Where will you celebrate?
 Only a short time to make up your mind.
 The rivers—Missouri and Platte—still on rampage.
 The farmers can now expect relief from the problems.
 Talk about your live towns, none of its size gets ahead of Plattsmouth.
 Lives of great men remind us we can sell our names for a testimonial ad.
 Some people persist in buying wild-cat stock as if their bank rolls had nine lives.
 How simple flood control will seem to Mr. Hoover after trying his hand on Congress.
 As a topic for discussion and statistics no one can deny that prohibition is a success.
 Plenty of amusement all this week. One of the best carnival companies on record will be here.
 When Plattsmouth makes up her mind to celebrate, she generally does it up in proper style.
 An old timer is one who can remember when breakfast was a meal instead of a mere formality.
 It's a great thing that Charlie Dawes is in London. At last we shall hear the London fogs properly described.
 We seem bound to have arguments with Great Britain over what we drink, whether it's tea or something stronger.

Plenty of rain all over the country.
 A civilization is not better than its juries.
 Germany will pay if it can be done inexpensively.
 Safety valves are applicable to other things besides steam boilers.
 It looks as if the federal reserve was in for a season of needed ventilation.
 The hardest job a kid faces is that of learning good manners without seeing any.
 Mrs. Hoover may be the "First lady of the land." But Mrs. Gann is the First Sister.
 A carnival company that takes twenty cars to haul its effects in no small concern.
 England has abolished the tax on tea, but it's too late now. Boston is set in her ways.
 The florists should be grateful for the pedestrian, whose family always is a prospective buyer.
 The objection to marrying a boy for his dad's money is that some other woman may marry the old man for it.
 In world negotiations Uncle Sam is content to be regarded as an easy creditor though perhaps not always an "easy mark."
 A sunshine spreader advises us that the way to pay your debts is when you have money. That's all right if the creditors would be more patient.

HEAVEN DEFINED BY AN EDITOR

From youth I have been taught that there is a heaven and that those who behave properly here on earth will go there. My notions about heaven have been revised a lot. Long ago I have abandoned the idea that heaven is a place where there is nothing to do except sit on a stone and play a harp or a saxophone. I think there will be good fishing spots where the banks are shady and there are no hidden brush piles on which to snag the lines, and where live minnows and fat worms may be picked off the bushes. Also I have revised my ideas about who will be there and expect to be greatly surprised in that respect. There are some people I just naturally do not like to be with, do not like to have in the same town, and I wonder just what heaven will be if these are there with full franchise privileges. Just how is a fellow going about making heavenly companions out of un congenial souls.

One of the great consolations of old age is to read a prediction that 50 years from now men and women will be dancing naked.

It's a funny thing, but you never hear of a Mediterranean fly or weevil of any sort going around putting the spinach crop on the blink.

OUR PROGRESS IN AVIATION

There is no denying the progress aviation is making in the United States, in passenger service, commercial use and mail transportation. It appears, though, according to a recent survey, that while we exceed as to the handling of the mails, we are behind considerably as to passenger transportation, Europe being ahead of us in this feature of aviation. But this deficiency will not long continue to our detriment, for sooner or later, likely sooner, our country will surpass all others in all the factors of air travel. The announcement late of a fast trip from coast to coast has given a fresh impetus to travel by air. This time is given as two nights and one day, so that a business man will be able to visit the eastern coast, spend a day on his errand and return by the middle of the week. This supposes nothing like the chapter of accidents will intervene. But these are hurried affairs, but if so desirous, the business man can leave the Pacific port say Saturday night, arrive in the eastern port Sunday night, arriving home Tuesday night, ready for Wednesday business.

The mail service via the air between the two oceans has been for months in successful operation, making mail deliveries in New York the third morning. This air postal service has been a success from the start, with the country being rapidly covered with a network of post air lines. In this feature of aviation the government acted wisely from the start, making contracts for the carrying of mails in privately-owned airships.

The government is spending large sums for aircraft intended for army and navy. In addition to former appropriations, last year congress appropriated a further sum of $16,500,000. So all around we are making material progress in aviation, and this will continue.

A Washington dispatch gives the following statement of the director of aeronautics of the department of commerce:

"The conclusion that European air service is still ahead of that in the United States, so far as passenger air travel is concerned but has no comparable mail transport establishment, has been reached by Clarence M. Young, director of aeronautics for the commerce department, who returned from a month's inspection of airways and air facilities in Europe.

"There are many points as to detail and operation in which European practice in commercial flying can furnish ideas for us," Mr. Young said. "Nevertheless, our network of airways and of aids to navigation and our effective night flying installation for mail transport has no comparable duplicate anywhere in the world.

"There is the demand there for passenger transport by air which has not yet been equaled here, but if that demand appears we are probably equipped to handle it in greater volume than the European air services now exhibit."

RELENTLESS BISHOP CONNON

We nominate for the Never-Let-Go Prize of 1929 James Cannon Jr., doctor of divinity; bishop, Methodist Episcopal Church, South; executive committee, World League Against Alcoholism. In the last presidential campaign, he played Achilles to Al Smith's Hector. He was a far more energetic campaigner than Mr. Hoover; in fact he was matched in zeal only by Mrs. Willebrandt. Al thought the Bishop was beaten at Houston. November saw the political corpus of Smith attached to Cannon's chariot, which was also decorated with such trophies as Virginia, Texas and North Carolina.

Most men would be content to rest on such a triumph. But the Bishop has again invaded the political field to rally the anti-Smith Democrats of Virginia against the possible nomination of a Smith Democrat at the gubernatorial primary next August. The Bishop refuses to countenance for Governor of Virginia any man who voted for Al Smith, or who accepted or followed his leadership in the presidential campaign. This, of course, would bar from the race such distinguished Virginians as Senator Glass, Governor Byrd and President Alderman of the University of Virginia.
