him and he baptised them to the remission of their sins.

As the people were wondering at the gracious words which fell from his lips, they were wondering where the Christ which was to come, and in answer to this query in their minds, he said: "There cometh one after me that is mightier than I, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down to unloose. I baptised you in water; but he shall baptise you in the holy spirit." While he was thus preaching, Jesus came along and John baptised him, and as Mark puts it, "coming straightway up out of the water he saw the heavens rent asunder and the spirit, as a dove, descending upon him and a voice out of heaven proclaiming: "Thou art my beloved son, in thee I am well pleased."

Jesus Heals the People
It early became the practice of Jesus to go to the synagogue, where he taught the people and healed them and told them of the coming of the kingdom of God, and while in a Jewish synagogue there was a man with an unclean spirit, which said, "Have you come to destroy us before our time?" Jesus said unto the unclean spirit, "Hold your peace and come out of him, and when the demon, for such it was, had torn the man, he came out of him. This caused a lot of wonderment among the people who said: "What new teaching is this? This man commandeth the unclean spirits and they obey him." Then when he had come out of the synagogue, they came to the home of Simon Peter and found the wife sick with a fever and when Christ took her by the hand and raised her up, the fever left her and she ministered unto them. Then again the unclean spirits came many people, for it had been noised about that he was there. Many who came were sick and crippled and possessed with demons, and he healed them. Nor did this Master of ocean and earth and skies ever do a thing half way, and when he healed those who came unto Him in their bodily ailments, he performed the further miracle of cleansing their souls and wiping their sins away. The golden text says that He went through the cities and villages of Judea, preaching the coming of the Kingdom of God.

An Ambassador of Peace
Jesus, the very Christ and Savior, came down from heaven and a place at the right hand of the Father, in order that he might save the world, and came as He did. He was an ambassador of peace from the Father in heaven to all sinners on this earth, and we are all sinners. And as He came, He did many things and for more reasons than one. In the first place he was the very spoken word of peace, love, long suffering, and that He came to bring light and healing. This was the one great—the first principle of His coming to this world, for as the well known text in the gospel of John (John 3: 16) says: "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Consequently, Jesus the Christ, the appointed one, was as John said in the beginning, the "Word"—for He was indeed the very word of the Father, and what He said and thought was indeed the very word of God. His acts betokened the very healing power of the God of all the universe, and also an everlasting healing.

As the reports which came on account of the wonderful things which Jesus did, were spread about of the things which He did, many people came unto him and he healed them; but still they lingered and when the evening was come he dismissed the people and went up into the mountain to pray with the Father alone, and allowed the disciples to depart for the other side of the sea, and after it was dark a storm came over the sea and the boat was filling with water, and they feared they would all drown, but just when the storm was at its worst, the Master came to them, walking on the waters, and they thought it was a spirit. They cried out in fear, but Jesus called to them, saying: "It is I, be not afraid."

Then did he call Peter to come unto him, walking on the water, and after they were all in the boat, he asked them why they were so fearful, and they answered Him, "Thou art indeed the very Son of God." This is the first recorded declaration of this statement and it might even be that it was Peter who wrote it. However, the declaration of Peter followed closely, when he said the solemn words: "Thou art indeed the Son of God." The people were all recognizing that Jesus was the one He represented himself to be—the true Savior of the world.
