Smith Endorses Principles of the Farm Relief Bill

Democratic Candidate Takes Strong Stand for Basis Features of McNary-Haugen Bill

Omaha, Sept. 18.—Governor Smith endorsed the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill in principle, without limiting himself to the exact mechanics of that controversial measure, twice vetoed by President Coolidge, in the opening speech of his presidential campaign here tonight.

"Various people have attempted to misrepresent and confuse my attitude with respect to the McNary-Haugen bill. I do not propose to leave the slightest doubt in anybody's mind on that subject," Smith declared.

"As I read the McNary-Haugen bill, its fundamental purpose is to establish an effective control of the sale of exportable surplus with the corn imposed upon the commodity benefited. For that principle the democratic platform squarely stands and for that principle I squarely stand. Mr. Hoover stands squarely opposed to this principle by which the farmer could set the benefit of the tariff. What remains of the McNary-Haugen bill is a mere matter of method, and I do not limit myself to the exact mechanics and methods embodied in that bill.

Pronouncement a Surprise.
"Here is a clean-cut issue, which the farmers and the voters of this country must decide. It remains but to work out the details by which this principle shall be put into effect, and I have pledged myself to name a non-partisan commission of farm leaders and students of the problem to work out these details.

"I shall make that appointment if I am elected, not when I take the oath of office as president, but immediately after election; and I pledge to the farmers and to the people of this country that no stone will be left unturned to give immediate and adequate farm relief, by legislation carrying into practice this definite principle for which my party and I stand.

"This course alone gives promise of relieving the farmers of this country from the complete ruin which threatens them today."

The democratic candidate's bold pronouncement in favor of the McNary-Haugen bill came somewhat as a surprise to the audience of farmers and those whose livelihood depends upon the farming, who packed the city auditorium here to hear him in his first campaign bid for the farm vote. He had indicated he would not go so far in this speech.

Every corner of the auditorium which accommodates 10,000 was filled eight thousand others stood outside and Smith spoke into a microphone that carried his voice to the far corners of the country on an extensive radio hookup.

Given Rousing Ovation.
The enthusiastic reception accorded him in his first campaign speech came as a climax to a boisterous welcome by thousands, not only from Omaha, but from several surrounding states, whenever he appeared and waved his brown derby.

The democratic candidate devoted a considerable portion of his speech to an attack upon the republican administration, which he declared had done nothing effective to aid agriculture, and specifically upon the program offered by Herbert Hoover, the republican candidate.

He called as witnesses of the republic failure to aid agriculture, two Nebraska leaders, Senator Norris and Governor McMullen.

"What does Mr. Hoover offer?" Smith asked. "First, the tariff. Everybody knows, and he knows himself that the tariff is not effective as to the basic cash crops, without a supplementary device to make it work."

"He offers inland waterways. Very good. The democratic party is in favor of inland waterways, just as strongly as the republican party, but I think it is only fair to say that nobody would offer that as an immediate remedy."

"The present condition needs a remedy at once, and not at a time far distant when the improvement of the inland waterways could be an accomplished fact. At best, were they with us today, they would not exert sufficient influence to solve the problem."

"He offers stabilization corporations. Stabilization corporations made up of voluntary associations of producers can no more stabilize agriculture than the banks of the country were able voluntarily to stabilize our financial system without the intervention of government in forming the federal reserve system."

"He suggests aid to co-operatives. I strongly believe in co-operative marketing. It is clearly all right—as far as it goes. I have encouraged it in my own state. In New York today we have over 1,000 co-operative marketing associations. With our major crops and with a device for taking care of the surplus at the cost of the commodity benefited co-operatives would be given a great opportunity for development."

"The fundamental fact is that none of these methods can function with respect to the major cash crops unless they are coupled with the control of the exportable surplus with the cost of lifting it out of the domestic market, assessed back on the crop benefited."

Real Crisis Looms.
"I repeat that the figures herein given by me as far back as the twenty-second of last August have neither been contradicted nor challenged."

"According to the figures, there is abundant reason for the recognition of this crisis in American agricultural life.

"Viewing it from another angle the reports of the United States department of agriculture show that during this period of depression, 10,000,000 people were driven from the farms with a net decrease, after deducting all who returned of 4,000,000 in the farm population of the nation. That means that 4,000,000 American citizens were compelled to give up their chosen vocation. It meant suffering and distress in millions of families, and drove the tillers of the soil into competition with the workers in the cities.

"It requires no very great power of imagination or understanding of the problem to be able to realize the disastrous effect on our whole social and economic fabric that must grow from a situation such as that.

Outlines Causes.
"There are definite causes and reasons for this catastrophe which, to the ordinary person, are easy of understanding."

"Twenty-five years ago wheat sold at approximately the same price that it brings today."

"Twenty-five years ago the farmer paid $45 for a mow, today it costs him $75. He paid $120 for a binder; he pays over $200 for the same implement today."

"Statistics indicate that there has been a decline in the purchasing power of farm products of 20 percent, as compared with the prewar period. What other line of business in the United States could stand that?

"The great fundamental trouble with the farm situation today lies in the undisputed fact that the farmer buys in a protected market, from the hat on his head to the shoes on his feet. For everything needed around the farm not produced by himself, he makes his contribution to the tariff system for protection of American industries, and when he produces the crop, he is compelled to sell it in an unprotected market, and drags down the price of the whole crop—State Journal.

ENTERTAINS TEACHERS
From Wednesday's Daily—
Yesterday at the noonday luncheon at the Barclay cafe the members of the Rotary club held their regular meeting in the attractive private dining room on the second floor.

The occasion was marked by the fact that the men teachers of the city schools were the guests of the Rotary and presented to the members of the club by Superintendent R. E. Bailey, a member of Rotary. The splendid group of young men members of the faculty number seven this year, the larger part being the teachers of last year but including one newcomer to the city.

The guests of the occasion were Cyril Sloan, R. Foster Patterson, J. V. Simons, W. D. McMahan, B. G. Woodward, Fred A. Rother and D. C. Thornton.

The Rotary also had the pleasure of a very interesting talk on a subject that is dear to the heart of every resident of this part of Nebraska and western Iowa—that of the Missouri river bridge and Henry A. Schneider of the Plattsmouth Bridge Co., gave the talk and showed the member the completed plans for the structure that it is hoped to have completed in 1929 and ready for service.

MANY ATTEND MEETING
From Wednesday's Daily—
The Plattsmouth delegation at the great Smith meeting at Omaha last evening was very large, this city having one of the largest representations of the outstate towns at the great gathering. There were men and women from all parts of the state at the gathering and from the most distant points in the state were to be found persons who had come to hear the message on relief to the farmers of the west. The Plattsmouth delegation included the grizzled veterans of the party, ladies and the more youthful voters, all eager to hear the message that the great New York governor was bringing to the west and its people.

VERY HAPPY EVENT
The home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Klemma on Monday was made much happier by the arrival there of a fine little son, the young man tipping the scales at eight pounds. The little one has been named Frank Louis, and he with the mother is doing very nicely. It is needless to say the occasion has brought the greatest of happiness to all of the relatives of the little man.
