CORN CROP IS MADE

The present rains will make the corn crop in Cass county, declared Herman Nave, crop reporter and game observer of Washington, D. C. Ears are beginning to shoot and the corn is tasseling. It has made an enormous growth, Mr. Nave says that he believed the corn was beyond the danger of firing, although there was some firing in the fields, on account of the hot and dry winds of last week. The stand of corn this year is much better than usual and the corn crop in the county should be heavy. The average crop of the county over a period of twenty years is twenty-six bushels an acre. Last year it ran about ten bushels better and there is a possibility of a forty bushel yield this year and he believes he will not fall short of his report. Threshing is about finished. A lot of wheat and oats were damaged, owing to the heavy rains of July, but the loss will be made up in the corn crop.

Farming Industry of Today Shown to be Vastly Changed

Farmer Once Used Most of What He Produced, Now Sells Ninety Per Cent

Storrs, Conn.—"Agriculture has undergone a revolution in the last 50 years that is comparable in scope and significance to the commercial revolutions of the sixteenth century and with the industrial revolution of 100 years ago," declared Prof. F. P. Weaver, in discussing the role of economics in agriculture at 1928 Farmers' Week at Connecticut Agriculture College. "This agricultural revolution has largely resulted from three main causes, the first of which is the development and use of farm machinery and of steam, gas and electric power for the farm," continued Professor Weaver. "Second, the great increase and development of transportation and manufacturing facilities for the Nation as a whole, and third, a revolution in the social customs of the American people.

"Over 90 per cent of the production of farms today is for sale, and this has changed entirely the economic position and the economic interests of the farmer. When farming was a home industry, overproduction was a blessing.

"Today a large crop often brings a smaller gross return than a small crop and the extra labor of handling the large crop is so poorly remunerated that frequently the large crop year means poverty in many farming sections.

"When the farmer consumed 90 per cent of all he produced, there was practically no marketing problem. The other 10 per cent was easily and readily disposed of to the town and city folk near by.

"Today, when 90 per cent of the products is for sale, production must be co-ordinated with market demands and many of these products must find a market thousands of miles from where they are produced.

"When agriculture was largely a home industry, one more farmer meant one more neighbor, one more individual to help maintain schools, churches and roads; one more to join in barn raisings, quilting parties and the neighborhood activities. Today one more farmer means one more competitor in the market for which the farm is operated.

"The farmer is still interested in good neighbors. He is keenly interested in seeing that the right type of manhood stays on the farm, but he is even more interested in a limited number of farm producers."

Card of Thanks

We desire to extend our sincere thanks to the many friends who so kindly ministered and assisted at the home during the last sickness of our beloved husband and father, Andrew Jackson Mead, and for the beautiful flowers and to those who sang at the funeral.—Monroe Mead, Mrs. Florence Van Horn, Mrs. Agnes Straw Mack Mead, Mrs. Letha Reeves.

TRIBUTE TO MRS. HARRIS

The Plattsmouth Woman's club wishes to extend to Mr. Harris and to all of the family of Olga Harris their sincerest sympathy, and to express their deepest sorrow at her passing.

Every chairman knew should they ask Mrs. Harris to give, or to work, they would meet with a happy response. It is so easy now that she is gone for each to say to the other, how much we loved and respected her.

The thought so persistently comes to each of us, why don't we tell our friends how much we love and respect and admire them while their hearts can be warmed by our words of appreciation.

Olga Harris was a good Christian woman, a true friend and cheer giving acquaintance.

"The dear one you loved so much
May not appear to sight;
Yet you may know, some way, some how
She's following her light.
You may not hear, you may not see
Her, just as yesterday;
Yet, still she may be right
at hand
To brush your tears away.
This dear one lives in God,
'tis true;
So, if you Godward gaze,
You'll find in God your loved one lives,
And joy will fill your days."

MISTAKE IN U. S. OIL AD

It was incorrectly stated in a U. S. Oil Company advertisement in this paper last week that W. O. Gillespie, manager of the U. S. Oil Station at Murdock was formerly with the Farmers Paint and Oil Company. Mr. Gillespie, who is a well known oil and gas man in this territory was not with the Farmers company. The U. S. Oil Company purchased the Murdock property from the Farmers company and added several improvements and made Mr. Gillespie its Murdock manager.

Tom Mix' Wife to Ask Divorce, Paper States

Cowboy Star Quoted as Confirming Rumor, but Desiring Reunion; 'House Always Open'

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 7.—Tom Mix, cowboy film star, and his wife Mrs. Victoria Forde Mix, have come to a parting of the martial trail and Mrs. Mix, who left here a month ago for Europe, is planning to obtain a Paris divorce, the Examiner says today.

Mr. Mix confirms the news of the projected divorce proceedings. It is declared.

"When she went away I told her I would agree to anything she wanted to do. Her happiness and that of our baby is mine. But every night I pray that she and Tomasina will come back to me," Mix is quoted as saying.

"This house is always open to them. It wouldn't make any difference if I was living in a tent. It would be their home if they wanted to come back."

Compared to the Beverly Hills mansion in which he now lives, Mix was "living in a tent" when he and Victoria Forde were married 10 years ago. That was before the western actor had won his fame.

They lived in a two-room house.

By the terms of a property settlement, arranged within the last year Mrs. Mix is said to have received approximately 450 thousand dollars. A year ago she made a European trip. She returned declaring rumor of a divorce were only "idle gossip."

RESUME OIL DRILLING

The residents of Nehawka and vicinity are once more agitated by the possibilities of oil being found in that locality and the drilling machinery that has been silent for several months is once more to take on activity. The drilling is undertaken by the Underwriters' Syndicate of Omaha.

C. E. Holt, experienced well driller, is in charge of operations. The well was spudded in last fall on the Pollard land about one mile straight west of Union, Neb. Work was abandoned when the well was down 70 feet because of disagreement among the men interested.

This summer a group of Omaha men took hold of the operations, re-organized the company and are prepared to go down as far as 5,000 feet in quest of oil and gas.

Mr. Holt has just returned from Oklahoma where he bought a large amount of pipe and casing for the well. The hole will be started 20 inches in diameter so as to permit deep drilling.

LADIES ASSIST IN WORK

The upholstery department in the local Burlington shops is one of the busiest places in that great institution and is in operation twenty-four hours a day in order to complete special orders for work received and which Superintendent Baird is having turned out with the usual Burlington speed and efficiency.

The work has caused the company to place a number of ladies in the department who are used in the work with the electric sewing machines, they working in several shifts and which take in the entire twenty-four hours, one force of ladies in addition to the regular working force handling the special work during the regular working hours while another force of the ladies work until 11:30 p. m. and then a force of the men are back on the job from midnight on to morning. The special orders will probably cover two months or possibly longer before they are completed.

TELEPHONE PROGRESS CONTINUOUS

The average time necessary for handling long distance telephone calls was reduced 25 per cent in 1927—from two minutes to one and one-half minutes. About 9 per cent of all calls are now handled without the subscriber leaving the telephone, as compared with 80 per cent during 1926.

An improvement in local service has been achieved by a reduction of five per cent in the number of calls that failed of completion on the first attempt.

The average time taken for installing telephone service was further reduced during 1927 by about half a day.

While the United States has the best telephone service in the world in efficiency of service and facilities the industry has never been content to rest on its laurels, but has a record of unwavering progress. Each year marks a new high point of telephone communication.

A TALENTED MUSICIAN

The residents of this section who have had the opportunity of hearing the musical offerings of Russell Jensen, of Chicago, who is here visiting at the home of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wehrlein, have been delighted with the wonderful talent that this young man has shown. Mr. Jensen was heard at the organ at the Parmelee theatre on Sunday night and his work was such as to stamp him as an unusually talented organist and he gave a very fine demonstration of the Warlitzer and one that allowed the organ the fullest scope of its possibilities.

The young man is a son of Dr. Jensen, for a great many years located at Newman Grove and his mother was for many years a resident here prior to her marriage, having been formerly Miss Rose Batten and since the death of the mother the family have resided at Chicago.
