all right again. The lad is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Klemme. Mr. and Mrs. Alvan Bornemeier are enjoying a visit from Messrs. Ralph and Jasper Poppe, brothers of Mrs. Bornemeier and Mr. White, all from Eustis, were visiting and spending the Fourth and remainder of the week at the Bornemeier home as well as visiting with other friends. The young men made their trip via automobile and enjoyed every mile of it. It is said of a certain young man near and east of Murdock, that to get some romance out of his daily vocation which is herding cows on the highway to help clean it up as there is a good growth of weeds and grass there, he imagines himself a cowboy, of course not such as formally made the society of Murdock, before the coming of the midwest farmer.

With a new Plymouth, Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Cox drove from Oregon City, Washington, and as they were not used to traveling they took it easy and made the trip in nine and one half days. They enjoyed the trip very much but it was somewhat tiresome for Mrs. Cox, who is not overly strong. They are visiting here at Elmwood, and will expect to remain for about two months.

Vice President Says His Duties are Exacting

Climbing out "Lower Five" Assistant Executive Meets Friends in a Genial Manner.

Topeka, Kas.—Home for a rest for the first time since his inauguration, Vice President Charles Curtis Friday visited with his neighbors in the same genial way that won him warm friendships during his service of nearly a quarter of a century as United States senator from Kansas.

At an informal meeting with newspaper men in the red brick house he shares here with his sister, Mrs. Rome Colvin, and her husband, Mr. Curtis reviewed his experiences as presiding officer of the senate and said his duties as vice president gave him plenty to do, despite the belief in some quarters that the office is not as exacting as the east as an ordinary citizen, the vice president occupied a lower berth in a sleeping car. He was surprised that this should occasion comment.

"Why shouldn't the vice president ride in lower five?" he asked. "He is nothing but the people's servant. Why shouldn't he ride with the people?"

He finds liquor disappearing. Mr. Curtis said there is an erroneous impression abroad as to the duties of a vice president. "His duties are just what he wants to make them," he continued. "He may be idle if he chooses or he may be a public servant. I try to be a servant."

Many friends in Kansas, he said, felt he still was their senator and called upon him for various favors. "So I have the correspondence of a senator plus the correspondence of a vice president," he added.

Referring briefly to the "social war" which centered about his sister and official hostess, Mrs. Edward Gann, Mr. Curtis said there no longer was any issue, as the matter had been officially "laid out" for the administration. Vice President Curtis said he had found a tendency in several hosts and hostesses in Washington to show a spirit of observance of the prohibitory liquor laws by dispensing with the serving of liquors.—State Journal.

Howard University President, Son of Former Slave, Gets Spingarn Medal

Cleveland, O.—For bringing "rare and diverse gifts to the field of education and for his inspirational leadership," Dr. Mordcaai W. Johnson, first Negro president of Howard University, government-endowed Negro institution in Washington, D. C., was awarded the Spingarn medal at the final session of the twentieth annual conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The award is made annually to the person selected as having done most for the advancement of the Negro race during the year. Dr. Johnson, youthful looking, intently serious, was presented the medal by Dr. Charles E. Thwing, president of the Western Reserve University, Cleveland. Dr. Johnson's father was a slave in the South before the Civil War, and preacher of the Gospel. The son, starting as a poor boy, has become one of the noted Negro educators of the country.

Dr. Thwing, in presenting the medal, recalled his acquaintance with Oliver Otis Howard, founder of Howard University. He referred to Mr. Howard's strong desire to found an institution of learning that would stand as a monument to the Negro race.

He said Dr. Johnson was a "man of rare and diverse gifts. His education has been rich, diverse and distinctly formative. His work at Howard has attracted the attention of thinking men of all races."

It was with considerable trepidation that I went to Howard as its first Negro president," Dr. Johnson said. "This medal is the first positive indication that I have received that I am making progress."

103 BUT WHOOPS IT UP ON 4TH

Fairbury, July 5.—Alexander McNeal, an inmate of the Jefferson county farm, celebrated his 162d birthday on the Fourth of July as a guest at the home of Miss Rhoda Thompson, his friend here.

Mr. McNeal brought a display of fireworks with him with which to celebrate.

When Mr. McNeal was 100 Miss Thompson entertained in his honor with a sunset birthday party, which was attended by a large number of citizens. Today he is apparently in just good health as he was three years ago.

Happiness is the keynote of his character and perhaps one of the contributing factors of his longevity. His photographs are the pride of the K. M. Johnston, local photographer. He posed Thursday for his latest picture.

Henry Sanders and wife were in Omaha last evening where they spent the evening with friends and enjoyed the many points of interest in that city.

Artist Paints Wierd Fish at Bottom of Sea

Staff Member of Field Museum, Chicago, Works 35 Feet Under Water

Chicago.—With strangely colorful fish swimming to within a few inches of him, stopping to pose, and then swimming away, Leon L. Pray, staff artist of the Field Museum of Natural History, tells how he sat calmly on the floor of the ocean off the Bahamas and painted pictures which are to form the basis for the museum's newest piscatorial exhibit.

Down to the floor of the sea through a dark tube Mr. Pray had gone. Carefully, slowly, as if upon an unstable ladder, he had descended. Suddenly he emerged into glorious light. He had reached his undersea studio, 35 feet below the surface of the waters that cover the coral reefs of the Bahamas.

There, amid a scene, which he describes as a marine fairytland, Mr. Pray made 60 crayon sketches of rare fish and eight oil paintings of the sea. Soon these will be used by the museum as the basis for elaborate groups in its Hall of Fishes, showing the variously hued marine life among the corals.

Big Lens in Iron Ball

The deep-sea studio is the invention of E. Williamson, leader of the Field Museum-Williamson Submarine Expedition to the Bahamas. It is an iron ball with a big lens, thick enough to hold up under the powerful water pressure. A flexible tube connects it with a barge above.

The gloomy apartment is large enough to allow two artists to work at the same time and is constructed so that an abundance of fresh sea air is in constant circulation.

Time stood still, said Mr. Pray, when he set to work in this extraordinary studio. Hours slipped by in a daze of fascination at the marvels of the fish kingdom, seeing beauties that have rarely been brought to the surface or, in his opinion, even satisfactorily photographed, before Mr. Williamson's invention. Three, four hours passed, and he continued to forget that he was there.

"It was so still, so peaceful," he said. "There was no noise except the murmur of conches. Yet the slightest sound could penetrate the iron globe. The gloomiest case. The water was as invisible as air. As we looked through the window of the chamber we could watch thousands of living things moving about in beautiful rhythms, but we could see no water. Artists that depict water by water are really mistaken. When one is in it as we were, fish seem to move about in midair, as if suspended."

Fish "Model" Readily

"For a distance of 50 or 60 feet one could see clearly. Objects beyond that space seemed to be at a great distance, in a peculiar, blue-gray haze."

The artist had but little difficulty in getting the fish to "model" for him. By throwing out a little bait, the fish would come close to the window. In fact, the fish seemed as if some of them tried to swim right into the studio.

Even the sharks "posed" for the artist. He got a new conception of their beauty. The sinuous, graceful movement of the animals was a surprise to him. The sharks approached him with a motion, accompanied by their pilots, the remoras who always swim along with the larger fish, and together they seemed to be dancing, the remoras circling over the backs and under the bellies of the big fish.

Most beautiful of all were the angel fish, colored like flowers. The artist saw a huge golden yellow, shading into orange, to a deep purple running into very red. Other fish changed their very patterns from spots to bars like a kaleidoscope. Again their colors vanished. This was the appeal of the world created by the artist.

Mr. Pray took a month of continuous work to complete his sketches. He came away with much appreciation of the deep-sea creatures who live among the corals.

SEEK ALLEGED THIEF

Lexington, Neb.—Held here as a Fairmont bank robber suspect and later released, meanwhile being fined $100 for possession of liquor, a man giving the name of M. L. Wilcox of Cheyenne, Wyo., is again being sought, this time for car theft.

He was arrested when he walked into the Lexington State bank to exchange small bills for larger ones. The bank had been notified to hold anyone making such a request. Search revealed a bottle of liquor.

His identification apparently substantiated by articles in his grip, Wilcox was released. He sold a car which he had wrecked west of here, then bought a ticket for Detroit, and left. Shortly afterward a request was issued by officers to hold a man and car with the engine number found on the wrecked car.

KING FUAD CALLS AT GENEVA

Geneva, July 5.—King Fuad of Egypt, who came to Geneva to witness the festival of the River Throne, Friday paid an official visit to the League of Nations. In the absence of Sir Eric Drummond, secretarial general of the League, the official host was J. A. M. C. Avenol, deputy secretary general.

As a boy king Fuad attended a large school on the outskirts of Geneva, now a sumptuous hotel. It happens that the king and his suite are occupying rooms in which he studied years ago.

Peace Vote Stamp Winning Support in 20 Countries

Use on Letters to Be Taken as Supporting Movement to Abolish Warfare

St. Paul, Minn.—To permit the people of the world to cast a vote for peace by the purchase and use of a certain postage stamp is a movement that is meeting with favorable sentiment in high official circles in at least 20 countries, it is announced by J. W. Hamilton, founder and secretary of the World Peace Postage Association with offices here.

The plan is to induce governments to issue a special "peace ballot stamp" to be used for national and international postage in the same way as other authorized stamps. It is proposed that there be the regular issue and an issue bearing the peace design. Thus, the champions of the idea point out, the voluntary purchase of a peace stamp would constitute a vote for peace, the request for such a stamp and the use of it or mail indicating the purchaser's sentiments.

"In 1927 nearly 3,500,000,000 pieces of mail were exchanged between the nations," Mr. Hamilton points out, in a widely circulated pamphlet, "If each piece bore a peace ballot stamp, into the thought of sender and receiver there would come the message of peace and good will. Support the parlements of statesmen for peace with thousands from every class, and there will go out into the atmosphere of mankind a power to make war impossible."

TEACH TRUTH, PYRTLE PLEA

Atlanta, July 3.—The National Education association's 67th convention divided its time Wednesday between the teachers' problems and election of officers.

The two women nominees for the presidency—Miss E. Ruth Pyrtle, Lincoln, Neb., and Miss Effie MacGregor, Minneapolis, appeared in the role of convention speakers that delegates might know them better.

In an address, Miss Pyrtle "wondered" if the printed text was not overstressed, and urged instructors to teach the truth that international hatreds and prejudices might be abated.

Miss MacGregor declared teachers must perfect their world-wide organization, that the ultimate goal of truth in the schoolroom might be reached more quickly.

In the election, 11 vice presidents were voted on as well as directors and other officers. The ballot boxes were to be open until 6 p. m. when the county will be made.

William J. Bogan, Chicago school superintendent, asserted that selfishness and cynicism of adult society had frustrated the teacher's appeal to the idealism of youth, and advocated greater public co-operation for schools.

ASK TO QUASH INDICTMENT

Omaha—Federal Judge Woodrough will shortly hear arguments of attorneys representing Raymond E. Wilkinson, Guy Weir and Garfield Bruner, indicted in September, 1927, for mail fraud, asking that the indictment be quashed. The defendants, charged with land frauds at Ogallala, are alleged to have sold property and furnished the new owners title and deeds which were void because they never purchased the property from the real owners.

In asking that the indictment be quashed the defendants set forth that the government fails to "state the time or place where the alleged conspiracy or scheme to defraud was commenced," nor does it state how the offenses were completed.

Persons whom the trio are alleged to have defrauded are not mentioned, they charge, nor does the indictment state how the scheme was carried out. They further allege the indictment only sets forth conclusions and does not give essentials of the crime said to have been committed against the laws of the United States. Each of the defendants is at liberty under $5,000 bond.

ADVENTURER IS SIGHTED

Nahaq, Masem — The United States coast guard radio station here received a wireless report from the coast guard cutter Antietam Friday saying that David Turner and his sixteen foot pilot's tender, bound for Europe, were sighted thirty miles east of Cape Ann.

"Everything O. K." was the laconic description of young Turner's condition and progress on the perilous adventure picked up by the station here. Turner clinged out of Boston harbor, equipped with an outboard motor. He will stop at Halifax, N. S., to refuel and take on a stock of provisions sufficient to carry him over the long lap to Havre, France.

Stage Pitched Bun Battle on Sidney Street

Officers Force Stolen Car Into Ditch But Suspected Thieves Make Their Escape.

Sidney, July 3.—The lives of many Sidney residents were endangered late Tuesday night when Sheriff James M. Nelson and Nightwatchman Arthur Kenfield engaged in a gun battle with car thieves on the streets here. The pursuit extended through the main residence district after Kenfield had emptied a volley of shots into a rear tire, the men leaped from the car and made good their getaway in the Union Pacific yards.

Nelson and Kenfield had laid a carefully-planned trap for the thieves following word from Cheyenne, Wyo., authorities that the two men had slugged a taxi driver near Burns, Wyo., 85 miles west of here, and had headed this way. Sighting the car just before midnight Nelson started in pursuit.

Riddle Auto.

Because of parkways which line the center of the Sidney streets he was unable to crowd the stolen machine in the ditch. Kenfield riddled the stolen machine with bullets and brought the chase to an end when he leveled several shots at a rear tire.

Carl Jones, head watchman in the Sidney Union Pacific yards was notified immediately after the chase but was unable to apprehend the men.

Two suspects giving the names of V. E. Trullinger and Hugo Gustafson were taken into custody on a downtown business street Wednesday but were released later when the driver of the taxi failed to identify them.

Slugged With Jack.

Sheriff Walter E. Menke of Cheyenne who drove there Wednesday to aid in the identification of the suspects stated his belief that the men wanted are ex-servers from Fort Russell, Wyo. Because of the ruling which makes it impossible to report soldiers A. W. O. L. for three days it is unlikely that they will be apprehended if they are soldiers.

Dwight Fisher, driver of the taxi, stated that the men hired him to drive to Pine Bluffs, Wyo., 45 miles east
