Let everybody be good.
Never as long as the prohibition is on.
One woman never really knows another woman until their children quarrel.
A Boston man slapped his wife as she slept. Men are getting bolder and bolder.
A wife is sometimes known as a man's better half and sometimes as the whole thing.
Misery loves company, so the old saying says, but it is terribly hard on the company.
Both China and Russia are fighting a defensive war, so nobody can be blamed, after all.
It is mighty tough when a lady can't be sure of enough alimony to start her divorce suit.
A statement is made that the foreign element controls most of the big cities. Is it not a shame?
Complaining about your bad luck is simply broadcasting the information that you lack backbone.
Modesty: A woman's reluctance to undress in the locker room when there's a hole in one of her socks.
Other endurance records don't impress the man whose neighbors has a pup that gets lonesome at night.
For that matter, there is bribery and official corruption in the enforcement of the law against stealing.
There is one place in Paris that is so shocking the lady patrons wear shock-absorbers instead of evening gowns.
Talking about politics, there is one thing to be said in favor of the woman politician, she is honest in her efforts.
Some noted politicians claim that the women's clubs are the ruin of politics in the United States. Well, what of it?
A Red General who had been fighting White Russians has fallen into the Black Sea. That of course makes him an Elk.
The Soviet has abolished Sunday as a day of rest, says a contemporary. The motor car and golf did that over here quite a spell ago.
The eastern G. A. R. seems to be opposed to the Confederate and Union soldiers joining hands in unison, and a resolution was introduced at the encampment to that effect. Why?
There has been lots of vim displayed by our merchants in the past few months, and they have made Plattsmouth noted for its effort to please those who prefer to do business at home.
In the six months since he retired from the presidency, Mr. Coolidge has made $100,000 writing for magazines, which sum will keep the wolf away from the Coolidge door until the day of judgment and two or three eternities after.

"In time of peace prepare for war."
The United States' idea of reparations seems to be quite a healthy young plan.
This much can be said of fashion; it has lifted quite a burden off the family closetlines.
Wilhelm says that if he goes back to Germany he'll go back as kaiser. He must like Holland.
Too often a man thinks "being good to his old mother" means taking her side against his wife.
Some people get an education late in life and some have no children to teach them how to work.
Bernard Shaw defines Socialism as work for everybody. If the definition sticks, the cause is doomed.
The only thing a man tries as hard to keep as a woman does her school-girl complexion is his hair.
One would imagine from the way Senator Patterson of Missouri votes that he represented Patterson, N. J.
The flapper who was so dumb she thought an autobiography was some new kind of accessory for a motor car?
A champion golfer is a big man. But like the champion ringside fighters he got it in the neck some time ere he quits.
The only people who could refuse to hear the other side are those who know it all and those who don't want to learn.
The United States has paid more than $9,000,000,000 on its war debts. Just $16,000,000,000 more and the war will be ours.
Why not bring the whole matter above board and send a shipbuilders' delegation to the next naval disarmament conference?
Wonder why folks don't just write the chorus of songs and save all that ink and brain waste, since nobody sings the verse anyway.
The British critics who says America hasn't a true respect for antiquity must not have seen any burlesque choruses when he was over here.
Americanism: Frankly showing "lower class" people you are too proud to associate with them; wondering why they don't come to church.
New York officials, without saying much about prohibition, assert with emphasis that the average night club is a first rate argument for total abstinence.
Two Texans have started battling a croquet ball to New York. If they only would push it with their noses, chewing 100 sticks of gum at the same time that would be news.
Americans want the rest of the world to progress. And as the number in foreign places increases, the great web of communication wires that is bending the civilized world together grows in importance and possibilities for progress.

LEE AT WEST POINT

Secretary of War Good has approved the suggestion of Maj. Gen. William Smith, superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point, that "large and appropriate" portraits of Gen. Robert E. Lee and of Gen. P. G. T. Beauregard be hung in the cadet mess hall of the Military Academy. Both of these Confederate generals were superintendents of the Military Academy at West Point, and small pictures of each are already in place. Gen. Smith considers, however, that portraits of a size similar to those of other past superintendents should be substituted, and the work will be done at once at the expense of the Military Academy.
The Roanoke World-News, one of the leading papers of the Old Dominion, has this to say about the suggestion to which Secretary Good has given his approval:
"The fact that Gen. Lee, when a colonel of the United States army, was for some years superintendent of the Military Academy at West Point, is one that has been largely overlooked by his biographers. There would seem to be a field here for real historical study. It would be interesting to know what general officers in both armies were cadets at the academy under Lee, and how far the rather elderly Confederate commander had the opportunity of judging character and competence on the field of battle, by what he knew of their work as cadets at West Point."
"President Henry Louis Smith has rendered a fine service in his study of the career of Lee as president of Washington college at Lexington, in the five years that followed the war between the states. Dr. Smith shows that as a college executive, Lee was far in advance of his time, proposing to his board of visitors a school of business administration, and other forward steps such as the larger American universities have only adopted in very recent years. As Dr. Smith points out, Lee was deeply impressed with the more serious problems of southern reconstruction, and with preparation of the leaders for the building up of the New South."
"It would be interesting to know what policies he advocated, and what instruction methods he introduced while superintendent of the Military Academy at West Point, and to have a list of those who later achieved eminence in the armies on both sides of the Civil War, who were trained under him in the arts of war."

THE TARIFF IN TROUBLE

Adoption of the Simmons resolution making available to the Senate on demand the gains of tariff beneficiaries is a surprising turn in the tariff fight. The mightiest of all American political myths is in trouble.
For the first time in more than half a century the tariff barons are placed on the defensive. The Senate will require the Secretary of the Treasury to open the income records of the manufacturer and the importer, and what has been for so long secret will become a matter of public information. The tariff barons brought this reprisal upon themselves by trying to exploit farm relief in Mr. Hoover's special session of Congress. They induced the committees to devise a new tariff bill in which less than one-third of the items bear any relation to farm relief. The rest of it is a steal, characterized by opponents of the bill in political parties as the most colossal in the history of the country.
Adoption of the Simmons resolution was brought about by a coalition of Republicans and Democrats which shows how wide a gulf has opened between industry and agriculture. Twenty-one Republicans joined the Democrats in voting for the Simmons resolution, every one of them from the region west of the Alleghenies and most of them from the territory west of the Mississippi. Missouri alone of the great agricultural states failed to cast a vote for the resolution. Senator Patterson voted with the Republican regulars against it, and Senator Hawes was not present.
The significance of the vote is very great. The tariff is an artificial device easily exploited for the benefit of a limited segment of the population. It has been so in our country for half a century. The benefits of the tariff were never widely disseminated, but the American people were induced to believe they were. The plight to which agriculture came at last under such an obsession brought about the awakening which resulted in the Simmons resolution. It was not a matter of political faith, but of realization. The country at last realizes what the tariff is. As Abraham Lincoln said: "You cannot fool all the people all the time."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"UNITED STATES OF EUROPE"

So says the New York World: That the United States of America need have no qualms about giving their blessings to M. Briand's project for the study of a United States of Europe. This is the kind of idea of which it may be said that prophecy is safe and certain to be successful. It is like prophesying television and a regular trans-atlantic passenger air service. One must believe in them without necessarily knowing how to achieve them. The continent of Europe will some day have federal unity of some sort; the era of sharply separated national sovereignties which began about four hundred years ago will not last forever; though nobody today knows how to make a United States of Europe, it will somehow and sometime be made.
It will take a long while, and in the meantime there is no occasion for non-Europeans to conjure up nightmares about a Europe united against them. If the European nations had the political maturity and the political intelligence, the habit of give and take, the breadth of sympathy and enough common consciousness to unite politically and economically, they would have advanced so far beyond the existing standards of international morals that none of our present political theories would have any relevance. If the present Europe, with its Communists, its Fascists, its Imperialists, its Nationalists, could unite, it might be a threat to Asia or America. But a Europe is composed of Communists, Fascists, Imperialists and Nationalists cannot unite. It could not conceivably unite until it had purged itself of the very elements which in theory would make a united Europe dangerous.

MAKING PROGRESS

It is a good thing to be too optimistic, and the obstacles that lie in the pathway that leads toward complete, friendly agreement between the United States and England on naval matters are, admittedly, any. Yet friends of peace have a right to feel encouraged by the most recent developments.
When Ramsay MacDonald announced that the two governments had already reached agreement on 17 of the 2 points at issue, he did not clarify his statement by explaining what the three points are that are still the basis of disagreement. Nevertheless, the mere fact that negotiations are continuing and are reaching some sort of goal, is a cause for optimism.
It is only within the last few years that an attempt of the kind MacDonald and Hoover are now making would ever have been dreamed of. The mental attitude, in an affair of this kind, is all important; and the present attitude, on each side, is one that must be vastly depressing to the ingoes.

You may be a Democrat at heart but a Republican in name because of percentage, early association and environment. A Democrat (a genuine one) is one who believes in the doctrine that "the people should rule," not as a mob acting on the impulse of the moment, but on cool deliberation after much thought, who work for the interests of the many and not a special select few, and not special privileges.

Bare legs were banned at an outing of the Philadelphia hosiery workers and we hope they don't pick out this kind of weather for an outing of the overcoat makers.
